Rte. 3A parking problems fielded by planners

by Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The planning board has been busy fielding complaints from area residents about businesses on Rte. 3A. The board reviewed those complaints during their meeting Nov. 1.

Residents weren't happy when the contractor working on the parking lot at KoKo Island Restaurant removed the "green strip". Residents are also less than thrilled with the slow progress being made on the construction adjacent to Jonathan Livingston Square.

A green strip is the abutment separating the highway from business parking lots. The strip serves two distinct functions: it allows rain water to pass through to the aquifers; and it creates an orderly entrance and exit, thereby contributing to highway safety.

A green strip also lends itself to the creation of small pockets of green space in an otherwise unrelenting expanse of asphalt.

Peter and Billy Lee, owners of KoKo Island, came before the planning board for advice on how to satisfy the town, only to learn that neither they nor the the town had any control over the land in question. The green strip is owned and controlled by the state.

Despite that, the planning board was more than willing to provide some direction for the Lees.

"Whatever is state-owned land must go back to the way it was," advised board member Robert Sturdy. But Sturdy would like the Lees to go beyond merely replacing the wooden barriers and wood chips.

"I'm more concerned about aesthetics. I'd like to see a landscape artist look at it," he said.

Board member William Good suggested that the Lees sit down with the town's design review board to consider ways that the Lees might promote both safety and highway beautification.

Chairman Alfred Moore told the Lees the planning board would be willing to support a request to the zoning board of appeals to remove some of the front parking spaces in exchange for an expanded and landscaped green strip. Since the customers at KoKo Island park in the rear of the building, removal of some of the parking spaces from the front of the building would not be a problem.

The Lees agreed to meet with the design review board and return with the plans for the highway frontage.

Livingston Square's owner and developer Thomas Cummings also came before the board to respond to concerns about plans and progress for Jonathan Livingston Square.

"I get a lot of feedback from people in town saying 'My god! What is it going to look like?" said Chairman Alfred Moore.

According to Cummings, the new building has been completed. All other work has been contracted for and will be completed in due course. This includes a fence along the frontage and refacing the old building to match the new.

The board was reassured about the physical structure, but remained concerned about the legality of some of Cummings' tenants.

Tenants at issue are Queen Anne's News; David Hassan, a wooden sign carver; and the Master Herbalist, maker of fancy soaps. According to Robert Sturdy, all three are non-conforming because they are manufacturers or distributors, not retail businesses. Sturdy claimed that the businesses would not meet the hardship and uniqueness standards necessary to qualify for a variance.

Sturdy was particularly adamant that the board not break the rules and let the businesses stay if they did not legally qualify.

"The town has been sued and stung to the tune of $50,000 dollars for selective enforcement [of zoning regulations]", said Sturdy.

"If we have parts of the zoning by-laws the town doesn't want to enforce, then we have to go to Town Meeting to change them," he said.

The board also wrestled with the issue of when an attic is not an attic. This came up in connection with both Cohasset Plaza II and Dwyer's.

In both instances, owners built attics and basements in addition to the square footage approved.

Sturdy asked, "Can you build in anticipation of a variance?"

Matters may come to a head at Dwyer's relatively soon. The zoning board of appeals wrote a decision tying rental of the second story to the first floor. Planning board members characterized the decision as vague, but indicated that they felt Dwyer's had violated the ruling in renting a portion of the first floor to a dress shop.

The board will ask the building inspector Robert Egan and town counsel Richard Henderson to look into the legality of both building space in excess of the approved square footage and the tenants at Livingston Square and Dwyer's.

The board came back to the issue of parking lots in two separate issues.

Tedeschi Plaza has requested a waiver of the required number of parking spaces in order to install landscaped green spaces. According to town counsel, the board has the power to forgive one third of the required spaces. The board was also told that they could always require that the green spaces be reconverted to parking space if traffic patterns demanded it.

Board members were also concerned that Dwyer's did not have a sufficient number of regulation-sized parking spaces to fulfill zoning requirements. The board told the building inspector that they would pay the bill if Egan would have an engineer check out the parking lot of Dwyer's for compliance.

In other business:

- The board voted to tell the zoning board of appeals that not enough information and documentation was provided by William Barnes for them to approve his request to lease the old Cohasset Car Rental property at 138 Chief Justice Cushing Highway for use as an auto dealership.

Complaints that applications lack sufficient documentation is a continuing sore spot between the two boards.

- The public hearing on Carbone Lane was continued until Dec. 6 at 8 p.m. by request of Ross Engineering.

No Common commercials

Selectmen denied a request from Continental Cablevision Inc. to film commercials on Cohasset Common.

A representative of the company asked selectmen's permission to film a commercial on the town property, saying they could pay the town $500 for the use of the land.

Selectmen said they would charge a profit-making company, such as Continental Cablevision, a fee of $1,000 per day. Since the company was unable to pay that amount, selectmen voted to reject the request.

He just smiled and asked me for an application.

Two new liquor stores set for Rte. 3A

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

There will be two new liquor stores along a mile stretch of Rte. 3A following selectmen's vote to transfer two liquor licenses Monday night.

Cohasset Liquors Inc. will be allowed to transfer its package store license a few hundred feet away into the Tedeschi Plaza. Curtis Liquors plans to open a 13,500 square foot liquor store in a portion of the building formerly occupied by the Stop and Shop.

Further north on Rte. 3A, a new liquor store will be opening sometime this winter. After conferring in a closed session with town counsel, selectmen voted to transfer the liquor license from Cohasset Central Market to the 380 Enterprise. Developer Donald Staszko plans to operate a 3,800 square foot liquor store in the Cohasset Plaza now under construction.

Selectmen's vote comes after a ruling by the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission ruling which recommended that the board reverse their previous decision to deny the license transfer.

Although selectmen expressed their misgivings about that ruling, they voted to go along with the recommendation. The ABCC ruling does not supercede selectmen's authority in the matter, however, the applicant does have a right to appeal selectmen's final decision in superior court.

"I am very upset with the ABCC labeling our (original) decision (to deny the license transfer) as 'arbitrary and capricious,' " Selectman Diana Kornet said, noting that the board was opposed to transferring the license from a small grocery store to a large-scale liquor store.

"It had nothing to do with personalities involved," she said. "It was not capricious and we do not want the record to stand. If we concede to the ABCC, we are not accepting the label as arbitrary and capricious," she said, adding, "It is unfortunate that the local governing body does not have the right to reduce the number of licenses when the time seems appropriate. We are two over the limit for a town our size. We thought it was an appropriate time to reduce the number."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said simply, "I'm disgusted with all of it." Earlier, Laugelle had cast the only vote against transferring the Cohasset Liquors license to Curtis Liquors in Tedeschi Plaza, saying it would diminish the business of the two liquor store merchants in Cohasset Village.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that initially the board questioned the propriety of maintaining four liquor licenses in town. They were "extraordinarily surprised" to find the ABCC labeled their ruling against Cohasset Plaza as "arbitrary and capricious."

"There is not one iota of fact to support that contention," he stated, adding that it "seemed appropriate" to accept the state's finding, "but not the finding of arbirtary and capricious. There is no evidence whatsoever to support that."

The town's attorney said throughout the Sepetmber license hearing, selectmen gave the applicant every opportunity for a fair and impartial hearing. But, Henderson concluded, "what is best for the town in the long run," was for selectmen to concurr with the state's recommendation.

Selectmen Laugelle and Martha Gjesteby voted against the transfer. Earlier, Gjesteby asked selectmen to reaffirm their previous vote to deny the license transfer, despite the ABCC ruling.

"I feel we are accused of certains things by the ABCC and I feel the board should reaffirm its vote," she said.

But Town Counsel Henderson intervened, noting that he attended the meeting to advise the board on the matter.

At the same meeting, selectmen voted four-to-one to transfer the liquor license from Peter Logan, owner of Cohasset Liquors, to Richard D. Curtis, owner of Curtis Liquors. Curtis plans to operate a liquor store in the now-vacant store once occupied by Stop and Shop.

Selectman Kornet said she concurred "wholeheartedly" with several residents last week who expressed their support for the license transfer.

But Selectman Laugelle protested the move, saying a large liquor store on the state highway would diminish the business of two merchants in Cohasset Village

Committee meetings ruled illegal

Town counsel ruled this week that two meetings of town department supervisors and elected officials to discuss the town's financial plight behind closed doors was not legal under the state Open Meeting Law.

Atty. Richard Henderson advised selectmen that meetings of the planning group, which have not been posted nor opened to the public, should follow the procedures set forth by state law.

The advice followed a complaint filed late last week with the town clerk's office by Sohier Street resident Robert Davenport. He told Clerk Frances Marks that he was not allowed to enter a meeting of this group at town hall the previous week.

The meeting included representatives from several town committees, including selectmen, advisory, personnel, school committee, capital budget, and the treasurer/collector.

Jane Goedecke, chairman of the advisory committee, was present at both closed-door sessions. The committee, which has been referred to be selectman Burt Pratt as the "long range planning committee," never had an official title nor function, she said. "It was made of individuals - one or two people from a variety of departments and board," she said. At no time was there a quorum of any board, nor were there any votes cast by the group. Therefore, she believed the gathering did not fall under the jurisdiction of the Open Meeting Law which specifies the legal requirements of municipal meetings.

"We were getting together to exchange financial information about the town - to discuss mutual problems and ideas."

Goedecke said that following the meeting, she gave a full report of the discussions to the members of the advisory committee.

"If it was in violation of the law, I am very sorry," she said. "I did not plan to do anything to go against the law, although I don't understand why it is a violation. "

Selectman Diana Kornet, who was present along with Selectman Pratt at the two meetings, said she did not believe they were in violation of the law. She called the meetings "brainstorming sessions," and said they were scheduled to discuss in private "innovative and creative solutions to the (financial) mess we're (the town is) in."

She said the group intended to open the meetings to the public following a couple of closed sessions.

Town Clerk Marks said she was concerned with the group not posting a schedule of their meetings. "I did not have this group down as a board, but they are a body of elected and appointed people meeting to discuss town business, and to me, that constitutes a legal meeting that should be posted in this office," she said. As soon as Davenport filed the complaint, Marks requested a legal ruling on the matter from town counsel.

Committee to educate public on override

were not forbidden to join community groups specifically organized to educate the public about the override issues.

"We need to step forward if we believe a certain budget is absolutely necessary. And if we lose, so be it. But we can't take the position that we can't at least try," Kasperowicz said, adding that town departments must be thoroughly prepared to defend their budgets to the advisory committee. If the committee is convinced, "we'll go all the way down the path" to convince the voters, he said.

Town departments were warned by advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke to prepare fiscal 1991 budgets by December 15. Department heads will prepare two budgets - first, a budget that reflects no increase from this year's bottom line but includes employee step raises and a five percent cost of living increase; and second - a budget that includes a list of necessary items for the department which results in an increase over this year's total.

In addition, Goedecke cautioned, all departments should include smaller capital budget items within its proposed operational budget. Rather than leaving those expenses "out to float" in a debt exclusion override - a proposal which has a conclusive history of defeat by Cohasset voters, Goedecke suggested those items be included in the department's budget.

"This is horrible," she admitted to a roomful of frustrated town employees. "And I'm not trying to tell you that I think it's a way to run a town."

The one bright spot in an otherwise depressing discussion was word from the state house that the law may be altered to lessen the restrictions placed on debt exclusions. Goedecke said she was recently told that debt exclusions may be simplified to town meeting approval, without an election ballot.

"The big problem this year is educating the public," Goedecke said. "We are going to have a hard time letting people know what this means to them."

An uneducated voting public is the worst enemy of town officials who must defend their expenditures, she warned, suggesting that a series of public hearings be scheduled so residents can be updated on proposed budgets.

Selectman Pratt suggested that a committee of residents be formed to help educate the public about the town budget process. "We need this committee to talk with people, to do what needs to be done to educate the people better than we did the last two times," he said.

School committee member Ralph Kidder said providing residents with information about the override should not be confused with showing them the results of zero-based budgeting.

"The issue of override is a red flag issue. But if they don't understand what base budgeting means, that lessens our chance for an override," he said.

"There is so much emotion to an override," Kidder stated. "I hope we can make it clear to the town what a basebudget means to this town."

When Goedecke asked the town department supervisors what level of override they felt their neighbors would support, many were reluctant to guess.

"I think we have to go through an educational process. I'm pessimistic," Kasperowicz said. "We're going to have to go through all the dog and pony shows, but if they don't want to spend more than ten percent - that's all they'll vote, no matter how many charts and graphs."

A message of caution was delivered by one town committee member.

"People need to believe we're down to a government that is running effectively and efficiently," Roy Fitzsimmons warned. "If we say we need an override, they ask why. The question does come up with a lot of people. They feel a lot of departments should be reduced and they weren't, and they wouldn't go for another override."

Town officials agreed a lot of residents don't understand the operation of a municipal government. "They say a lot of fat is here and there, and it may not be true," Bliss said.

Selectmen question need for Curtis proposal

Selectmen want to know why the housing authority has submitted a new plan for the Curtis Estate, when the town is attempting to locate an Alzheimer's facility on the same site.

The attorney general's office recently ruled in favor of the town's proposal to locate an Alzheimer's day care center on the Jerusalem Road property. That proposal has been forwarded to the Probate Court for a final decision.

This week, however, selectmen received a state grant request from the housing authority to locate a 24-hour facility on the Curtis property for eight adult mentally handicapped residents. The plan was approved by the authority at its October 25 meeting, but it must be signed by selectmen.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon noted that all housing-related town committees had been invited to share their comments about the Alzheimer's facility. Everyone concluded at that time it was the best use, Doyon said.

"I do not recommend this," he said. "We have already committed ourselves to the Alzheimer's facility." Doyon believes the authority's plan to develop housing for the mentally handicapped at the former Trettis property is still "in the works," along with plans to construct 12 units of affordable housing on land once controlled by the school department.

"This is a great surprise to me. I thought they went along with the Alzheimer's facility," Selectman Burt Pratt said. Selectman Diana Kornet noted that to have two proposals competing for scarce state money would be counterproductive for the town.

"I think we need to have a dialogue why we are going in opposite directions," Kornet suggested. The board will ask the housing authority to discuss the proposal at next week's meeting.

Coalition goals

When the South Shore Coalition was formed three years ago, officials in the 10 communities welcomed the concept, for there were many issues which could be addressed on a regional level.

But Saturday, when representatives from the 10 communities — Cohasset, Duxbury Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth — met to discuss their focus for next year, they were unanimous:

There has been a lot of planning but very little action.

That is not to say that nothing has been accomplished.

The subcommittee working on solutions to disposing of solid waste — one of the biggest problems in all communities — has been progressing, albeit slowly.

The coalition is about to hire a consultant to develop a regional solid waste plan, but the lack of state funds may hold up the work.

In a related matter, however, the coalition for the past two years has been promoting a "reduce, recycle" program, encouraging businesses to rethink its packaging techniques and to use environmentally biodegradable products such as paper, rather than polystyrene, cups.

Another coalition subcommittee has been working on housing — and has been enlightening the South Shore about the need for affordable housing.

A video recently produced by Continental Cablevision and the coalition — which will be shared with all 10-member towns — is an invaluable educational tool to heighten community awareness.

A transportation subcommittee has been working toward finding ways to alleviate traffic on the South Shore — whether it be improvements along the Route 53 corridor, a widening of Route 3, subsidies for commuter buses and commuter boats.

An educational task force is exploring possibilities of sharing towns' resources among neighboring communities so that certain academic programs can continue rather than be dismantled for the lack of funds.

At last Saturday's forum, spokesmen from each community outlined issues they would like to see addressed — shared ambulance service and public safety functions, joint purchasing, solid waste, septage, recycling.

As communities' revenues from the federal and state government decline, it is only prudent to explore the cost effectiveness of regionalizing some services which would be mutually beneficial.

Without the coalition which encourages the communities not only to share ideas but to work together, towns will find themselves financially burdened, without guidance and unable to provide the services which residents are accustomed to and take for granted.

Continuing the funding for the coalition is a sound idea.

Hussey is against regents elimination

Letters

To the editor:

Eliminating the Board of Regents is fundamentally unsound!

Of all the areas in State Government where monies could be cut, the Board of Regents would be beyond the bounds of common sense. With a bloated state budget of 12 billion, to save approximately one-half of one percent of an administrative budget which sets standards for public higher education in our state is nothing short of promoting educational mediocrity. The Board of Regents helps to establish and maintain access to a quality college education for those who otherwise would be excluded. Keep the Board of Regents; keep quality higher education a priority; and keep the doors open to those students who would be left out.

By eliminating the Board of Regents we begin to erode the whole process of building a well educated society.

Emphasis on evacuation ridiculous

To the Editor:

Your editorial discussion of the ineptitude of public officials in their part of emergency response planning for the Pilgrim generating station probably is accurate and justified.

What is even more ridiculous is the emphasis given to evacuation, considering the multiple safeguards built into the plant. The requirements were dreamed up overreaction to the accident at T.M.I., under pressure from a Congress that felt impelled "to do something." Exhaustive studies and tests by the international scientific community since T.M.I. have shown that accidents at water reactors with full containment would have significant consequence to the public only in the most severe and unlikely accident; the non-consequences (to the public) at T.M.I. provides an example. The contraption at Chernobyl, lacking containment, did have serious consequences, but at least provides a sort of wild upper limit of what to expect, far beyond that to be anticipated from a U.S.-style water reactor. And their evacuation worked, despite primitive roads, few automobiles, no preplan, and nearly a day's delay in starting.

The emphasis on evacuation is misplaced, and planning should be concentrated on the area no more than a mile or so from the plant. Beyond that, what would be more useful is well-equipped mobile monitoring teams, primarily to allay public fears, but also to recommend ad-hoc sheltering or spot relocation which could be done with ordinary traffic control and local radio advisories. In my opinion, the needless exposure to traffic risks, under the current guidelines, isn't justified by the potential for harm from radiation. The guidelines should be tailored to better fit what is now understood about the progress and impact of the spectrum of possible accidents.

The most heated criticism of the above can be expected from those who know nothing about it except the propaganda.

Selectmen raise local license fees

Selectmen voted to raise the licenses issued by their office, although they are uncertain how much revenue will be generated from the increases.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon, who compiled the recommended list of rate hikes, said it could bring in an additional $4,000 to the town.

Among the licenses which will be hiked are the one-day liquor licenses granted to organizations for special one-day events. That fee was raised from $25 to $35.

Daniel Leahy, general manager of Kimball's By The Sea, voiced his continued objections to the board granting community organizations one-day liquor licenses for $35, when his business has been assessed $400 in additional annual fees. These organizations are competing with his business for the same functions, Leahy said, although his business must carry substantial insurance coverage and employ professional bartenders and waiters. Nonprofit community organizations carry none of this overhead, he noted.

"There is a place for one-day issuances," Leahy said, "but they can't be given out like popcorn. You should look more seriously at what you're giving out and not make it so easy to dispense alcohol. We are losing business by your doing this."

Leahy suggested that organizations which continually ask selectmen for one-day liquor licenses should apply for a club license, "or stop coming up here every other week for a one-day license."

Selectmen voted to increase the license fees, although they rejected a recommendation to create a $25 annual liquor license renewal fee. Fees that were increased include: common victualler, from $25 to $50; club all alcohol, from $650 to $750; innholders', from $1,200 to $1,400; restaurant beer and wine, from $600 to $800; package store, from $1,200 to $1,600; package store beer and wine, from $500 to $800; one-day liquor license, from $25 to $35; live entertainment, $100 to $150; Sunday live entertainment, $100 to $150; Sunday, nonlive entertainment, $10 to $20; processing state licenses, $5; transfer of alcohol license, $50; change in management, $50.

Regional solid waste is in jeopardy

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition's $175,000 grant to develop a model for handling solid waste on a regional level is in jeopardy, representatives from the 10 communities learned Saturday.

Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, who authored the bill in 1988 to create the master model which then would be used elsewhere in the state, is expected to meet with officials from the Executive Office of Administration and Finance this week to argue for the funds.

"This is an old commitment," James Cantwell, an aide to Golden, told coalition members.

"The senator had agreements with Frank Keefe," former secretary of Administration and Finance, Cantwell said.

And, Golden had elicited a commitment from Daniel Greenbaum, commissioner of the Department of Environmental Protection.

Even with the caps on state funding, Cantwell said, last July the senator was told $40,000 would be available.

"Most recently, the Department of Environmental Protection has been evaluating every grant and only releasing 20 percent of the funds," he continued.

"The new secretary of Administration and Finance, Ed Lashman, says there is no money beyond the 20 percent cap."

Cantwell said Lashman seems to respond to old bills and possible legal action.

"The senator wants a guarantee of 100 percent of the funds this year," said Cantwell.

Marshfield selectman Richard Levin pointed out that a considerable amount of the grant is to provide staffing of the coalition.

A sum of $120,000 has been budgeted for the consultant's work.

The coalition began working on the area's solid waste problem in April 1986, according to Scituate town engineer Paul Scott, chairman of the coalition's solid waste subcommittee.

The group reviewed the cost per ton in each community to dispose of solid waste and explored each town's future plans for handling the waste.

Last April, the subcommittee requested proposals, then interviewed several consultants in August before selecting Energy Systems Research Group of Boston to draw up the regional solid waste master plan.

David Soule, executive director of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, which serves 101 communities, including the 10 within the coalition, said his agency is prepared to sign the contract on behalf of the coalition.

Scott said officials in the 10 communities will be asked to provide existing documents and data to assist the consultants.

James Goldstein of ESRG said by requesting this information, the firm would save time and money for the project.

More importantly, it would help communities take stock of existing data gaps and apprise them of what information may be necessary to gather in the future.

The information requested will include bylaws and regulations affecting solid waste, waste management facilities within the community and those used outside the community and recent environmental assessments.

ESRG also would like to know what has been budgeted for the handling of solid waste for the past two years as well as what has been projected for the coming years.

The consultant would like to find out what, if any, local hazardous waste collection programs are in place and what commercial and industrial businesses are in the community.

Two other items include a list of port facilities suitable for barge traffic and loading and a rail freight map.

Master plans, land use and zoning plans, as well as maps, will be necessary.

Five towns delinquent in contributions

Five of the 10 member towns of the South Shore Coalition have not paid their dues for fiscal 1990, according to Marshfield selectman Richard Levin, coalition interim chairman.

They are Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield and Weymouth.

Town meetings have appropriated the funds, but the checks are not yet in the mail, he said.

Cohasset, Duxbury, Rockland and Scituate have made their contributions.

Weymouth appropriated $1,000 for the coalition, while the other towns appropriated $2,000.

Norwell provides office space to the coalition at its town hall instead of paying dues.

David Soule, executive director of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, which is the parent group of the coalition, said MAPC is providing some funds to the coalition, with the understanding that financial support would be phased out in five years.

This year's MAPC subsidy represents $13,500. In addition, personnel from MAPC's solid waste staff totals $10,000.

Non-personnel costs for the current year are budgeted at $3,500.

Levin said a new executive committee will be chosen Dec. 14, and the group will report in January what the community contributions should be for fiscal 1991.

Officers nominated for the coming year include Rebecca Freed, Norwell selectman, as chairman; Marisa Lago, Scituate planning board member, vice president; Richard Levin, clerk.

The two former chairmen, Hull selectman John Silva and Weymouth selectman Brian McDonald, also would serve on the executive committee.

Homestead protection limit increased

The limit of homestead protection has been increased from $150,000 to $200,000 in a new law signed by Gov. Michael Dukakis while the Silver Haired Legislators were meeting last week.

Sen. William Golden, who had filed the bill, made the announcement to the senior citizens during his keynote address.

"We owe much to our senior citizens," Golden said.

"They deserve to live secure in their homes and free from the fear that they can lose their homestead, their independence and their dignity."

The Homestead Protection Act provides protection for the homes of senior citizens over 65 and for mentally or physically disabled persons.

However, the homestead exemption does not apply to federal, state or local taxes or to first or second mortgages held by financial institutions.

In order to be protected by the law, citizens must apply for homestead protection prior to incurring the debts.

The declaration of homestead must be filed with the county Registry of Deeds.

The application requires a legal description of the property as contained in the deed and must be notarized.

A filing fee is required. The customary registration fee for the homestead protection is $10 for deeded property and $20 for registered land.

Golden filed the original Homestead Protection Act on behalf of the Silver Haired Legislature, and Massachusetts was the second state in the nation to provide homestead protection for older and disabled persons.

College kids have no right to tax-supported education

By Robert J. Flavell
Executive Editor

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child!

Shakespeare, King Lear

So now, in addition to every other interest group and faction, we have state college students marching on the State House, demanding more of the taxpayers' money to provide an education that every one of them is capable of earning by the sweat of his own brow.

Some have sought to defend the actions of these ingrates, as a matter of free speech. But the real problem here is the temerity of these students to demand free access to the taxpayers' wallets.

The problem lies in the audacity of these people to protest at all, biting the hand that feeds them. How do they think their school bills are paid? Certainly not through the niggardly amount they contribute. Who do they imagine pays the salaries of all the professors and instructors, and pays for the heat and light, and stocks the library, to say nothing of snow-plowing, upkeep and maintenance?

It's just dandy to say "the state" pays, and "state grants" and "state scholarships" foot the bills. Listen, brother, we are the state. L'etat c'est nous.. There is no disembodied entity, aside from the taxpayers of this Commonwealth who fork out the millions it costs to educate you. The principle of self-reliance has evidently been lost; all sense of gratitude is gone. We now have students demanding -- not requesting -- a higher education at the taxpayers' expense, as if they had a right to it.

One young sap even turned his venom on a powerful student advocate -- Paul Tsongas -- demanding he take a paycut so the ignorant heckler could continue to feed at the public trough. The moron was evidently unaware that Tsongas receives no salary for his thankless efforts on behalf of socialized education. Does this lad's education sound like a waste of our hard-earned money? Are we spending millions so this creature and his fellow ignorami can spit epithets at their superiors? It seems so.

Commentary

The people who work to keep this economy moving, the people who pay the bills, the people who make it possible for spoiled brats to spend years in college without paying their way, are sick and tired of all this whining. And before one of them takes crayon in hand to scrawl me a reminder of the First Amendment, let me reassure him that I am well aware of it. Yes, boys and girls, you have a right to free speech. You have no right, however, to expect the taxpayers to finance your education.

By what arrogance, do you demand an education from the taxpayers? By what hallucination do you think you can march on public institutions, decreeing that you be spoon-fed your college diploma at the expense or working stiffs who can't afford to educate their own kids? By what distorted view of justice do you think perfectly strong and healthy young people should be educated at the expense of their elders? By what right do you think you can extort public tribute so you and your pals can have a ride.

Want free speech? Fine. You pay for school. And pay for your professors, books, and lab fees, too. And while you're at it, pay for the buildings and parking lots and maintenance. Cut down on your grass and booze bills, and maybe you can attain the self-respect that comes from paying your own way through life.

This society has not been created, ladies and gentlemen, to provide you with partytime until you graduate. And it doesn't owe you an education, or a career, or a future. You earn those things, or you don't get them.

You want to march? You march yourself right down to the Seven-Eleven and fill out an employment application.

Vo-tech is an attractive alternative

To the Editor:

Eighth-graders in Cohasset (and other towns) will be planning soon for their high school years. South Shore Vocational-Technical High School in Hanover (also with an Abington campus) is a highly attractive option that offers seventeen programs to train specifically for a trade or for higher technical and academic education. VoTech graduates have received a full academic education plus training in their chosen trade. Each year 100 percent of those seeking jobs are hired at wage rates substantially higher than minimum. Also each year, about fifteen students graduate from Cohasset High and enter the work force without the skill training available at VoTech.

For many young people, a VoTech education is a good match for their aptitudes and abilities. VoTech students are well-motivated in their chosen trades and generally succeed as skilled, well-paid workers or as owners of their own businesses. Parents of eighth-graders are urged to consider VoTech. Call (1-871-4153) and visit there along with your child.

Food at Village Fair

Home-cooked food will be a main attraction at the Cohasset Village Fair to be held Saturday, Dec. 2.

'Charlie Brown' is set

On the Cohasset Town Hall stage Director Martha Gaffey Sawyer of Scituate is putting the Cohasset Dramatic Club cast through a concentrated rehearsal schedule for the Club's November 16, 17, 18 and 19 performances of the musical "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown."

Three members of the cast are Cohasset residents. Gayl Varallo has the female lead, Lucy—Charlie's friend who wants to be a Queen. Gayl most recently seen in the Club's presentations of "Sugar Babies" and "On Golden Pond." When not taking care of her family, or performing on stage, Gayl works as a free lance transcript editor.

Nilla Kingston, as Patty, has traveled considerably further than Gayl Varallo to reach the Cohasset stage. A native of Goteborg, Sweden, Nilla has lived in the United States for only seven years. Following a period in New York where she worked as a textile buyer and studied at the Fashion Institute of Technology, Nilla and her family moved to Cohasset.

The "intellectual" among Charlie's friends, Schroeder, is played by Joe Hochkeppel. Joe and his wife Molly have been active members of Curtain Call Theater in Braintree since 1976. He has had a variety of singing and acting roles in shows such as "Damn Yankees," "Gypsy," "Bells are Ringing," "Follies" and "Mame." Although a long-time resident of Cohasset, this will be Joe's first chance to perform on stage that has seen the likes of Humphrey Bogart and other theatrical stars.

The show times are 8 p.m. November 16, 17, and 18 and 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 19. The location is the Cohasset Town Hall on the Common. Tickets, at $8, are available at the door or in advance at the Cohasset Hardware Store in Cohasset Village.

Beethoven at Deer Hill

Last week, Dennis Kobray appeared at the Deer Hill School as Ludwig Von Beethoven. Dennis used to be a piano teacher. He played so well that his wife suggested he impersonate great composers. Bach, Chopin, Scott Joplin, Mozart and Beethoven are the great musicians that Dennis transforms himself into on stage. We witnessed Dennis play the role of Beethoven wearing a costume, playing his music and relating his life story. For the last four years, Dennis has performed as the famous musicians of the world.

We want to thank the P.S.O. for bringing Beethoven to our school.

Students to perform musical

"Bye, Bye Birdie," possibly one of the most popular musical comedys of all time, is coming to the Cohasset High School stage Nov. 10, 11 and 12.

A cast of over 40 students in grades 7 through 12 will help you "Put on a Happy Face" and find out "What's the Matter with Kids Today." Those songs and many others follow the story of fictitious rock star Conrad Birdie and his manager, fans and non-fans.

"Bye, Bye Birdie," concerns the romance of a composer-publisher-agent and his secretary plus the drafting of his rock 'n roll star into the Army. In a gigantic publicity stunt they all descend on a small Ohio town and proceed to turn it upside down. The results are hilarious and musically rewarding.

Performances will be Fri., Nov. 10, 8 p.m.; Sat., Nov. 11, 8 p.m.; and Sun., Nov. 12 at 3 p.m. Tickets are $4 and all seats are reserved. Call 383-9192 for tickets. They are also available at the door.

The following students are performing in the production: Albert Peterson, Ted Graham; Rose Alvarez, Michelle Massa; Teenagers: Helen, Maria Kierce; Nancy, Meka Laugelle; Alice, Keri Richards; Margie Ann, Cilla Goff; Penelope Ann, Karla Kennedy; Deborah Sue, Sarah Kirk; Suzie, Karen Kristiansen; Carl, Jody Kehoe; Harvey, Spencer Henderson; Fre die, Brian Pattison; Ursula Merkle, Elizabeth Deveney; Kim MacAfee, Julie Caristi/Meredith Hansen; Mrs. MacAfee, Maggie Moore; Mr. MacAfee, Matt Silvia; Sad Girl, Dawn Meehan; Mae Peterson, Kathy Smith; Reporters, Doug Schultz and Jody Kehoe; Conrad Birdie, Ray Jones; Conductor, Jeremy Begley; Mayor, Kerri Anglin; Mayor's Daughter (Amy), Alissa Sexton; Hugo Peaboey, Jon Maciel; Randolph MacAfee, Joe Andrade; Mrs. Merkle, Sarah Douglas; Mr. Johnson, Doug Schultz; Policeman, Earle Beshek; Gloria Rasputin, Carrie Ripley; TV Stage Manager, Julie Carish/Meredith Hansen; Charles F. Exploratory programs

South Shore Vocational Technical High School is offering a new program to the students of towns in the South Shore. Students who are currently in at least grade eight and 14 years of age or older are eligible to apply for the exploratory program.

The program will begin operation on Nov. 20 and will run through Feb. 8, 1990. South Shore received a grant to run the Sex Equity Occupational Opportunity program for four afternoons each week. Monday through Thursday form 3 to 5 p.m.

The purpose of the project, according to Guidance Counselor Barbara Ray, will be to eliminate obstacles and pressures for females and males considering entrance into non-traditional occupational training programs. Students will be provided an opportunity to explore a number of trade areas which traditionally enroll members of the opposite sex. During the first few weeks the program will focus on an exploratory period in selected trade areas.

Students will then select an occupational training program area for the remaining weeks for in-depth exploration and basic skills development. Transportation will be available for participants in the program who live in the regional towns. Students who live outside of the regional system are eligible to apply for the program.

Selection priority will be given to students who are interested in careers which are considered non-traditional for their sex. Further information may be obtained by contacting the Guidance Department at the local junior or senior high school or by contacting Barbara Ray or any members of the Guidance Department at South Shore at 871-4153.

Early dismissal Nov. 16

Afternoon kindergarten will be cancelled; lunch will be served. Dismissal will be at 12:55 p.m.

Boys' soccer goes to semifinals after win

Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

For the fourth straight year, the Cohasset High School boys soccer team earned another trip to the Division Three South semifinals.

As a result of their 2-0 victory over Fairhaven last Saturday, Cohasset (16-2-1) was scheduled to meet Dover-Sherborn, a 2-1 winner over Abington in quarterfinal round action, Nov. 8.

Senior forward Jim Reidy scored twice to lead the Skipper's attack.

Reidy opened the scoring a minute into the match by heading in a cross from Jason Cameron. The second goal came on a 25-yard direct free kick which he buried in the top left corner with 15 minutes remaining in regulation.

The Skippers outshot second-seeded Fairhaven (14-8) and got a strong game from Joel Reidy, who made eight stops to record his 11th shutout of the season (41st career).

Also playing well defensively was junior stopper Travis Coley.

Ed Reilly ran 12 yards for one touchdown and hit T.J. Bryne with a 48-yard screen pass later in the first-half, helping the Abington High School football team to its 21-0, South Shore League victory over Cohasset last Saturday at Milliken field.

Barker McFarlane's interception led to Abington's first score. Reilly, who finished six of nine passes for 109 yards, then completed two passes, setting up his touchdown run.

Cohasset (1-7 overall, 1-5 in the SSL Small Schools Division) came back with its best threat, getting a 31-yard pass from Noah Hill to Sean McCarthy, but a fumble at the Abington 15 killed the bid.

Buddy Fallon scored on a 10-yard run in the fourth quarter for the Green Wave (5-3 overall, 4-2 SSL), which fumbled on two other trips inside the Cohasset five.

Cohasset's Curt Ludlow rushed for 82 yards on 14 carries and caught three passes for 68 yards.

Cohasset will host East Boston this Saturday (11 a.m. starting time) in what could be the final home game ever for the Skipper football team. According to a published report in the November 5th Boston Sunday Globe, it was stated that Cohasset may be eliminating their varsity football program for next year altogether and, then coming back as either a varsity or as a junior varsity squad in 1991.

CHS Athletic Director Clark Chatterton was quoted as saying that the declining enrollment in the school system has really hurt.

Football coach Phil Pisano thinks the team should take a sabbatical for a year. But, he and Chatterton both agreed that they would like to see the Junior Varsity program to be retained if the school cannot field a varsity squad next year.

Of 32 boys scheduled to graduate in June, 17 play football and 11 play soccer. This year's graduating class will be the first to have fewer than 100 students.

Most of Cohasset's football opponents in the SSL are twice their size.

Thanksgiving Sunday: November 19...

One of my favorite Sundays is Thanksgiving Sunday. We are, again, happily planning a meal to be shared by all. I am hoping some of you will join me in preparing our modest feast. I'll need some help with the cooking on Saturday, Nov. 18 (i.e. cornbread, veggies). We had a great time in the kitchen last year, and I have a few volunteers willing to try again. And, as ususal, we will be letting you know who are the lucky people who get to bring the salad and those who bring dessert. Look for details in the weeks to come. If interested in lending a hand, let me know. Thanks.

—Madeline Olney 383-1492

I am looking for someone to help me with the Senior Citizen Luncheons on the fourth Tuesday of each month. It involves setting up tables and serving the meal, which is prepared at the high school, and takes only about two hours (from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.). If you are free and would like to join me, please call me at 383-6577. Thanks.

—Carol Martin

Women's Book Group...

The next meeting of the Women's Book Group will be on Tuesday, November 28 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Carol Martin. We will be reading Tracks ,by Louise Erdrich. Plan to join us!

Outreach News:

The first one will be the annual ingathering on November 19. Baskets will be located in the Meeting House vestibule and in the Parish House. Contributions of nonperishable food, toilet paper, soap, and kitchen supplies will be gladly accepted. Thank you in advance for your continued support.

The Outreach Committee will meet Wednesday, Nov. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the Parish House.

Anyone interested in volunteering some time at AIDS Action in Boston call Shirley Fitzgerald at 545-2952. Any amount of time would be welcomed.

St. Stephen's Church

The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, Rector

A SENSE OF WONDER —

We at St.Stephen's are privileged to have as our first program "STARLAB." STARLAB is a portable planetarium and a program developed by the Science Museum to help young and old appreciate the mystery and wonder of the universe. It is new and we are one of the first organizations to have it.

STARLAB will be at St.Stephen's Sunday, Nov. 19 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Church School and teachers will have the hour between 10 and 11 a.m. At 11:30 a.m., those attending church will attend. Sessions at 2, 3, and 4 will be open to church and community. Since seating is limited, all those wishing to participate should call the church office as soon as possible.

Participants will meet first in the Choir Room where they will be given handouts and prepared for the experience. After leaving STARLAB, the church will be open for those wishing to spend time in prayer or meditation.

SECOND EVENSONG IN DUXBURY

If you enjoyed the Evensong on the 29th, or were not able to attend and wish you had, taken an enjoyable drive down to Duxbury on November 12th at 6 p.m. for another service of Evensong with the choirs of St. Stephen's and St. John's Churches. St. John's Church in Duxbury is at 410 Washington Street. Our Rector, Clifford Cutler, will be the preacher.

BREAKFAST MEETING

Lay readers, chalice bearers, and lectors will meet for breakfast and training on Saturday, Nov. 18 at 8:30 a.m. in the Watermelon Room of the Parish House. If you would like to read lessons for worship on Sunday, please speak to the Rector.

CONFIRMATION CLASS

A Confirmation class for youth in grades 7 through 12 will begin on Sunday, Nov. 19 at 4 p.m. in the Bartow Room. This will be a chance to ask questions and explore issues of faith. The Rector will teach the class. Bishop David Birney will come to St. Stephen's for confirmation on Sunday, January 14.

CLASS FOR ADULTS

Adults who would like to confront issues of faith will meet on Sundays at 7 p.m. beginning Nov. 19. We will read through the book, We Are Theologians: Strengthening the People of the Episcopal Church, by Fredrica Thompsett. Our discussion, our prayer, our learning will all work together to make our Spirit strong. This is a chance for dialogue around matters of faith. Adults may then choose to be received into the Episcopal Church, to be confirmed, or to reaffirm their faith when Bishop Birney comes on January 14.

NEW FRIENDS

New Friends Program of the Social Service League of Cohasset acknowledges the feeling of loneliness we all experience at times and the need we all have for friendship and realized that because of age or physical reasons, it is not always possible to get out to meet people.

The primary purpose is to offer friendship through regular one-on-one visits. Visiting time is an opportunity for conversation — listening and sharing. Sometimes New Friends offer assistance with shopping or errands, share a meal at a restaurant or take part in some other recreational activity. It is truly a rewarding experience and we are constantly looking for new visitors (men and woman).

For further information, please contact Bobbie Fowle at 383-1820.

Children's sermon at LDS

"I Am a Child of God" will be the theme of the family worship hour Sunday Nov. 12 at 9 a.m. at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Hingham.

The Primary organization of close to 60 children from ages 3 to 12 will present a program of songs and talks, giving thanks to Heavenly Father for the gift of: family, scriptures, talents and teachers.

The children of the church meet each Sunday morning in Primary while the parents attend gospel oriented classes from 10:15 a.m. to noon.

Environmental report due by December . . .

tive," Polechronis stated.

"This is a very fast-growing region," he told the CAC members. "The MBTA, (Transportation Secretary Fred) Salvcucci and the governor are committed to this because it is a project that can't afford not to be done."

Once the final environmental review process is completed, Polechronis said the design will begin immediately and construction can be expected within a year to 14 months.

The MBTA must file a grant request with UMTA for the modernization funds which will be used to complete the project, he explained.

That request will not be filed until the state agency is in the process of completing the final environmental report.

The agreement is that the federal and state governments will evenly split the cost of the project, Polechronis said.

But he noted that state officials are committed to achieving some solution to the traffic woes which plague the South Shore.

ENVIRONMENTAL REPORT

There are seven chapters within the environmental report which should be ready for review some time in December. The CAC will have one month to review and comment on the document.

The membership decided last week not to take a vote on whether they recommend the document, but rather they will reserve their comments to the environmental issues contained in the study.

Following the release of the report, the committee will review the first three chapters in one meeting. The first three chapters will consider the purpose and need of the project, alternatives considered and the existing environment.

The fourth chapter will deal with the transportation impact. And chapter five will review the 15 different ennvironmental impacts —the "nuts and bolts" of the study, according to committee chairman Terry Fancher.

Issues such as wetlands, noise, traffic, historical considerations, aesthetics and air quality will be considered within that chapter. Chapter six will review the impact to historical structures within the region.

The CAC will schedule weekly meetings in order to accommodate a review of the entire draft document.

COMMITTEE VOTES

At the suggestion of Quincy resident Bernice Mader, the CAC voted to go on record as opposing any use of the Old Colony railroad for the shipment of hazardous freight material.

The membership decided to make the statement, although they have no binding authority in the matter.

Scituate representative Richard Bowen made the proposal, saying the CAC should be on the record as opposing the transportation of hazardous material on any of the three Old Colony lines.

"If we do not go on record regardless of whether it is in our perview, the question is, do we not think this issue is not important enough? I believe it is," Fancher commented.

The advisory committee also voted to urge the MBTA to alter its long-standing policy of bypassing residential land-takings.

The vote was taken after committee members listened to Rick Tobin of the L. Knife and Sons in Kingston.

The MBTA has proposed a statior. site along the Route 3 property where L. Knife and Sons, a beer distributor, is now located.

Tobin asked the CAC to support the company's effort to "co-exist" with the MBTA, emphasizing that residential landtaking be considered more seriously than relocating his company.

Polechronis acknowledged the MBTA has talked with abutting residents, but no serious effort has been made to solicit their opinion about purchasing their homes. The MBTA has a policy of "shunning" such land acquisitions, he said.

There are nine to 13 homes in that neighborhood which would be considered for purchase, he added.

Polechronis noted that when the MBTA talked with residents in the neighborhood, there was a mixed reaction to the MBTA commuter rail project.

"Some said they would be glad to get rid of L. Knife and the (expressway) off-ramp," he told the CAC.

Kingston selectmen recently voted to urge the MBTA to develop an alternative that would allow L. Knife and Sons to "co-exist" with the proposed railroad.

The advisory committee voted unanimously to support a change in the MBTA policy.

"I'd like to see some co-existence here," CAC member Bowen stated. "If L. Knife has to be moved, I'd like to see some arrangement so the company can remain in Kingston. It is important to the town and its tax base."

Tobin, general manager of the Kingston company, thanked the CAC for its support, noting that since 1981, the company has attempted to purchase several residential properties in that area. They just recently acquired an additional parcel, he said.

"Our top priority is to co-exist with commuter rail," he said.

Postal worker comfortable in retirement . . .

no need to starve, so about three or four of them quit," he recalls. That was in 1958.

The Postal Service salaries didn't get much better until after the national strike in 1970, he says. Bending to public pressure, then President Richard Nixon guaranteed a 14 percent raise for the striking workers, along with benefits such as life and health insurance.

Salvador was born at the Cohasset Hospital, where the Ripley Road Nursing Home is now located at the corner of Sohier Street and Ripley Road. His father, Francis J. Salvador, was born in the home at 50 Stockbridge Street which was built by his father who emigrated from the Azores in 1852.

Although Salvador has always been known by his nickname, Bussy, few people known of its origin.

"I was sick when I was born, for about three or four months," he says. "I weighed about four pounds, and my father was desperate for me to live. It was 1932 and he read about a new kind of doctor, a pediatrician, so he went to see a Dr. Fitzgerald in Quincy. We didn't have much money, but my father made an appointment. The doctor put me on a special diet of spinach and pablum. And when my parents asked him if I was going to live, he answered, 'He's going to be a buster.' And I was called Bussy ever since, although most people don't know why."

He recalls the days of his youth in Cohasset as happy and carefree, although he was always aware that money was scarce. The Salvadors did not own a car, and would often barter for food at the First National with owner Norman Card.

"Norman, who was a Cohasset selectman, had a green book he'd keep under the counter. My father would get the groceries and Mr. Card would add up all the items, one after another in his head, and my father would pay him at the end of the month. That was the way he carried many people in those days.," Salvador says.

"It was the same way with our oil. Everett Wheelwright owned Lincoln Brothers Oil in those days. His office was on Stagecoach Way, near where the auto body shop parking lot is today. He'd deliver the oil and my father would pay whenever we had the money.

"There were a lot of people in town just like my family," he continues. "We were poor but we never felt poor. My father was a very proud man and we got by. I guess it just made you tougher. As long as we had heat and food, then we were alright."

As a kid, he remembers his father standing by the stove while his brother and sister, his mother and he ate their dinner. One day he asked his mother about this strange tradition, and she said he was waiting to see if there was food left over after the children finished.

"We stuck together," Salvador says. "My family was very close - we were bound together through necessity. It makes you stronger."

Salvador's one disappointment in life - something he does not dwell on - is that he didn't graduate from college.

"If I had my life to do over again, I'd go to college. But as long as my kids go, that's the most important thing," he says.

Salvador and his wife, Patricia, have three daughters. Audrey is a 1988 graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, and Andrea is a senior at the school. Debra Ann is a freshman at Elizabeth Town College in Pennsylvania. They are all graduates of Marshfield High School.

Following Salvador's high school graduation, he began lobstering in Cohasset Harbor. Every morning he would ride his bicycle to his boat, bringing with him a two horsepower motor. When the Korean War started, his father, a World War I veteran, urged him to enlist. Salvador recalls the pride his father felt when he bid him farewell at South Station in Boston as he began his travels to the Sampson, N.Y. Air Force base.

In 1955, he left the Air Force, never setting foot in Korea. He got a job at D.S. Kennedy, an antenna manufacturer formerly located on King Street. At his father's urging, Salvador got a job at the Post Office and began his career at the local station.

He and Patricia married in 1965 and bought a new home in Marshfield, where his wife's cousins lived. It was only the second home on the street, he remembers, and most of the remaining lots were woods.

"We were very fortunate at the time," he says. "Walter Wheelwright (at Cohasset Savings) said to me, 'Bussy, if that house had been in Cohasset, it would be at least $10,000 more.' "

For a while, Salvador said it was hard to leave his native town. But he knew Marshfield was a good, solid community. "Besides," he says, "it wasn't such a bad commute to work."

When his mother died in 1978, Salvador had an opportunity to move back to the family home on Stockbridge Street. "But I could envision my mother in every room in that house. I didn't want to move back," he says.

Retirement from Postal Service . . .

And by now, the entire Salvador clan was comfortably settled into their home in Marshfield.

"I was a CCD teacher at St. Ann's By The Sea. The girls had lots of friends, so didn't my wife and I. None of us wanted to leave Marshfield," he says.

"This is a good community. I think the reason we liked it so much here was because of the town services. Although it has changed a little since Proposition 2 1/2, the school system has always been great. We have had a wonderful police and fire department and we have rubbish collection - something we never had in Cohasset."

Salvador decided to retire from the Postal Service at a young age, and hopefully recoup full benefits from his retirement fund. He has already visited the U.Mass. career center, and has taken an apptitude test. Although he took a few courses at Boston University many years ago, Salvador hopes to seriously pursue a college education this winter at U. Mass.

In the meantime, he is working on Frank Bellotti's gubernatorial campaign. As a Postal worker, Salvador was strictly prohibited from any association with a political campaign.

"He's (Bellotti) a good man. And since I could never help out with a campaign before, this will be fun for me," he says. "I always thought that restriction (by the Postal Service) was a violation of our freedom, but I never did anything about it."

In addition, Salvador will continue to help with the bills by getting another job.

He says, "I figure I'm moderately intelligent and I'm in good health. I exercise every day. I think I'm still employable." Salvador would like to work in sales - as long as it doesn't involve a long commute from Marshfield.

The Cohasset Post Office is planning a retirement party for Salvador. It will be held Saturday, Nov. 25 at the Biftheque Restaurant in Braintree. Anyone who is interested in attending should call the post office at 383-0318 or stop by for ticket information.

School committee budget . . .

among the junior high and senior high wings. The proposed writing lab would have 20 computers and four or five printers. Use of the computers would be built into the English curriculum.

McElroy, who also chose to serve as liaison to the recreation department and Milliken Field committee, plans to work closely with the committee in preparing and presenting the capital budget.

The capital budget wasn't the only money item on the agenda.

Supt. Hart told the committee that the advisory committee had asked that the school system submit a level-funded budget.

"And that includes salaries," Hart told the group.

Since salary increases have already been contracted for, the money for the increases must come out of other line items in an already tight budget.

Hart told the committee that it was highly unlikely that state aid would be forthcoming to bailout the school system.

"It seems each day the picture gets bleaker," said Hart.

As an indication of just how bleak things may get, Hart told them that there had been yet another round of cuts in the Horace Mann grant program.

Last year Cohasset received $11,000 to fund innovative projects designed by teachers; this year they were told that they would only get $2,800. The committee announced the awards at the last committee meeting. The superintendent announced that he had just been informed that the state was cutting the grant in half.

After absorbing that disappointment, the committee decided to prepare three separate budgets: one reflecting a level funding; another reflecting level services, otherwise known as a maintenance budget; and a third that would outline what Cohasset needs in order to maintain the standards that townspeople expect.

In other business, the committee:

- Accepted the resignation of Cynthia Lees, instrumental music teacher at Deer Hill, effective November 16, 1989.
- Appointed Steven Biagini to the position being vacated by Lees. Biagini is expected to begin teaching by the end of the week.
- Appointed Cynthia Hurley to the position of first grade teacher at Osgood School.
- Appointed Marilee Cantelmo as the part-time curriculum/enrichment coordinator.
- Appointed Thomas Kyrias to a position as food service worker.

Senior center news . . .

The Times Are Uncertain

It seems most appropriate that, as I write about the effects of our State budget, it has been raining all day, and it sure feels like "Stormy Weather" is here for our whole Commonwealth.

Since 1985, the Council On Aging has received an annual "Formula Grant" from the State, which has been in part helping to pay for the printing of our Vista: paying salaries of exercise instructors, purchase office furnishings and paying some misc. dues and conference costs.

Though the COA enjoyed steady increases in Formula Grants until 1989, we have just learned that this years grant will be reduced by 10%.

In addition to State Formula Grants, in the past years, we have also received State Discretionary Grant monies which we used to pay our OUTREACH WORKER (working one to one with Seniors.) Also, we received funding for our SHINE Coordinator's position. We have been notified that all money for the Discretionary Grants have been eliminated as of June 30. State funding also impacts us in a less direct way. With continued reductions in Home Care Services provided to our Seniors from South Shore Elder Services in Braintree, increased demands are now being played on our own Council and local services to help elders and their relatives arrange for homemakers, meals, transportation to medical appointments and Nursing Home placements, etc. Seniors are being forced to either wait longer or pay for private services which in most cases are beyond their budgets.

With all the rash comments about State Government, it's only fair to point out that we in Cohasset have enjoyed the services and benefits of programs provided by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs in Boston. In addition, at the State Office in Boston, we have only one full-time staff person responsible for the 351 Council On Agings across this Commonwealth. The State budget crisis is very real and it will take much careful analysis for all of us to decide on what we want from our State Government and what we wish to pay, as taxpapers, for much needed services.

In the past few weeks, we have compiled the following as to how the Council will be directly affected by the cutbacks.

(1) Formula grants—10% cuts directly.

(2) Discretionary grant-loss of 13,500 F.Y. '90 totally eliminated.

(3) Title III-C grant (Nutrition program) loss of home delivered meals for all new clients.

(4) Title III-B-Medical Transportation limited—no new clients.

(5) Nutrition Commodities-cutbacks—used to prepare community lunches.

(6) Fuel assistance—cut back by 2 months.

(7) South Shore Elder Services—homemaking services levels 4&5 eliminated—also waiting lists 3 to 4 months long.

Most important to date is now, the legislator is talking about removing the Secretary of Elder Affairs position and pulling it into the Dept. of Mental Health. With 13.5% of the Seniors in Massachusetts over 60 years of age, we as voters cannot let such a viable department serving such a great need to be eliminated. Please write to your legislator immediately!

PLEASE COME!!—Secretary Paul J. Lanzikos, Secretary of the Executive Office of Elder Affairs, and Ms. Bobbie Kamen, Ex. Director of Massachusetts Council On Aging will be Wigmore Pierson's guests on his Continental Cablevision T.V. program "Pierson to Person" on Thursday, November 16 from 8 to 9 p.m. on Channels 53 & 3. This program will be direct and live from the studio in North Scituate at 359 Gannett Rd., (Next to the Post Office.)

Interested members of the Council On Aging and community are all invited and urged to attend this program. Please call the Council's office for reservations and ride to the show on November 16. 383-9112. Services to elders living in the community are now at risk—please come and express your concerns to the Secretary and Bobbie. We hope to see you there!

Town counsel to review new election proposal

Town counsel will research the legality of an idea proposed by Selectman Burt Pratt which would create a contest for each of the five seats on the board of selectmen.

Currently, there are two seats on the board available each year, with only one seat available on the third year. Selectman Rocco Laugelle, an 11-year veteran of the board, has that third seat and has never run alongside another incumbent in an election, Pratt explained.

Since the board expanded to five members, there have been 11 different selectmen on the board. "To me this spells a lack of continuity," Pratt stated.

He has proposed that each seat be contested - two the first year, two the second, and one in the final year of the cycle. Candidates would have to announce their intention to run for a specific seat, thus each incumbent would be running on his own merit, not against another incumbent, Pratt explained Monday night.

Other than Laugelle, Pratt has little support from his board members for the proposal. Selectman Diana Kornet said she is so opposed to creating "confrontations," she would fight against it if the proposal reaches the floor of town meeting.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson is skeptical of the idea, saying he did not think it was legal to set up contests for specific seats when Cohasset is divided into voting precincts, but not voting wards.

"We are a single voting entity," he explained.

But Pratt noted that from 1904 until1985 when the board changed from three members to five, there were contests against specific incumbents because every year there would be a contest for one particular seat on the board.

Town counsel said he would have to research the legality of the proposal before allowing it to be submitted for the annual town meeting warrant.

Pratt emphasized that although he is running for re-election, this proposal would not affect his candidacy since it requires town meeting approval.

In a related matter, selectmen discussed the possibility of proposing a date change for the annual town meeting. But by a four-to-one vote, they rejected the idea.

It has been suggested by several residents that town meeting be moved back into March. Pratt noted that in the past, town meeting was held in late March, with town elections held the following Saturday.

In addition, many residents, including a former town moderator, have complained that the advisory committee's recommendations and the total dollar amounts of each article are no longer included in the annual town meeting warrant, Pratt said.

Selectman Kornet said moving the town meeting back into March may further hamper the town's ability to include those items in the warrant. Henderson concurred, noting that was the primary reason for moving the date into April.

And Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon noted that in the past, town meeting had the authority to approve articles along with the appropriations. With the advent of Proposition 2 1/2, that process is far more complicated, requiring special elections and override votes.

Coach sets soccer record straight

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

They just wanted to prove one thing. The Cohasset High School soccer team aren't losers, and they certainly aren't sore losers.

They're winners. And that is now an undisputed fact.

For a while this past weekend, the status of the South Sectional soccer tournament could have been summed up in the immortal words of Abbott and Costello, "Who's on first?"

Wrong sport perhaps, but a proper sentiment as tournament officials, school administrators and students throughout Medway and Cohasset wondered who really won Saturday's match.

There was little doubt, however, for Cohasset coach Dan Magner. Cohasset did not lose, although the score at the end of Saturday's match indicated otherwise.

For him, it was a simple issue. Time had run out before a Medway goal was scored, and therefore there was no winner - no loser by Saturday evening.

(See page 14)

The Cohasset High School Skippers' team and Coach Dan Magner are the new soccer champions of the South Sectional Soccer Tournament. Their sweet 2-1 victory over Medway was long in coming, after a triple overtime game Saturday which declared the Mustangs as winners. After an appeal, the game was replayed Monday, and the Skippers walked away as Division 3 champions. (Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)

Alcohol, drugs led to young man's decline

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Steve is a clean cut, good looking 22 year old with a wife and two kids. He should be on top of the world. Instead, he's been an inmate at the Plymouth County House of Correction for the past 14 months and could spend close to two more years behind bars.

He told Cohasset's alcohol and drug abuse committee at their Nov. 14 meeting that drugs and alcohol greased the skids that landed him in jail. When he was arrested, he had a $1900 a week cocaine habit that he supported by dealing and stealing.

Steve spoke to the committee as part of the jail's Project Impact. Project director Jacqueline Smith told the committee that her program uses volunteer inmates to inform school children and community groups about the real human cost of drug and alcohol abuse. Last year her program reached 19,000 students despite the fact that it receives no funding.

The committee was surprised to learn that Steve was never arrested for drug use although he began using drugs before he was 13. He started by smoking marijuana, but quickly added hash, acid, and amphetamines.

He began dealing drugs in high school so he could afford to use cocaine. At 14, he was thrown out of school for drug possession and dealing on school grounds. He continued dealing, but claims that his parents didn't know that he had a drug problem himself until he entered a drug treatment facility at 18.

Steve described a typical day before his arrest.

"I'd get up. Try to find something to drink--whiskey or vodka. My hands would be shaking so

Alzheimer's care ok'd for Curtis Estate

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

By a two-to-one margin, the health board voted Tuesday night to endorse the town's proposal to create an Alzheimer's treatment facility on the estate of the late George E. Curtis.

Although health board member Michael Sullivan supported the proposal presented by the Curtis Estate Action Committee, he would not commit himself to an official endorsement of the project. Sullivan remained unconvinced that predicted water usage in the daycare center will not overflow the capacity of the septic system.

Members of the action committee met with the board Tuesday night to review plans to develop an Alzheimer's Disease care facility on the Jerusalem Road property. The group is waiting to present its plans to the probate court in a fight to gain control from the property's trustees.

Meanwhile, the state attorney general has endorsed the plan, along with a long list of state and local health organizations, including the South Shore Visiting Nurse Assn. and South Shore Elder Services.

According to action committee chairman Joseph McElroy, the attorney general suggested the plans for the Alzheimer's facility be informally presented to appropriate town boards for their evaluation. If the plan receives the final endorsement from the probate court, the committee must then make formal presentations before the zoning board, conservation commission and the health board,

Teacher travels to ends of the earth to inform students

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Most teachers work hard preparing for the classes they teach. Jack Buckley just went a little farther than most-- 6,000 miles farther to be precise.

Buckley, history teacher and director of the alternative high school at Cohasset Junior/Senior High, teaches a unit on the Middle East. In the past, he has brought representatives of the Palestinian people and the Israeli government into his classroom to help his students understand what is happening. This summer he decided that wasn't enough.

"I wanted to go to see first hand, experience first hand the topics I'm teaching about," he said.

Buckley traveled to Israel, Jordan, and the occupied territories as part of a fact-finding tour group sponsored by the Pax World Foundation.

The foundation is devoted to peaceful resolution of conflicts. They try to send fact finding delegations to hostile parts of the world in the hope that participants will come back and speak about the experience.

There were 30 members in Buckley's group drawn from all over the United States. The majority were

Report address corrections

It has come to the attention of the Board of Assessors that during the conversion from the town computer to the assessors new computer, some mailing address changes have been lost.

Tax bills for 1990 have been mailed and if you have not received your 1990 Real Estate Tax Bill you are asked to call the Treasurer/Collectors office at 383-9900.

Search for site continues

Selectmen recommended Monday night that the director of the alternative school continue his search for land to be used for an Outward Bound-type program.

Jack Buckley, director of the alternative school, asked selectmen for permission to use about an acre of the 80-acre Wheelwright Park. He plans to utilize the area for the construction of a Ropes Course, an outdoor adventure program that challenges students while bolstering their confidence and trust.

Although selectmen endorsed the concept, they questioned whether Wheelwright Park would be the most appropriate place for the program. Selectman Burt Pratt noted that the park was given to the town and a deed limits the types of construction within the property.

"It is very restrictive as to what can be built there. As I recall, it's only a bandstand. Town counsel would have to research that, but it could be excluded on that technicality," Pratt said, noting that a Boy Scout camp in the park had been vandalized and then burned in the past.

He suggested that Buckley look at the 70 acres of school-controlled land which is located behind the Osgood School to Rte. 3A. That area is wooded and might be more suitable for the program, Pratt stated.

Construction of the Ropes Course, which Buckley figured would cost between $5,000 and $12,000, consists of a series of individual physical challenges in which the individual is dependent on assistance and guidance from the other participants.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby expressed concern about the liability of conducting a school program on town-owned land. Buckley noted that no special liability insurance coverage is necessary. School playgrounds are covered by the same type of insurance, he said, adding that the possibility of injuries occurring in this program are considerably less than in a school physical education class.

CHA Curtis bid withdrawn

The housing authority has withdrawn its grant application request to locate housing for mentally retarded adults on the former Curtis Estate.

The authority submitted an application to selectmen last week, stating they endorsed the idea of housing eight mentally retarded adults on a portion of the land known as the Curtis Estate.

Selectmen were bewildered by the request, noting that the housing authority had been part of the on-going discussion and plans to locate an Alzheimer's facility on the Jerusalem Road property. That plan, which received the endorsement of the state attorney general, will be going to probate court for a final verdict.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon told selectmen this week that the authority withdrew its application because "they are sensitive to the concerns expressed by the selectmen previously."

Selectman Diana Kornet said some of the authority members were not aware of the plans submitted by selectmen, although Selectman Burt Pratt noted that the housing authority had participated in the on-going discussions.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts said the confusion was also caused by poor communication among authority members.

'Noxious odors' complaint

Selectmen will hand deliver a letter to the health board, outlining their concerns about the "noxious odors" which many believe is coming from Cohasset Heights Ltd.

Selectman Burt Pratt said he and other members of the board have received several complaints from residents about the continuing odors along Rte. 3A in the vacinity of the commercial landfill. Water commissioner Ron Goodwin, who owns a business near there, told Pratt that he gets headaches from the smell, and landfill supervisors Joseph Laugelle, who lives near Cohasset Heights, is continually bothered by the odor, Pratt said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she logs the time and date when she is bothered by the smell.

"They allege it's coming from the landfill, and they wonder why their letters to the state have not borne fruit," he stated. "This past weekend was the worst ever, and we'll have to wait forever before the state will do something about it. We've got to attack this on a local level."

The state Department of Environmental Protection recently ruled that Area Four-A at the commercial landfill has been properly prepared and the dump may be expanded into that location. The newest dumping area at Cohasset Heights is restricted to the disposal of 250 tons of demolition debris per day. As previously required, CHL must complete groundwater and surface water monitoring reports, as well as daily tonnage reports for review by the state.

Pratt suggested that selectmen take a "direct approach" and ask owners John and Paul Barry to discuss the situation with selectmen. But the other members noted that the health board has local jurisdiction over the landfill operation, and complaints and concerns about Cohasset Heights should be resolved by that department. They will outline their concerns in a letter that will be sent immediately to that office.

Town Hall closed T-Day

The Cohasset Town Hall will be closed Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 24 and Friday, Nov. 25.

Selectmen review license fees

Selectmen tabled until next week a decision whether to increase license fees.

It was reported in last week's edition of the Cohasset Mariner that selectmen voted to increase the fees. They only reviewed a recommendation to raise the fees, but tabled any decision until this week.

After listening to a brief presentation by Kimball's By The Sea general manager Dan Leahy this week, selectmen decided to wait until next week to make a decision. Leahy, who opposed the "lack of fairness" in the amounts of the fee hikes proposed by the executive secretary last week, presented his version of a "sane approach" to the revenue problem.

These license increases, which include the annual common victualler's license, the all alcoholic club license, the innkeeper's license, the package store and entertainment licenses, were recommended for varying amounts by the executive secretary last week. It would raise about $4,425 in additional revenue for the town, Leahy calculated.

But according to Leahy's proposal presented to selectmen this week, the licenses would be increased in a more equitable manner and would net the town $4,885 in additional revenue, or a 37 percent increase over this year's rates.

Under his proposal, selectmen would increase most licenses by 25 percent. The greatest increase would be in the single-day alcoholic licenses - a 200 percent jump from $25 to $75, Leahy said. The local businessman outlined his objections to selectmen issuing these licenses, saying they are taking away business from legitimate businesses in town.

He also expressed concern with the town's liability if an incident should occurr after an organization is granted a single-day liquor license. According to his research, selectmen have granted 31 single-day licenses this year, many to non-profit organizations. He urged selectmen to consider the potential liability of issuing liquor licenses to organizations that sell liquor without sufficient liability coverage.

Leahy noted that according to his revised license schedule, the fees for operating his establishment will increase by $425 or 30 percent. Under the selectmen's proposal, his fees will jump by $345 or 25 percent.

He also proposed a third alternative which would increase fees in 1991 and again the following year. It would give local businesses time to prepare their budgets for future increases, he said, and would net the town more money by 1992.

Paul Logue, owner of Hugo's Restaurant, asked selectmen if the fees were to be increased for revenue purposes only. Selectman Diana Kornet noted that because the town is limited in the amount of money it can raise from taxation, it must find alternative methods of raising revenue.

Bill Roberts, owner of Roberts Food Mart on Rte. 3A and in Hanover, said that Hanover selectmen are also reviewing fee increases, but the Hanover proposal includes smaller rate hikes. He said the fees recommended by Cohasset's executive secretary were "a little too much" compared to Hanover's projected increases.

Selectmen thanked Leahy for his presentation and decided to review it before making any final decision on the license rate structure.

Endris named to recreation commission

An unexpired term on the recreation commission will be filled by Stephen Endris of Black Rock Road.

Three residents expressed an interest in filling the vacancy on the commission. Endris was named to the post by a combined vote of selectmen and the commission Monday night.

And although selectmen and the remaining commission members agreed the three candidates were qualified, there was only one vacancy to fill.

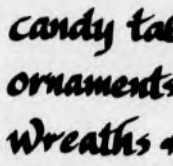
After interviewing two of the candidates, Endris and Beth Christoffel, the recreation commission caucused for several minutes and returned to the selectmen with a recommendation. Chairman Richard Barrows placed all three candidates' names in nomination, including Robert Beggan, who was not present for Monday night's interview but had expressed an interest in the position.

Endris won five votes, and Christoffel and Beggan each received two votes. Endris now becomes eligible to run for election as an incumbent when the term expires in April.

Endris is president of the Cohasset Soccer Club, has been a coach since 1984. He told selectmen and the commission he is interested in developing more community recreation programs for adults and the elderly within the community.

Selectmen and the commission members praised all three candidates, saying they were equally qualified. Selectman Diana Kornet noted that although Endris did not win every vote of the combined board, his candidacy was endorsed enthusiastically by all members.

However, Selectman Martha Gjesteby abstained from the vote, saying she preferred that the position remain vacant until the April election.



Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that selectmen and the commission have a legal obligation to fill the vacancy before the term expired.

Student efforts turn barren ground green

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

When former Cohasset High students Kristin Ellinger, Katie Horn, and Alison Riley looked out into the high school's central courtyard, they saw a barren place. They had a vision of something better, so they adopted the courtyard as their senior project.

The girls approached professional landscaper Betsy Hoopes for help in turning the grassy enclosure into a garden spot. Together they created a blueprint for a planting design that would bring color and interest into the courtyard on a year-round basis.

But in a tight budget, there's no money for flower bulbs, much less for trees and wooden benches. As beautiful as the vision was, it seemed destined to remain a mirage.

But this story has a happy ending. Mary Ellen Gallagher, principal at the high school, approached the Parent School Organization and the Community Garden Club for help. The project caught the imagination of the garden club and the creative financing genius of the PSO.

The concept is simple and familiar. The courtyard was rechristened "A Garden for Honoring". Groups and individuals who want to memorialize or honor a person, place, or thing are welcome to donate to the courtyard fund. With each donation, another portion of the courtyard design is implemented in honor of the designee.

So far, the courtyard has seen the installation of wooden benches in memory of Billy Wilmore by his parents and the planting of a pear tree as a memorial to Dennis Reardon, who died in Vietnam, by his classmates as part of their reunion activities. Most recently, the Cohasset Teacher's Association planted ten dozen blue and white hyacinth bulbs to honor Christine Burke. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset and the PSO planted a weeping cherry and the Rotary Club donated a pear tree. The bulb garden and trees were planted as part of an official tree dedication and bulb planting held on Nov. 8.

Now when the courtyard is the setting for dances, art displays, and other school functions, they will not be taking place in what was described as a bleak and barren setting. The vision of a garden full of trees, flowers and birds is becoming a reality.

Anyone may contribute to the garden. Regina Schultz, chairman of the special committee of the Community Garden Club that oversees the project, has hopes that student organizations like the drama club and the student council and other civic groups will make donations. But her greatest wish is that people will remember it for happy occasions, such as birthdays,anniversaries, graduations and special accomplishments so the garden will be a celebration of student life and accomplishment in Cohasset.

Alzheimer's care . . .

McElroy explained.

In his presentation to the health board, architect Chia Ming Tze said the expected water flows will not exceed the existing septic system's 440 gallon limit. According to his plans, 600 Jerusalem Road, an existing four-bedroom home, will be restored to accommodate 18 to 24 daycare patients, with an attached office area. He calculated that the water usage for the center, including patients and a small office staff, will be far less than the total capacity.

Tze said the center will not be used on a fulltime basis, except on weekends when a maximum of four patients will be housed at the facility. In addition, water conservation measures will be practiced and water-saving devices will be installed, he said.

The architect's calculations were based on figures used for water usage at schools. During the week, approximately 412 gallons of water will be used. During the weekends, with four patients and a staff member, a total of 440 gallons will be used, Tze estimated.

There will not be bathing facilities at the center and the only meals prepared on the site will be lunch.

Tze said endorsement by town boards is a necessary step in the town's legal fight to obtain final approval of the plans. "The trustees like saying this is not feasible or financially possible, or that the board of health can't approve it," he said.

"The approval sought here is a key to the success of the plan," added proponent William Weeks. "We hope to tell the court that the interested (town) boards are in support."

"What we are proposing will not greatly increase the flow or change in use," Tze explained.

Health board chairman William Baird noted that no increase in water usage will be tolerated unless the septic system is upgraded, which, he noted, "can't be done" on the ledge-filled Jerusalem Road property.

"So we need to be presented with a use that is equal to or less than what is presently there," Baird said. If the Alzheimer's facility was overtaxing the septic system, the board would have the right to reduce the number of patients allowed in the facility, he added.

Sullivan remained the only health board member unconvinced that the current septic system will be adequate to serve the needs of an Alzheimer's facility. He requested more factual data, not simply estimates, regarding the projected water usage at the site.

"This is a very sensitive area there. To allow any increase in the flow would be unacceptable environmentally," Sullivan said. "I understand the need (for a facility) but we can't make an exception when this area is environmentally sensitive and in two weeks a citizen wants to make change on his property and we say no." He urged the board to monitor the water flow in order to collect factual information.

"Have it metered today and see if the trend is more than 440 gallons. If there is something to correct, then drop the number of patients or staff - make changes," he suggested.

Baird resisted the suggestion, saying the architect provided the board with reasonable, professional calculations. "And I believe mental health is as important as seeing that a leaching field works," he said. "I think I can endorse this plan because it's good for the health of the community. It provides a better use than a four-bedroom home."

The architect argued that nothing secretive is being planned for the site - all plans have been openly discussed at public meetings with various town boards, he said. And if there was to be a change in those plans, it would have to be reviewed again. "It's all very public," Tze stated.

Although Sullivan said he would support the plan only if the board required the water metering, the other two members voted to endorse the project without condition.

Tsongas predicts grim future for education

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Former U.S. Senator Paul Tsongas, chairman of the State Board of Regents, and Ronald Zooleck, director of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, debated the crisis in education in front of about 400 local residents, school and government officials last week.

The debate focused on society's lack of commitment to public education, and what that means to the business community and the future of the state and the nation as a whole.

But those who attended the South Shore Education Task Force open forum at Scituate High School, came away with only one clear message — you're on your own.

"There will be no help for education from the state at least within the next year and a half," said State Senator William Golden (D-Weymouth), who moderated the discussion. "FY'91 will be the real fiscal crunch."

The message came at a time when school departments in the ten member towns — Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth — face FY'91 budget cuts of upwards of $1/2 million each without increased state aid or Prop. 2-1/2 overrides.

SCHOOLS GO DOWN THE DRAIN

"We really need an override," said Edward McVinney of the Hanover school committee member. "I hate to say that but with no new taxes the school system is going down the drain."

The purpose of the open forum was to bring the business community, and local government and school officials together for an exchange of views and solutions to the current state of public education, according to Scituate Supt. Dr. John P. Kulevich, who chairs the task force.

And the goals of the South Shore Education Task force, which was formed 1-1/2 years ago, are to focus on the teaching profession, funding education, and to garner public support for education, Golden said.

Zooleck told the audience that without increased funds schools will have to be more innovative.

"I do represent business," said Zooleck. "And I don't apologize for that.

"We don't make education better by simply throwing money at it," he said. Zooleck said the business community needed to understand how the money is being spent and how decisions are being made.

Tsongas painted a grim picture of the future.

Paul Tsongas

"Those who would cut back in education have no understanding whatever that we are in economic decline," Tsongas said. "Education is the nuclear weapon in the economic war we face."

Tsongas said the U.S. is becoming a colony of Japan. He said the only road back was through education.

"Education allows us to have the quality of work force to allow us to compete in the long term," he said.

Tsongas said, "First we must save the system and then we must introduce serious reform."

Tsongas said the government of the state was in shambles.

"My absolute view is that the government of the state is at the point where it cannot govern," said Tsongas. "The only intervening force possible to save education is the business community."

Zooleck agreed that business and education are dependent on one another.

Zooleck said, "We will sit, we will discuss, we will support — that is as long as we understand."

DISCUSSION TOO BROAD

Jane Goedecke, chairman of the advisory committee in Cohasset, expressed frustration that the discussion was so broad.

"We're concerned with the local level now — we face a crisis next week, next year. What can we expect from the state soon, other than studies or theoretical approach?" she asked.

Tsongas appealed for support for a one percent hike in the state sales tax, which would raise $350-$400 million a year and be earmarked for education. Twenty-five percent would go to higher education, and 75 percent for K-12, he said.

Tsongas said that signatures are needed to put the one percent sales tax hike on the ballot for next November.

Former Hanover selectman Janet O'Brien said she was disturbed that Zooleck had no concept of the cuts that had already taken place in local education.

"We haven't done a good job at educating him what the situation really is at the local level," she said.

Scituate school committee member Terence Gorman said the answer was not asking business to infuse millions of dollars directly into the school systems.

TOO SHORT FUSED

Gorman said the goals of business are often too short fused. He said change in education has to be measured over several years, not one or two.

"The key is getting business to come in and see our problems, letting them help us define our problems and formulate a solution," he said.

Golden opened the debate with a chilling description of where education is headed.

"Can't you feel it happening? Can't you feel it slipping away?" Golden asked the audience.

"We'll be told that in this decade we lost America," he aid. "We're becoming a second and third rate power and our children are facing a bleak future knowing they will not have a better life than their parents."

Golden said that the general public has to focus on education.

"Too often today, unless it's a parent or grand parent, the focus on education has been indifference or at best removed concern," he said.

"Our goal is to broaden support for public education and broaden concern."

"THE BIG PROBLEM WITH MOST CREDIT CARDS IS THE BIG NUMBERS THEY CHARGE."

One of our checking account customers came in the other day to ask about our credit cards.

He said he had a Visa® from Citibank and a MasterCard®

from Chase Manhattan. And that he was tired of paying these big-city rates. (In his case, the annual interest was over $600.)

I showed him that if he switched to Rockland Trust, he'd be saving himself over $100.

Then I looked up at him and asked: "Wouldn't that money be doing you a lot more good if it were in your checking account?"

He just smiled and asked me for an application.

around town

❒ The Cohasset Dramatic Club's first musical on the Town Hall stage, "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown," will be performed on Nov. 16, 17, 18 and 19. A live orchestra under the direction of Sal Bartoloti of Hingham will be on hand for this off Broadway production. Sal is undoubtedly the dean of South Shore Musical Comedy music directors. He estimates that he has directed over 200 shows for groups. Martha Sawyer is the show's director, and "likes the music. It is truly charming. And in contrast to many shows the music complements the text extremely well. Clark Gesner is the man behind the music and the lyrics. The show was named one of the top ten on the New York Stage in 1967. The show is about an average day in the life of Charlie Brown and deals with the openness of the children in their dealings with each other. Thus it appeals to all age groups. Show time is 8:00 and 2:00 on Sunday November 19. Tickets may be purchased at the door or at the Cohasset Hardware Store. For further info call 383-1871. Whatever you do, don't miss this production!

❒ We certainly want to send get well wishes Joe Nedrow's way, and hope that he recouperates fast! We are sure that if you follow doctor's orders, you will! It would be impossible to list all of the things he has done for our town and our youth, most know anyway! Why not send him a get well message, we'll bet he'd love it!

❒ Congratulations go to Erin Powell, who made the Dean's List for the Spring semester at San Diego State University. Erin really did an outstanding job, and everyone is so proud of her, especially Mom! Keep up your good work, Erin.

❒ The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is a busy group these days, and you will be thrilled when you hear the reason. They have put together their house tour! It will be held on December 7, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. with a boutique and a tea (there will be samples from the new cookbook at the tea). The price is $20 for a day of fun. Seven houses will be beautifully decorated for the tour! The added incentive is the cooking from "Cohasset Entertains Encore" . . . call 383-9341 or 383-9270 for more details.

George and Lois Rumney of Weymouth were honored last week at a very special anniversary celebration. The couple had dinner at Hugo's Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor - the place where they were married 50 years ago. Family and friends hosted the special anniversary dinner.

❒ If you have missed the yellow Eastern Edison Trucks "around town" there is a reason. They have closed the office in Cohasset, and relocated in Hanover . . . we hear there was even a limo involved in the move . . .

❒ The Pyles who still own their home in Cohasset on Atlantic Avenue are now doing well in Rancho Santa Fe, Ca outside of San Diego.

Katie who is a Junior was elected to the Homecoming Court of LaJolla Country Day School and is #1 on the Varsity tennis team. She was selected All Coastal All League, Div. 1A! Greg a ninth grader, is scooring touchdowns on the J.V. football team, but still misses his buddies, especially Nathan Fiore!

❒ Krista and Laura Kuhn are seeing a lot of the City Lights! Boston that is! They are both attending college in Boston, and love it! The girls are able to spend time together when their busy schedules allow it, and are having a super time. They will probably be able to show Mom and Dad (Lizzie and Jim) a few spots that they have never heard of! Don't forget to keep up the great grades girls!

❒ Matthew and Todd Woodbury were in town recently, to accept the highest awards that the Scouts receive. Todd Woodbury, who is 17, was awarded a Medal of Merit from the National Boy Scouts of America (he saved his Dad's life by performing the Heimlich maneuver on him); and Matthew, who is 14, received the Eagle Award (he studied Lyme disease and went on to teach the students and teachers in Hingham about it). Although the family now lives in New Canaan, Conn., they will always be part of Cohasset, and we salute them!

❒ If you go up to Cushing Plaza looking for Fleuri and Pat, Mimi, Hope and Denise to help you, you'll have to hop back in the car and head to Hingham Square! Fleuri is opening its doors this week (yesterday to be exact), located in the brand new Pride Building on South Street. The ladies have worked hard to make the store attractive and appealing, and are there to help you make your house into your dream home. Be sure to stop in!

❒ Cheerleading Coach Ruthann Sargent and her group of cheerleaders were so pleased with the participation in the Cheering Clinic that they held recently that they are planning to hold another! It will be held in the Sullivan Gym, will cost $12, and will be open to girls in grades 4-8. Contact Ruthann if you are interested at 545-3058.

members of the clergy. Three other teachers and one journalist rounded out the delegation.

The group spent two weeks traveling throughout the area, beginning in Jordan.

"Each day was very full. We went from 8 a.m. to sometimes as late as 8 to 10 p.m.," recalled Buckley.

The group met with Israeli and Palestinian officials, were briefed by the U.S. consulate, and talked with ordinary citizens.

"We were fed the standard lines-- propaganda really-- by both high ranking Israelis and Palestinians," said Buckley.

"The higher up we went, the more intransigent they appeared, the more they claimed to be in the right."

He did say that Palestinians, across the board, were more willing to admit to past mistakes and speak about peaceful resolution.

"I came away with a much better understanding of the international aspects and diplomatic initiatives," Buckley said. "I have a greater insight now."

Buckley felt he gained the most from talking to the ordinary people he met in the refugee camps.

"I was amazed at the number who spoke English. They were very friendly. I never once felt threatened."

Palestinians are not always as open since Israeli security forces sometimes pose as tourists in an attempt to secure information.

Buckley was not able to meet as many Israeli youth as Palestinians. He found the Palestinian teens to be optimistic.

"They seemed to be very proud and determined," Buckley said.

The parents, however, are fearful of what the future holds for their children.

"A generation of Palestinians are being raised in a climate of violence and also without schools," he warned.

Most of the schools have been closed on the West Bank and Gaza Strip so often and for such long periods of time that the students are losing skills, he said.

The Israeli government has also declared home tutoring illegal.

Buckley believes that the source of continuing hostility and conflict is not so much political as it is personal.

"It comes down to some basic human flaws," Buckley said. He finds the root causes in prejudice and stereotypes and generations of hostility and animosity on both sides.

"All had a story of a loved one being killed."

If things are going to change, if the conflict is to end, it can only come about if those attitudes change, Buckey contends.

Buckley said that the Palestinians see the U.S. as an enabler for Israeli policies since we are the financial source that allows Israel to carry out those policies.

"In the refugee camps, many Palestinian kids showed us bullets, tear gas cannisters, and other weapons marked 'Made in U.S.A.'. It is very clear for them to see that the bullets that kill Palestinians come from the U.S."

In spite of that, Buckley found that they didn't bear the U.S. any hostility.

"They don't look at us as oppressors, but as liberators. They hope that their voices will cause the U.S. to do more to further the peace process," he said.

Although Buckley would clearly like the U.S. to do more to end the impasse, he readily says that the U.S. cannot dictate terms to Israel.

"Israeli security concerns are legitimate. A U.S. imposed solution will not work," Buckley said.

Neither does he believe that the U.S. should shrink from the task of bringing both sides to the negotiating table for fear of being called anti-semitic.

Although the difficulties in securing a peaceful solution may seem insurmountable, Buckley is not deterred.

"I'm optimistic," he said. "I tend to be optimistic. We met many people-- Israeli and Palestinian-- devoted to a peaceful solution."

In Israel, Buckley met members of Yesh G'vul, reserve soldiers who refuse to serve in the occupied territories. Like our conscientious objectors, they serve in ways that don't require them to bear arms against their fellow human beings.

Buckley learned about the vocal group of professional soldiers and politicians who believe that Israel's security will be enhanced by ending the occupation.

Unfortunately, says Buckley, nothing is simple in the Middle East.

One recent study demonstrated the conundrum.

In that study, the author contends that Israel and the Palestinians in the occupied territories have become totally dependent on one another. The conclusion drawn in the report was that Israel was playing a zero sum game. It could not detach itself from the West Bank because of a dependence on the water and religious significance of the area, but Israelis could only annex the territory and absorb the Palestinian people at the cost of becoming a minority in their own country because of the disparity in birthrates for the two groups.

The best hope for the future Buckley found was the example set at Nevi Shalom, a kibbutz-styled school outside Jerusalem.

Nevi Shalom, which means "The New Peace", is communally owned by both Israelis and Palestinians. The school is meant to be a living example of the ability of Israelis and Palestinians to live together peacefully.

Small groups of students come to the school for two week stays. The hope is that they will return to their home communities and bear witness to the possibility of peace. Approximately 500 - 600 students come to Nevi Shalom each year.

It is a fragile hope.

Buckley intends to strengthen it. He is bringing representatives from the Palestinian and Israeli peace movement to Cohasset High.

Amos Gvirtz is an Israeli pacifist active with the International Fellowship of Reconciliation and its local affiliate, Israelis and Palestinians for Nonviolence. A member of War Resisters International, Gvirtz is one of a handful of Israelis to have been accorded the status of conscientious objector.

Nafez Assailey is acting director of the Palestinian Center for the Study of Nonviolence in East Jerusalem. He is a pacifist working with both Israelis and Palestinians.

The two will be at Cohasset Junior/Senior High on Nov. 20. The program begins at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the general public.

No smoking, please

This week marks the 13th annual "Great American Smokeout," a campaign created by the American Cancer Society to educate the public about the dangers of smoking.

The ultimate goal is to have a smoke-free society.

It is estimated there are 50 million smokers in the United States alone.

We have heard the arguments:

Smoking is the leading preventable cause of death in the United States, and it is not only harmful to smokers but also dangerous to anyone exposed to second-hand smoke.

But here are some facts:

- Each year approximately 390,000 Americans die from smoking-related diseases, including lung cancer, emphysema and heart disease.
- Some 155,000 Americans will die from lung cancer in 1989.
- Cigarette smoking is responsible for more than 90 percent of lung cancer cases in men and more than 70 percent in women.
- Lung cancer has surpassed breast cancer as the leading cause of cancer death in American women.
- Nicotine, the chief chemical constituent in tobacco, is more addictive than either cocaine or heroin.
- More than half of all adult smokers were hooked on cigarettes by age 13.
- Seven percent of all sixth graders in Massachusetts today are addicted to nicotine.
- The average age at which smokers in Massachusetts start the habit is 10.
- Of all the Massachusetts residents now under age 29, more than 80,000 of them will be killed eventually by tobacco, according to the state Department of Public Health.
- 90 percent of lifetime smokers started by the time they had graduated from high school.
- Children are more susceptible to nicotine addiction than adults because their lung tissues are less well developed, and they absorb a larger amount of nicotine in relation to body weight.
- Although the overall percentage of Americans who smoke has been gradually declining, the percentage of teenage girls who smoke is on the rise.
- In Massachusets, 31 percent of all high school senior girls smoke, compared to 24 percent of senior boys.

If these numbers don't mean anything to you, we urge you to visit a hospital where men and women of all ages struggle to breathe with their smoke-damaged lungs.

On sunny days, they wrap themselves up in their bathrobes to go outside, carrying miniature oxygen tanks with them to be sure they can breathe.

Today is not too late to stop the harm to yourself, your loved ones, your co-workers by stomping out that cigarette.

You truly will feel a lot better.

'Cohasset needs a leash law'

Letters

To the Editor:

I was saddened by the recent loss of a cat which I had for thirteen years. I returned home one day from work to find her immobilized with a wound in her stomach. A trip to the veterinary included an X-ray which showed that her spine had been severed in two, leaving her back legs paralyzed. The stomach wound was evidence that indicated that she had been grabbed by an intruding dog and shaken until her back was broken. I was obligated to have my long-time, faithful companion euthanized.

This small cat followed me around the yard as I did chores much like a dog and slept at the foot of my bed at night.

Cohasset should have and needs a leash law to prevent unwelcome dogs from intruding onto others property. The present law puts the onus on the one being imposed upon to request that a dog owner keep his dog off the property. This does not make sense if one is to remain a good neighbor. Many homeowners in Cohasset do not appreciate the droppings left.

I am sure someone is saying to himself, well, if she loves her cat, why doesn't she keep her cat in the house where it will be safe? The answer is one of philosophy. The writer believes that her cat should have the freedom to remain in its own yard. I live at the end of a dead end street next to some woods. And there are all kinds of trees in the yard where a cat could find safety if needed. Unfortunately, in my case, my cat was sleeping next to a spirea bush and was most likely surprised by the intruding dog. She was unwise to be in such a location, to be sure.

I would like to see an article at the next town meeting requiring all dogs to be leashed when off their own property. I trust that others would like to see that dog owners be held responsible for their pets and considerate of their friends and neighbors.

Sincerely yours,
Elizabeth Warren

'Recycling saves valuable resources'

The Recycling Committee plans a weekly article on RECYCLING to appear in this space.

The following article is contributed by Recycling Committee member Alix White.

Do you take money out of your pocket and burn it? If you are not recycling the items on the following list, you are buring tax dollars. Cohasset will be spending approximately $60 per ton to send trash to the SEMASS incinerator in Rochester, Massachusetts. Are you throwing your tax dollars into the incinerator by not recycling? Newsprint, cardboard, glass and aluminum are valuable resources.

Presently, the Recycling-Transfer Facility is able to recycle 75 percent of your waste. That is a lot of trash NOT to burn.

Recyclables include:

Newspapers, place newspapers in brown paper bags or in corrugated cardboard boxes. No plastic bags, please.

Corrugated cardboard, mix in with newspapers in same bin. Please flatten cardboard.

Glass, clear, green and brown glass. Rinse glass and remove caps, metal rings and plastic pourers; remove metallic wraps on wine bottles.

Returnables, place returnable bottles and cans in shed. Boy Scouts manage all returnables and use profits for various projects.

Metal, appliances, iron, steel, brass, radiators, copper pipe, steel wiring, tools, etc. There is a $10 charge for all whiteware (appliances).

Yard waste, grass clippings, leaves, horse manure, small twigs. No brush. (Brush will be accepted when a chipper becomes available at RTF.)

Tires, car without rim $.75, with rim $2. Truck without rim $5, with rim not accepted.

Now that Cohasset's new Recycling-Transfer Facility (RTF) is open, enforcement of the Mandatory Recycling Bylaw passed at the 1988 Town Meeting is effective. The Bylaw includes homeowners with trash collection. All trash haulers, businesses and residents using the Cohasset RTF must recycle.

Days of operation: Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thank you for recycling!

Magner sets soccer record straight . . .

Although Sunday's newspapers declared a stunning loss for the Skippers, Magner stood his ground.

"We never lost that game - period. And although it took a couple of days to work it out, I knew we did not lose that game," he said.

For at least a day, the official score after Saturday's game was 1-0 in Medway's favor. The celebrations commenced in that small community, and the trophies were awarded to a jubilant team that had finally broken a string of defeats against their arch rivals.

Cohasset's dejected players left the field that cool Saturday evening, despondent over their overtime loss, but holding onto a hope that the game would somehow be salvaged.

Once that Medway goal was scored with what the official timekeeper thought was four seconds remaining, Magner issued an immediate protest.

"The timekeeper had stopped the clock, which is something he cannot do independently," Magner said. "And, he also never counted down from ten seconds, which is a requirement.

"The key issue was that he actually stopped the clock, although he does not have that authority," the coach continued. "That was the basis of our appeal. He stopped the game with approximately four seconds left and then restarted the game. If he had allowed the time to run out, the game would have ended again without a score and we would have gone on immediately to another overtime period."

And although Magner immediately submitted his protest, the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association did not issue its ruling until much later that night. Meanwhile, the players, coach and school administrators waited nervously for an answer.

"It was a bad ride home," Magner said, describing Saturday night's journey from the Easton soccer field to Cohasset.

Later that night, the coach was given a dose of good news - the two teams would meet again Monday afternoon. Two halves would be played and a winner would emerge by Sunday evening.

"I didn't file the protest as a personal vendetta against the Medway team," the coach explained, saying that the timekeeper admitted his mistake to tournament officials Saturday night. "It was an honest mistake on his part, and I commend him for his honesty in admitting it."

Medway didn't see it that way. The school launched a protest of its own and by Monday it looked as though a second match would not take place. Following a lengthy conference call between Cohasset and Medway administrators and tournament officials Monday morning, it was decided that the game would be played.

"The timekeeper was aware of his mistake and admitted it. The MIAA just compounded the problem by delaying a decision on my protest. They should have made a ruling immediately after I filed the protest," Magner said this week as Cohasset prepared for semi-final action against Marblehead.

Jason Cameron, who eventually scored the winning goal in Monday's game, said he was just relieved that the situation was resolved. "No one likes to lose," he said. "And now, I'm just glad it's all over and we won.

"I was really disappointed after Saturday's game - leaving there thinking we lost the South Sectionals. It wasn't fair, and we knew it. I was really angry for a while."

Cameron and his teammates stood anxiously in the hallways of Cohasset High on Monday, awaiting the final verdict by the MIAA. He was "ecstatic," when they were told that the game was "on" for Monday afternoon.

I was so anxious about the whole thing. I thought we weren't going to get to play. And when we got the good news Monday, we were all psyched. There was no way we were going to lose that game Monday," he added.

Coach Magner agreed that the Skippers went into Monday's tournament with an emotional edge over Medway. After all their jubilant celebrations Saturday night, there was now a real possibility that the winner's trophies would be traded to Cohasset.

"We had everything to gain, and they had everything to lose," Magner surmised. Monday's game was as emotional as Saturday's match, the coach said.

"When we took the field, the Medway crowd was chanting 'we got shafted.' It was going to be tough psychologically if they lost, so we had that advantage."

And Medway did lose. The winners' plaque was taken from the despondent opponents and returned to the Skippers.

They had been vindicated.

"This win was not tainted in the least," Magner said. "This is our fourth South Section title in four years. Monday's victory was just as worthwhile as the past years. Now we're looking forward to continuing in the tournament. We have everything to gain from here."

Senior Frank Willshire said he is "very satisfied" with Monday's victory.

"Justice has been served. Everyone said there wasn't much we could do about Saturday's loss, but we didn't feel that way. I'm just so happy about the way things turned out - now we have a really good shot at the divisional title."

Although Magner agrees that justice has indeed prevailed, he is not without compassion for the Medway players.

"I feel really bad for those kids. They had something and it was taken away from them," he said. "These are 16 and 17 year old kids. They're very emotional about this and to have a trophy one day and to take it away the next - that's very sad.

"I feel bad for those kids," Magner continued. "But as for my actions, I have no qualms. I did the right thing for my team."

So. Shore Hockey League action

By Marc Nantel
Special to The Mariner

It was showdown time between Bay State Auto Spring and Gardens Pub for first place Sunday.

Pub recaptured first place with a 4-2 victory. Bob Brodeaur opened up the scoring from Bob Mullen who had dug the puck from the corner. Bay State's Tom Chisolm tied it up when he banged in the puck from the slot on a nice feed from behind the net by Harry "Not His Night" Riely.

Chisolm scored again from Riely to make it 2-1 when a Pubs defenseman's pass was intercepted in front. Mike O'Connell scored again on a breakaway when he faked a hard shot on goalie Mark Selbert and slid it under his pads. Pub's John Kearney scored at the end of the second period to make it 4-2. Third period was scoreless.

The Varmints came out roaring against Roman Garden when they kept the pressure on but could not get the puck in the net. Roman Garden made good on the Varmint's mistakes and built a 3-0 lead with goals from Jack McCarthy, John Reilly and Phil Spanos. Varmint's lone goal in the second came from Peter Hemenway to make the score 3-1. Mike Delaney and Phil Spanos scored in the third to make it 5-1.

The last game featured a real high scoring game when Gulph Construction defeated Sullivan Tire 7-5. Sullivan opened up the scoring when Ray Gollemme took a feed from Carl Nantel and shot it in low on goalie Rick Swanson stick side. Gulph came right back with goals from Jim Clarke and Chuck Nash. Sullivan's Rocky Rothwell scored unassisted to tie the score. Gulph free agent Ed Kelley scored with 14 seconds left in the first period to pull ahead 3-2. Gulph got 4 unanswered goals in the second and third when Joe Fell, Charlie Enwright, Jim Clarke and Ed Kelly scored to pull ahead 7-2. Sullivan really put on the pressure in the last 5 minutes of the third when Steve Walsh, Marty King and Ray Gollemme made it 7-5.

AROUND THE RINK:

Roman's Ed Hourihan has rejoined the team after a brief stint at Hershey. Is Gulph up to something? Stay tuned! Speaking of Gulph; they had fans donning their paper sacks when they let in three goals in two minutes. Maybe they'll pull out and go to New Orleans.

Spring soccer registration

Registration for the 1990 Spring Soccer Season will be held Tuesday, Nov. 21 at the Deer Hill School from 6 to 8 p.m.

All interested players, ages under 8 through under 19, are urged to register. Registration forms may be obtained at the Main Office of either the Jr./Sr. High School or the Deer Hill School for those planning to register by mail.

The fee will be: $30 for the first child, $25 for the second child, and $20 each additional family member.

Make checks payable to the Cohasset Soccer Club.

The Cohasset Soccer Club must inform the Coastal League by January, 1990 relative to the number of teams to be entered in the various age groupings. Additionally, the total number of Cohasset teams will be restricted due to the lack of playing fields.

Registrations are accepted on a first come, first serve basis. Mail-in registrations will not be accepted before Nov. 22.

Village Fair preparations underway

Events, activities and other attractions with a special appeal to children are again getting a "high priority" at Cohasset's Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

In St. Stephen's Church, "on the rock," children will have the opportunity to do their shopping in private, assisted by teenagers.

Chairman Georgia Parros and her helpers will assemble hundreds of appealing, moderately-priced items that children can buy as gifts. No parents are allowed in this Secret Room, but members of church youth groups will help the youngsters with their shopping and see that the gift is attractively wrapped.

Santa's arrival about 10:45 a.m. aboard a Cohasset fire engine is likely to be the high point of the day. It is planned to continue the practice of setting Santa up in the carriage house of the Unitarian Parish House. Jean and Graig Muir are again arranging for Santa's visit.

Some special activities for children will be held in the Community Center. From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. children will be transformed by face painting or masks, and participate in an assortment of crafts projects.

The snack bar on the common will be managed again by Peter Guild, and staffed by a group of young fathers.

The four participating churches include Panagia Greek Orthodox, St. Anthony's, Second Congregational and St. Stephen's, under the leadership of chairperson Cindy Dedes.

Church representatives this year are Eugenia Syrmopoulos and Eva Sedell from the Greek church; Debbie Anderson and Sue Cameron from Second Congregational; Rose and Chris Kierce from St. Anthony's and Nancy Swatek and Sheila Wallingford from St. Stephen's. Linda Argeros is Secretary, and James Hooper is Treasurer, with Deanna Mulligan as Assistant Treasurer, and Claudia Story and Letitia Jordan as Associate Treasurers.

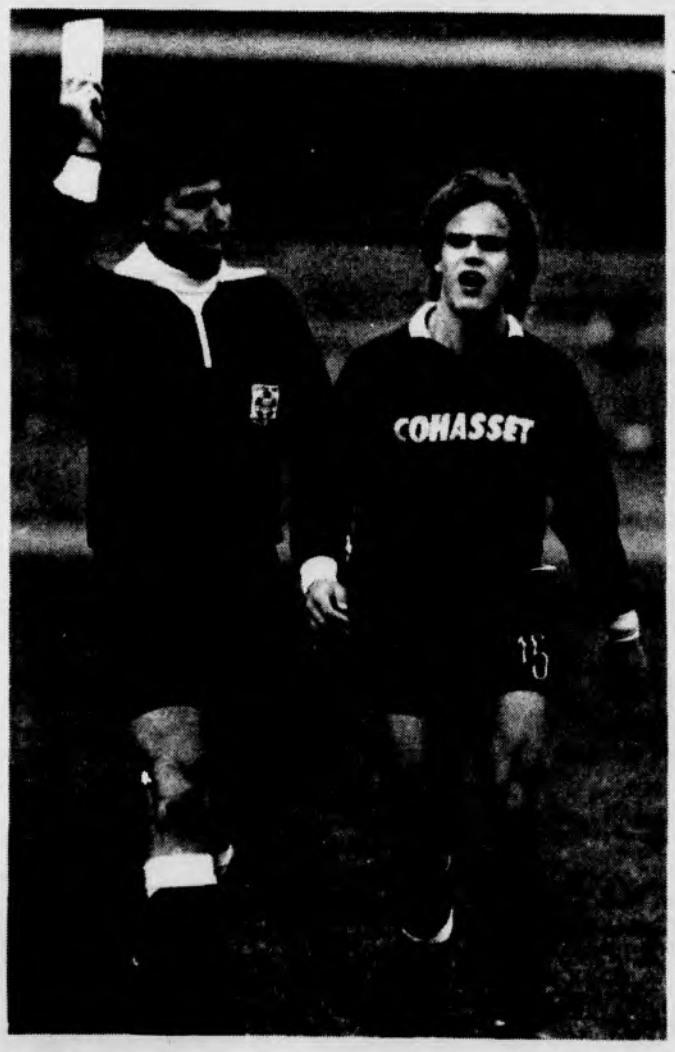
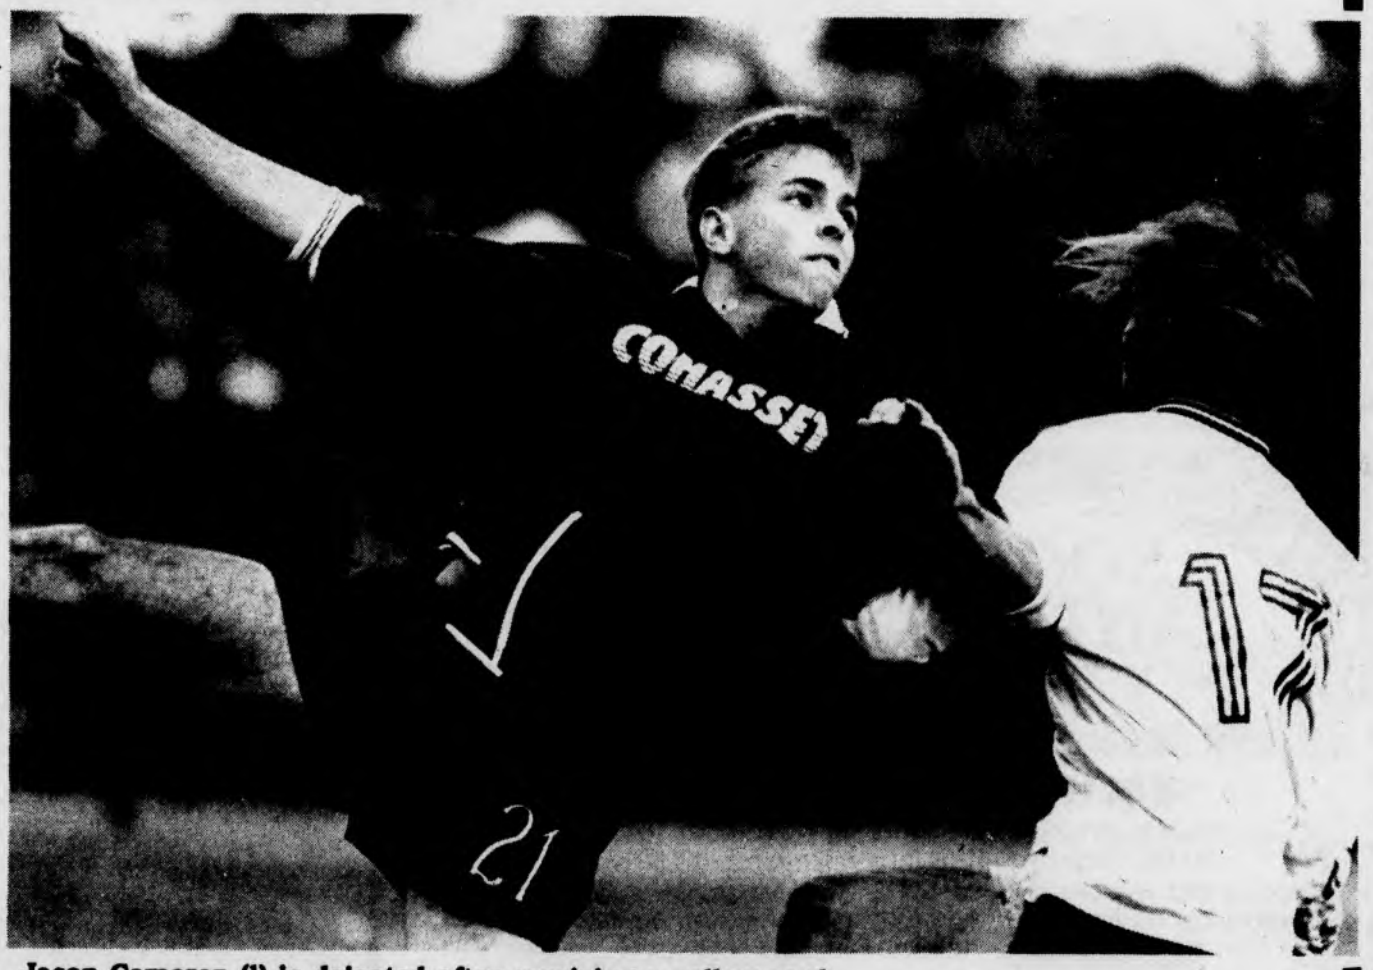
Cohasset champions





Cohasset goalie Joel Reidy has his usual extraordinary game Saturday against Medway. Although that game ended in a 1-0 verdict, we all know by now what happened by Monday afternoon.

A hustling Jason Cameron tries to beat this Medway defender to the ball during Saturday's topsy-turvy tournament action, while Bob Whitticer slows down for a Medway forward.

Soccer Skippers down Medway

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

For the fourth time in four years, the Cohasset High School boys' soccer team has knocked off Medway, 2-1, in the Division Three South Sectional championship game November 13 that took two days to complete.

Goals by Jim Reidy and Jason Cameron (the game-winner) provided the scoring for the Skippers. Cohasset will now advance to the Eastern Mass. state semi-finals this week.

Cohasset can thank the MIAA officials for a second lease on life against Medway. Originally, Medway had the contest won on Saturday when Stuart McRury, the Tri-Valley League's leading scorer, scored off a corner-kick pass by forward Dave Kurzontkowski, knocking it home as the game clock expired in the third overtime.

While the Medway players and fans were celebrating at midfield, Cohasset coach Dan Magner walked over to the field officials to protest the call, explaining that his clock which he keeps on the sidelines had expired.

"Both referees said their time expired and my time expired, but the official timekeeper said time had not expired. I think the referee on the field should keep time," noted Magner.

Magner then filed a grievance with the MIAA later that night because he felt that Medway scored after the buzzer.

Norman Pulaski, the South Sectional tournament director, upheld the grievance and scheduled the two teams to play two 20-minute halves at Oliver Ames High School on Monday.

Pulaski said the timekeeper admitted to him Saturday night that the goal was scored after time expired.

Apparently, the timekeeper erroneously stopped the clock when Medway was awarded a free kick with time running out. He thought Cohasset was stalling. McRury scored seconds after that kick.

So, on Monday, these two rivalries met again as if Saturday's game never existed.

To show their displeasure about the MIAA's decision, some of the Medway fans were carrying posters in the stands. One of them read, 'A sad day for the MIAA'.

Medway struck first when McRury scored with a low shot to the far corner of the net. With two minutes left in the first half, Reidy tied the game when he beat the Medway goalie to the ball and then kicked it into the wide open net.

In the second half, Cameron got the game-winner on a shot down the right sidelines.

"I felt it was fair to protest. I thought the investigation conducted by the MIAA was done fairly. Their decision was fair. It's just too bad that someone has to lose. I hope Medway can empathize with me, but I had to stand up for my kids," Magner said.

When asked if his team was cheated out of a championship, Medway coach Wes Truscott, holding back his emotion, remarked, "Yes, however, I think Medway showed a better example of sportsmanship."

Medway must be wondering what it must do to beat Cohasset. The teams have met in the Div. three sectional final in the past three seasons, Cohasset winning by a goal each time.

Football

In what could be their final home game ever, the Cohasset High School football team gave their fans an exciting finish last Saturday at Milliken Field. Unfortunately, a clipping penalty wiped out a potential game-winning drive with one minute left, enabling East Boston to hold on to a 22-14, non-league victory over the Skippers.

"It was too bad," Cohasset coach Phil Pisano said. "Our kids played well, they played good defense."

The game was 14-14 when East Boston (6-2) began its final drive with 4:30 left. The Jets advanced to the Skippers' nine-yard line, but a penalty left them facing fourth-and-goal at the 18. With 2:15 remaining, Dexter Young hit Jason Santorro for the winning score.

Cohasset got the ball back on the ensuing kickoff and began their last-minute march.

The big play in the drive occurred when left-handed quarterback Noah Hill hit halfback Mike Ellinger with a screen pass for a 36-yard gain to the East Boston 10, only to have the play called back for clipping.

Co-captain Sean McCarthy (95 yards on 15 carries) opened Cohasset's scoring with an one-yard run in the second period.

Curt Ludlow, who caught four passes for 45 yards, scored from five yards out early in the fourth quarter and Pat Conroy rushed in the two-point conversion to the score.

"This was the best game of the entire season. We showed a much more effective offense and were able to move the ball well on the ground," said Pisano.

Linemen Mike Rolandelli, Sean Bishop and Greg Thomas blocked well, while Mike Dockray played a strong defensive game.

Cohasset will have 12 days to get ready for their Thanksgiving encounter with Hull November 23. This year's matchup will be played at Hull High School.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor
ADDITIONAL THERAPIES
Most people believe that chiropractors' healing methods are restricted to manipulations of the spine. While it is true that a gradual realigning of the vertebrae forms the basis of the chiropractic approach, there are a variety of other agencies used in physical therapy (modalities) which the chiropractor employs. Such therapeutic techniques as the application of heat and cold, vibratory therapy, acupressure, ultrasound and others are adjuncts to the manipulative process. As the vertebrae are realigned, muscles and ligaments associated with these bones must also reshape themselves to the newer, healthy form. This is where supplemental therapies enter into the treatment plan. They aid in the rehabilitation process and accelerate healing time.
We invite you to call SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC and learn more about how chiropractic can serve you. Such applications deal with existing difficulties as well as serving as preventive measures. Vo-tech open house

South Shore Vocational Technical High School, with campuses in Hanover and Abington will open its doors to the community on Thursday, Nov. 16 from 6 to 9 p.m.

The annual open house is sponsored by the students, faculty and administration of South Shore. Both campuses will be open and shuttle buses will be available to transport visitors between campuses.

The Hanover campus is at 476 Webster St., Hanover and the Abington Campus is on Ralph Hamblin Lane, Abington.

The open house will allow junior high students, their parents and the general public to view the facilities, investigate the programs and speak with members of the teaching, administrative and guidance staff.

Guidance Director Pam Titus stated, "The open house will allow parents of seventh and eighth grade students an opportunity to view our educational facilities, talk to our staff and perhaps gain a better understanding of why their son or daughter might be interested in pursuing a program in vocational technical education."

South Shore Vocational Technical High School is a regional high school with an enrollment of 480 students. Member towns of the region are Hanover, Rockland, Whitman, Hanson, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell and Abington. Students from the following non-member towns also attend South Shore: Hingham, Hull, Duxbury, Marshfield, Pembroke, Duxbury, and Halifax.

MBTA identification cards at Senior Center

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority will be at the Senior Center, 229 North Street in Hingham, Thursday, Nov. 16, to issue identification cards.

These cards permit senior citizens and eligible disabled persons to ride MBTA commuter rail lines, rapid transit and local buses for reduced rates. With the identification cards, passengers may ride rapid transit lines and local buses for 10 cents and commuter rail for half fare. These reduced fares will be effective at all times.

Eligible citizens from Hingham and surrounding towns will be able to register between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

To be eligible for a senior citizen reduced fare identification card, which contains the name and address of the holder and a color photograph for positive identification, senior citizens must bring proof of age — 65 years or older — such as a birth certificate, baptismal record, or driver's license; proof of residency, such as a driver's license, utility bill, library card, or charge plate; and a 50 cent cash fee.

Medicare cards will not be accepted as proof of age.

Senior citizens who already have a reduced fare identification card do not need to register again.

Eligibility for a handicapped citizens' reduced fare identificaton card requires completion of the MBTA Special Needs Certification Form by a physician. Certification forms can be obtained by calling 617-722-5438 or by writing: Certification Program, MBTA Sales and Marketing, 120 Boylston Street, 3rd floor, Boston, MA 02116.

Applicants who have received notification from the MBTA that their application form has been approved, must bring that notice with them, in order to receive a special needs reduced fare pass. Veterans with 70 percent or more disability, documented by the U.S. Veterans Administration, may receive a special needs photo identificaton card.

The apple harvest has begun

Thanks to the efforts of the entire Cohasset community, apple computers offered by the Stop and Shop's Apples for Students program have been ordered for each of our three schools. The town wide drive to collect Stop and Shop pink slips began September 10th and will continue through March 10, 1990. Depending upon the dollar value of the register tapes collected, schools can exchange them at Stop and Shop headquarters for computer equipment or software. This week, PSO president Patricia Baird, submitted eight Stop and Shop grocery bags filled with register tapes and ordered an Apple MacIntosh Plus System (register tape value of $85,000 each) one for each of Deerhill and Joseph Osgood schools. Register tapes continue to be tallied daily as we aim to order additional computers for each of the schools.

As you shop for the holiday season, please continue to save your tapes. The harvest has just begun and we hope it will be plentiful. The PSO would like to thank everyone for their help in collecting the tapes and ask you to continue the good work!

Stop and Shop register tapes can be sent to any Cohasset school or dropped off at the Library, the Community Center, Town Hall, SeniorCitizen Center, Rec. Center at the Senior Citizen Housing, Cohasset Tennis Club, or any of the Cohasset Churches.

Lunch with the Seniors

Mrs. Alcott's third grade class joined the Senior Citizens for lunch at the Parish House on Tuesday, November 7th. The children, who brought bag lunches, sat amongst the Seniors and served them cupcakes for dessert. After pairing with a Senior to read The Ghost-Eye Tree, the children then invited the seniors to make a holiday craft, a turkey. There was a sharing of "things to be thankful for". The meeting culminated with songs, poems and new found friendships.

Composting saves funds, enhances environment

With the foliage having reached its peak and fallen to the ground, the state Department of Environmental Protection is urging homeowners to compost the leaves they rake from their yards this autumn.

Most people bag leaves for disposal in landfills.

"Composting is one way environmentally-conscious people can make a difference," said Sumner Martinson of DEP's composting program.

"It also gives serious gardeners an opportunity to save money and improve the quality of their soil."

Leaves and other yard wastes make up as much as 40 percent of the solid waste generated in Massachusetts at this time of year.

By promoting backyard composting, DEP hopes to extend the life of many landfills that are nearing capacity.

The agency also has stepped up technical assistance to communities planning leaf composting operations.

About 75 municipalities are composting today, and the state hopes to double that number within a year by making officials aware of the economic benefits.

DEP has created a cost-benefit analysis worksheet for their use.

"With this tool, public works directors can plan and develop cost-effective municipal composting operations for their communities," said Willa Kuh, director of the Division of Solid Waste Management.

Copies of the worksheet or a step-by-step brochure for homeowners about composting leaves and grass clippings are available by calling 292-5869.

Historical society offers unique holiday gift ideas

For the forthcoming holiday gift-giving season the Cohasset Historical Society offers several unique items relating to Cohasset's history.

The definitive history book of the town itself as a New England seacoast community is the Rev. E. Victor Bigelow's Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, Massachusets. First published in 1898 by the Committee On Town History tells the story of the town from its beginnings to the date of the book's completion. Starting with the forming of our granite rocks millions of years ago the book's 559 pages describe the glacial epoch that gave us our hills and plains, then the reforestation following the "ice age." Millenia later, early tribes of Indians are known to have hunted and settled here long before their descendants met the first European colonists in the opening years of the 17th century. The first farms and homesteads in "Conahasset" date from the land division of the 1670's.

Rev. Bigelow describes the subsistance-level industry and hard-scrabble agriculture of the first settlers. Shipbuilding and fishing played an increasing role in the lives of early Cohasseters, and by the mid 19th century had become the main economic base of the town. Cohasset-owned mackerel schooners brought wealth to local families and world-travelling Sea Captains built some of the town's finest homes. Churches, schools, libraries and cultural organizations flourished through two centuries of practical progress, and town self-government arose from the earliest meetings of Parish and Precinct.

By Rev. Bigelow's time, Cohasset had passed through its formative years and was on the verge of becoming what it is today—a modern big city suburb. "Narrative History," written in a flowing 19th century prose, describes an age now long past; a community and its people living in a world vastly different from our own.

Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, Massachusetts by Rev. Bigelow may be obtained in its recent reprinting from the Historical Society or at Fleming's, Elm Street, Cohasset Center. This unusual and unique book is both entertaining and highly informative, and makes a distinctive gift for the coming holiday season.

Also available through the Historical Society is a paperback reprint of E. Pomeroy Collier's Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains. For a number of generations Cohasset's young men went to sea at an early age, many first aboard the mackerel schooners, then, in some cases, as crewmen and Masters of world-travelling sailing vessels of the American Merchant Marine. E. Pomeroy Collier, son of one of Cohasset's most illustrious Deep Sea Captains, wrote down a series of short biographies of more than 50 Cohasset Sea Captains of the 18th and 19th centuries. A reprint of Collier's volume was made several years ago and is available through the Historical Society.

For further information about the unusual and unique holiday season gift items offered by the Cohasset Historical Society the Society may be contacted at 383-6930.

Weddings/engagements

Jaquint/Dole

Anna Frances Dole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Dole of Cohasset, became the bride of Stephen M. Jaquint of Fayetteville, N.Y. at a September 16 double ring ceremony at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Cohasset.

The Rev. John J. Keohane of St. Anthony's Church co-officiated with the Rev. Gary A. Ritts of the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset. A reception followed on the M/V Majestic.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by Mrs. Pamela Kocman of Pittsburgh, PA., as maid of honor.

Bridesmaids included Kathleen Jaquint of Fayetteville, N.Y., sister of the bridegroom, Patricia White of Woodbury, Conn., Clare Rankin of London, England and Lynn Swanick of Ashland.

The bride's uncle, Eugene Mellish of Keene, N.H., was the soloist. Stefanie Preissinger of Bayreuth, Germany, cousin of the bride, and Ukiko Unoki of Fukuoka, Japan, served as guest book attendants. A reading was given by Mrs. Carolyn Briggs of Pittsburgh, PA.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Jaquint of Fayetteville, N.Y., selected his brother, Robert W. Jaquint II of Fayetteville, N.Y. as his best man.

Ushers included Scott Allison of Waco, Texas, Jerry Morgan and Michael Winters, both of Syracuse, N.Y. and Brett Wood of Dallas, Texas.

A graduate of the Sunnydale School of Interlaken, Switzerland and the Rochester Institute of Technology, the bride is employed as a concierge at the Four Season Hotel in Boston.

The bridegroom graduated from the Fayetteville Manlis High School, Manlius, N.Y. and also from the Rochester Institute of Technology. He is an estimator at the W. E. Andrews Co., Bedford.

After a trip to Southern California, the couple are at home in Boston.

Chamber of Commerce news . . .

As our State, and the Northeast region as a whole, continues to decline economically, the small business person is the first to feel the pinch.

In an effort to help to understand and cope with the problems associated with a "downward trend" in the economy, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has asked Ron LaFleur, founder of Project Management Assistance Company, Inc., to share some of his insights and techniques with its members and all area business people.

Mr. LaFleur, a nationally known business consultant, uses his vast experience gained from his associations with such companies as Raytheon,Hazeltine Corp., and Honeywell Industries, as well as sound business practices he has used managing projects for the US Government, hospitals and private industry, to counsel his clients in the ways to increased productivity and profit. The meeting will be held at Hugo's Restaurant in Cohasset on November 20 at 6:30 p.m. and is open to the public, at no charge. We urge all area business people to attend, and join us in what we are sure will be a very profitable meeting.

With the holiday season upon us, and with retailers looking fearfully towards 1990, we need to hear some optimistic news, for a change.

And speaking of the holidays, if there is any way that the Chamber can be of assistance to you or your business this season, or if you have any ideas for your business area, please let us know. Although we can no longer help to light the Common during Christmas, due to a few complaints from residents, we would still like to help in any way that we can to make our area business centers look and feel full of the Holiday spirit and joy.

For more info on the November meeting, call 383-1010.

Choral Arts concert

The Harbour Choral Arts Society, a community chorus consisting of over 80 members from the South Shore, is hard at work completing preparations for this year's Christmas Concerts.

The group will be performing at 8 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 1 at Norwell's Cushing Center and at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 2 at St. Andrew's Church in Hanover.

Conductor and founder Ken Clinton, chorus director at Hanover High School, has selected an ambitious program of seasonal music for the highly-acclaimed singing group, currently enjoying its third season. The featured piece will be Daniel Pinkham's beautiful "Christmas Cantata". For this selection the singers will be accompanied by "A Touch of Brass", a magnificent eight-piece brass choir.

Tickets for both concerts cost $5 and can be purchased either at the door or, beginning Nov. 20, at Hanover High School, Cedar Street, Hanover. Please note that last year's Christmas concert was a complete sellout.

Drugs, booze 'greased the skids' for Steve bad," he said.

"Then I'd just go and try to get coke. "

His life revolved around getting coke or getting the money to pay for it. He'd swindle people. Steal checks and forge signatures. Rob stores. Nothing mattered except coke and alcohol-- not even losing his wife and children.

"You chase it all day. You chase it all your life," Steve says.

Finally, he was arrested. His crime?

"I broke into the American Legion and stole all the booze."

He says the cop who arrested him called him slime, said he deserved to be crushed under foot, and beat him up in a holding cell. In a touch of irony, Steve says he read in the paper about three weeks ago that the arresting officer was picked up for possession of cocaine.

Only a week passed between his arrest and sentencing because, he told the judge, he just wanted to get everything over with.

It took 15 minutes to read the charges against him. Then the judge sentenced him to ten years, with seven of them suspended.

"That's when I knew it was over," he said. "If I hadn't been picked up I would probably still be dealing or be dead. I'm glad I was [arrested]."

He was sentenced to Dedham. Once there, he asked for drug and alcohol treatment, but was denied. Treatment is only offered to prisoners who have been convicted of drunk driving or some other direct substance abuse crime. Steve requested transfer to Plymouth County where treatment is available to any inmate who requests it.

Steve is trying to turn his life around. He's hoping for an early release, hoping for a reconciliation with his wife and children, hoping to stay straight. He's not proud of his past, but isn't running from it: he wants to be assigned to a drug awareness and education program as part of his community service.

Steve says he could go into any town, any high school-- Cohasset included-- and find drugs.

He says the solution to drug abuse is education beginning in kindergarten.

"The young kids listen more," he said. "Adults aren't going to listen to you-- they're too pigheaded."

Steve was accompanied by Jacqueline Smith, director of Project Impact, and John Dunn, director of treatment and classification at Plymouth County House of Correction. They re-emphasized the importance of reaching out to the children of Cohasset with the message of how devastating alcohol and drug abuse is.

Smith told the group that the most important area to emphasize was prevention since only three out of every 100 substance abusers successfully recovers.

The committee had also invited every Cohasset liquor store owner to attend the meeting. Donald Staszko, owner and manager of the liquor store to be built at the Cohasset Plaza on Rte. 3A, was the only attendee.

Staszko told the committee that he believes he has a duty to the community to run his business in a highly responsible manner.

He intends to make sure that his employees will check i.d.s and be alert to the possibility of adults purchasing liquor for minors.

"Youth are the most important asset we have in this community," he said. "They're the future of this community."

Staszko will also try to be alert to customers who seem to be buying excessive quantities of liquor. He told the committee that he would not hesitate to suggest to someone who seemed to have an alcohol problem that they might want to seek assistance.

"It's a moral issue, that's what it comes down to," said Staszko, adding that he was not in business for just the bottom line.

The committee has only two more informational sessions scheduled before beginning work on their report and recommendations.

Payment to SEA Engineering approved

Selectmen approved payment of $13,190 to SEA Engineering for work completed at the landfill transfer station.

Construction committee chairman Anson Whealler told selectmen Monday night that SEA has submitted invoices totalling $31,739. But SEA will subtract $3,500 from that total as its share of the cost overrun caused by unforeseen ledge problems. In addition, there are invoices totalling $8,997 which the committee has never seen before, Whealler said. Before payment is approved, those bills will have to be settled.

Adding to that a number of "punch list" items yet to be completed, Whealler figured the town currently owes the company $13,190.

Selectmen agreed to pay the amount, realizing that the remaining invoices will be settled and an additional payment to SEA is expected.

According to Whealler, final written approval by the state Department of Environmental Protection is expected, and the transfer station could be in operation sometime this week. "They're ready to go," Whealler told selectmen, referring to the health board which is supervising the operation of the transfer station.

Town says goodbye to Thanksgiving tradition

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

What's Thanksgiving Day without the traditional high school football game followed by a turkey dinner with the family?

We'll know next year when the varsity football program at Cohasset High School is at least temporarily disbanded.

The decision is pretty much final - Cohasset can not field a varsity team next year. With the departure of 17 seniors this June, Cohasset will not have enough juniors and seniors next year to make up a competitive varsity squad.

"It has nothing to do with money," explained athletic director Clark Chatterton. "We could see this two and three years ago - we were just running out of kids to play on the varsity team."

Right now, enrollment in grades 10 through 12 is about 230, he said. For schools that small, it is extremely difficult to field a varsity football team, particularly when the same school offers a very competitive soccer team, Chatterton explained.

There is hope for the future, he added. Currently, there is a healthy number of seventh, eighth and ninth graders on the freshman team. "I hope we can keep them all together so we can field a junior varsity team next year," Chatterton said.

The players in the 1989 squad know this could be the last Thanksgiving Day match against arch rival Hull for at least a year or two.

Sean McCarthy, a 17 year-old senior tri-captain, said he will miss attending the traditional Thanksgiving Day game next year as a Cohasset High alumni.

"It's always one of the biggest games of the year," he said this week. "I think the other players feel like I do - we'd love to get that Thanksgiving game trophy and bring it back to Cohasset before the

Trustees vote to delay library fees

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

There will be no new fees at Paul Pratt Memorial Library-- at least for now.

The board of selectmen asked the trustees to consider new or increased fees to ease the budget crunch expected in fiscal 1991.

But library trustees voted to postpone action on the request.

Library director Richard E. Hayes advised against taking such action until the new computer system is operational.

"It might create a false and undesirable connection in the minds of some between the new system and the new fees," Hayes said in his report.

"In fact, the new system will reduce the cost of some services."

The library hopes that the computer system will be on line within a couple of months. There have been delays caused by a vendor who has been replaced for failure to meet standards set by the consortium of 21 town libraries that make up the Old Colony Library Network.

Once the computer system is on line, the library trustees will have to overcome a bias against user fees as a source of revenue for the library.

"Our philosophy is that the library ought to be open and free," said trustee Sheila S. Evans. "All of our services are available to all of our users."

Currently, the library derives substantial income from philanthropic gifts and volunteer services, primarily through the efforts of the Friends of the Library. Trustees fear that if library imposes user

Officials say CHL is causing Rte. 3A smell

The board of health is convinced the "rotten egg" odors along Rte. 3A are caused by the Cohasset Heights Ltd. landfill.

Two consultants have concluded the hydrogen sulphide smell is caused by the decomposition of the general refuse which was once deposited in the commercial landfill.

Selectmen met this week with Michael Sullivan of the board of health, to discuss solutions to the noxious odors which residents and travellers have smelled as they approach the area on Rte. 3A near the landfill owned by John and Paul Barry. Selectman Burt Pratt said his phone has been "ringing off the hook" with complaints from residents.

Sullivan told selectmen he has been convinced for four years that the smell is caused by the landfill. "That's why I've worked as diligently as I can. I wanted to have this cleared up the day after I got on the board," he told selectmen.

Unknown source shuts down fields

Officials agree, if the athletic fields had to be closed down, at least it happened at the end of the season.

The town's health agent shut down Milliken Field last week, after another series of fecal coloform tests indicated high bacterial counts on the high school's main playing field. Since that time, the football team has been practicing on the girls' field hockey field in the front of the school.

This will not interfere with Thursday's Thanksgiving match against Hull, since that game will be played in Hull.

"Thank goodness for that," Athletic director Clark Chatterton said. "We would have one big problem if the game was supposed to be here.

"You now, it's not even a joke anymore. The conditions of these fields is that bad," he commented.

Football coach Phil Pisano said the change in location has not been a great inconvenience for his players. "We couldn't practice at all last week on Milliken Field because the field was too muddy from the rain. We'll make due with what we have," he said. "If this was mid-season, then we'd have a big problem because we're on the front field now and the field hockey team has the rights to that area."

About a month ago, the health agent closed down the practice field behind the high school. Coloform tests conducted on that playing surface indicated levels of 110,000 parts per million. That's extremely high, according to health agent Joseph Godzik.

Cohasset's week

Selectmen review requests

Next week, selectmen will review a five-year proposal of $245,000 in capital outlay requests from three town departments.

Among those requests is a proposal by the Council on Aging to construct a $725,760 senior center in 1990.

According to the list submitted by the council to the town's capital budget committee, the center will be funded through a combination of federal, state, and local money, along with private funds. It is planned to be a single-story wood-framed structure.

In addition, the Council on Aging also expects to request $19,900 for a new shuttle van in 1992.

Among the requests submitted by the tree and park department is a $60,000 sprinkler system for the town common in 1992/1993. The system would be used to water the grass on the town common. Other capital budget requests from that department include a lawn mower for $16,800 in 1991/92; resetting the curb along the town common for $60,000 in 1993/94; replace the 1981 winch truck in 1994/94 for $35,000; reseed and reloam the Beach Street and North Main Street area of the town common in 1995/96 for $40,000; and refinish Government Island Park in 1996/97 for $12,000.

The harbormaster's department would like to replace the floats at the Salt House for $10,000 in 1991; replace the ramp at Margin Street for $10,800 in 1993/94; and replace the harbormaster's boat in 1992/93 for $25,000.

Selectmen said they would like to review the list next week with the department heads.

Regional services discussed

Selectmen discussed plans to regionalize emergency medical services with the chairman of the town's government structure committee.

Committee chairman Roy Fitzsimmons discussed a proposal to initiate an advanced life support system with four surrounding towns in association with the South Shore Hospital. While each town will maintain its existing basic life support services within the local fire department, they will be offered an advanced level of services on a regional basis.

Selectmen endorsed the concept. They plan to attend a luncheon at the hospital along with representatives from Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate in which the proposal will be discussed by the director of medical emergency services.

Meanwhile, selectmen voted to form a sub-committee which will review a proposal to combine or eliminate town departments. This was an area that the government structure committee was previously asked to investigate.

The reallocation of town jobs and departments will require a vote of town meeting, Selectman Diana Kornet noted, so it needs to be studied in time for the annual meeting. She suggested that selectmen form a subcommittee which will report their findings to the town government committee.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle had never heard of a proposal to combine town departments, and suggested that before a subcommittee makes any recommendations, it should first go to the department heads for their comments.

"But any department that is now independent is going to be very reluctant to give up that independence. But we may have to consolidate for efficiency and for money," Kornet said. "The reallocation of jobs and manpower to meet the same needs - it"s essential to investigate this."

Selectmen Ned Tebbetts and Martha Gjesteby agreed it was an important concept to review. They volunteered to serve on the subcommittee with Kornet. Selectman Laugelle voted the formation of the subcommittee.

License fees are set

After two weeks of review, selectmen voted to increase a number of license fees.

Before they voted on the fees, Selectman Burt Pratt publicly thanked Kimball's general manager Dan Leahy for the detailed presentation he made last week to the board regarding the need to uniformly increase all license fees.

Selectman Diana Kornet said they wanted to look individually at each category of license, rather than making across-the-board percentage raises. They decided to hike fees in an effort to raise revenue for the town.

The board voted to raise the cost of the following annual licenses: auctioneer: $20; common victualler, from $25 to $50; club all alcoholic, from $650 to $750; innholder's, from $1,200 to $1,400; restaurant beer and wine, from $600 to $700; restaurant all alcoholic, from $1,200 to $1,400; package store all acoholic, from $1,200 to $1,400; package store beer and wine, from $500 to $600; one-day alcoholic, from $25 to $35; permit for live entertainment, from $100 to $150; permit for piped-in music, $20; Sunday entertainment live, $100, the same as last year; charge for processing state licenses, tentatively set at $10; and no charge for transfer of location for an alcoholic license and for the change in manager.

There was some discussion about the rate charged for one-day liquor licenses. This was a topic discussed last week by Leahy, who said his business loses customers to the non profit organizations in town who hold events and receive one-day licenses.

Although his comments were not directed solely at the community center, director Judy Volungis explained there are some events there that actually lose money for the organization. In addition, she said, selectmen should not be concerned with the liability of serving of alcohol, since the community center carries a $1 million insurance policy.

Cable committee meeting set

The Cohasset Cable Advisory Committee will meet on Wednesday, November 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

The Committee will discuss the quality of service provided to the Town by the Continental Cable Co., the selection of programs, repairs, complaints, rates, community involvement and any other issue of interest to the residents of Cohasset. All residents of the Town are invited to come and particpate in the discussion.

Schools can expect future cuts

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The prospects of a level-funded budget are so unappetizing to the Cohasset school committee that they decided to put off discussion of the fiscal 1991 budget until the end of their Nov. 20 meeting.

Budgets must include salaries in the level-funding, despite contract increases already slated to take effect. Superintendent Stephen Hart told the committee that preliminary figures indicate that without added revenues, cuts of approximately $250,000 to $300,000 will be necessary. The total budget is expected to come in around $5.3 million.

"It's not going to be easy," Hart said. "Those cuts have already been made.

Committee members want the town to understand the magnitude of the cuts.

"If we have a zero increase in the acquisition of equipment and a zero increase in maintenance of equipment, then we really have a problem," said committee member Ralph Kidder.

Determined to avoid the kind of misconceptions about the budget that created problems last year, the committee established a subcommittee to develop a strategy to educate the community before town meeting. Members serving on the subcommittee are Barbara Bliss, Nancy Sandell, and Dr. Christopher Ford.

In other business, the school committee approved the Special Education Annual Plan. The plan accounts for federal funds, evaluates the program, and sets goals and objectives for the coming year.

Currently, Cohasset is providing special education services to 188 children between the ages of 3 and 22. The total budget for special education is $669,000.

The committee also voted to join Hull and Norwell in sponsoring a three day seminar in instructional supervision. Cohasset's share of the cost is $800.

Committee member Russell Reidy was enthusiastic about the seminar.

"I think it's a great idea. I'd like to attend it myself," he said. "I'll bring the doughnuts!"

Kidder was equally supportive of the content and the cooperative nature of the venture.

"This gets at the subject of regionalization we talk about so much. This is wonderful," he said.

The committee also voted unanimously to send congratulations to David Magnussen, science teacher at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School. Magnussen was selected to participate in the Harvard University Mentor Teacher Preparation Program. Only 25 teachers were chosen from 400 applicants.

One of the highlights of the evening was a showing of an abridged version of Video Time-- the weekly cablevision show about Cohasset's school events.

Producer/Director John Packard, otherwise known as English teacher and audio-visual instructor, told the committee that the program would air on Channel 3 every Thursday at 7:00 p.m., with a repeat performance Mondays at 5:30 p.m. The show is edited from videotapes of student life and school events submitted by students, faculty, and community members.

Officials blame CHL for Rt. 3A stink . . .

The board of health member reviewed the four-year history of odor complaints along Rte. 3A. After the first complaints were issued, Cohasset Heights Ltd. hired a consultant to study the problem. His report was inconclusive, noting that it could be caused by a variety of businesses in the area, including Koko Island, a brook along Rte. 3A, or the storage tanks on the adjacent Williams property.

Since those situations have since been removed or repaired and the odor continues, Sullivan said that could not have contributed to the problem.

The DEQE conducted air quality tests, but there was no conclusive evidence that the odor originated at the landfill. The Barry's then installed a state-of-the-art carbon filtration system. "They spent a fair amount of money on this, but it has not been effective at all," Sullivan said.

Four weeks ago, Wess Gregory, another consultant, was hired by the Barry's to investigate the odors. The board of health had an air quality engineer from Camp, Dresser and McKee, accompany the consultant on a tour of the facility.

They both concluded that the odors were caused by hydrogen sulphide which results from the breakdown of general refuse deposited in the landfill about ten years ago. The decomposition creates leachate, Sullivan explained, which is contained within a collection system in the commercial landfill.

Gregory believes that the concentration of hydrogen sulphide in the collection tanks and the exhaust vents has resulted in the strong odors. CDM agrees with that assessment, but also thinks the odors are from the entire landfill and not concentrated in one area, Sullivan explained.

Gregory intends to develop a method which will prevent the oxidization of the sulphate within the leachate in the tanks and vents.

Sullivan expects that CDM will conclude its testing in a week or two. This process will begin immediately after the tests. CDM will continue to monitor the situation once the new process is put into place, he added.

"I'm fairly confident that after talking with Gregory, that this will make a lot of sense," Sullivan said. "But this problem has been going on for four years and my confidence would be the greatest if this wouldn't happen anymore."

During the past four years, Sullivan was convinced the odor originated from the commercial landfill. Once, when driving on a highway in New Hampshire, he noticed a similar smell. When he reported it to police, he was told it was from a nearby landfill, and the state had been fighting it for years.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted that the odors are volatile organics which are poisonous, and can cause reactions such as tearing eyes. "It has a deliterious effect on a person's health," she said. "I don't know why the board of health hasn't done more."

If there is a serious concern with the air analysis which will be completed by CDM within two weeks, then something will be done immediately, Sullivan replied. Otherwise, Gregory will continue to develop his procedure for the landfill.

Water commissioner Ron Goodwin, a longtime opponent of the commercial landfill, said there is no guarantee that the debris deposited in the commercial landfill is from demolition, as required by the amended site assignment for Cohasset Heights.

According to that amended assignment, there should be a spotter at the landfill who is responsible for checking the contents of every truck that enters the property. Although the health agent sporadically checks the contents, there is no one fulfilling that requirement fulltime.

"That the landfill smells is one reminder that these issues can't be forgotten," he said.

"We will do everything within our power not to allow Area five of Cohasset Heights to return to general refuse - everything," Sullivan promised. Two years ago, the commercial landfill was prohibited from accepting general refuse into the landfill, and was limited to accepting demolition debris. The consultants figure the odors are caused by the general refuse once allowed in the dump, which has since been converted into leachate.

But Sullivan, who has been a vocal opponent of the landfill, defended the owners of the property. "I don't believe Paul Barry is up there trying to take in general refuse. He's trying to run a good landfill. I know where most of the refuse comes from and there have never been any signs that it is general refuse," he said.

Sullivan said within the next two weeks, the pilot program designed to eliminate the odors should be in place at the landfill.

Murray co-sponsors Hate Crime bill

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R) Third Plymouth District is a co-sponsor of a so-called Hate Crime bill.

The bill which is co-sponsored by 51 other legislators, calls for the Commission of Public Safety to create a central repository for the collection and analysis of information regarding incidents of hate crime in the Commonwealth. Hate crime reports would be solicited from all law enforcement agencies, individuals, local human rights commission, advocacy organizations or anyone with knowledge of such incidents.

The bill would require the Department of Public Safety and the Criminal History Systems Board to establish a joint crime reporting unit to analyze hate crime data and to prepare annual reports on hate crime data for the Governor, the Attorney General, the joint Committees on Public Safety, Criminal Justice and the Judiciary, and the Senate and House Committees on Ways and Means. These annual reports would also be made available to the public.

The Criminal Justice Training Council would provide instruction for police officers in identifying, responding to, and reporting hate crime incidents.

The Milliken Field tests taken last week resulted in a coloform level between 10,000 and 30,000 parts per million. "That's very high," he commented, noting that swimming is prohibited in a beach when the coloform count reaches 200 parts per million.

Although Dr. Godzik said there are no immediate health threats posed to the athletes playing on the contaminated field, he would rather avoid any possibility of risk. The tests indicate that the bacteria originates from a mammal, although it is not known if it is being caused by human or animal waste.

Earlier, officials believed the contamination may have been caused by seagulls which flock to the playing fields, especially during rainy days. Dr. Godzik said the tests have ruled out that source, although the actual cause is still unknown.

He doubted whether the problem is caused by septic systems in the area, since Milliken Field, and particularly the practice field, are at a higher elevation than the surrounding homes.

"That's one of the mysteries here," Dr. Godzik said. "Sewage, or any water, does not flow uphill. So we can't understand how it could possibly be contaminated from a septic system.

"I've talked with a number of people about this since we took the tests last week, and it's really a unique situation. Everyone is at a loss to determine the cause."

GHR Engineering, which conducted the bacteria testing, may return next week to complete soil tests. That may give the town a better idea where the contamination is originating.

In the meantime, Dr. Godzik said, there is no practice or activity allowed on the two playing fields. But, he added, there is no danger to persons walking over the fields.

One parent recently talked to the health agent and said her son had a skin rash. Although he was not medically treated, and there could be variety of reasons for the rash, Dr. Godzik said the bacteria in the fields could possibly enter an abrasion in the skin, causing some form of infection and rash.

"That's a possibility, and until we know where this contamination is coming from, we just don't want to take the chance," he said. "At the present time it is more of an inconvenience than a danger. But there is always the possibility that if the bacteria entered the skin, it could result in a rash. This one incident could have been coincidental, but we really don't know at this point."

Torkildsen reception

Representative Peter G. Torkildsen, Republican candidate for Lt. Governor, will be holding a reception to meet with the people of the South Shore on Thursday, evening, Nov. 30. The reception is open to all, and is free of charge.

The event will be held at the Clipper Ship Restaurant, 7 Beaver Dam Road, Scituate. It will be held from 7 until 9 p.m. This event is being sponsored by South Shore Republican Town Committees.

Representative Torkildsen, who has been active in the on-going budget debates, represents Danvers and parts of Peabody (13th Essex District). He is currently serving his third term as State Representative, and is a member of the Taxation and House Post Audit and Oversight Committees.

Hussey meets Locke

Last week, State Senate Candidate Don Hussey met with Senator David Locke at the State House to discuss his campaign efforts with respect to winning the seat currently held by William Golden.

Hussey is a Republican candidate who is concerned with environmental issues, especially landfill alternatives, ground water management, and clean air standards. Also of prime concern to Hussey is education. "We should direct our energies toward establishing a cooperative effort to combine business and government to work closely with education to build a generation of young people who are willing and capable of picking up where we leave off," said Hussey.

Candidate Hussey attended and joined the South Shore Coalition last week.

Candidate Hussey also participated in last week's Task Force on Education forum held at Scituate High School. Board of Regents Chairman Paul Tsongas and South Shore Chamber of Commerce President Ronald Zooleck were the principal speakers at the meeting.

For further information on the Campaign to Elect Don Hussey call 749-5117.

Trustees vote to postpone new library fees fees, the community's history of gifts, endowments, and volunteer services will diminish.

Hayes warned the trustees that user fees also tend to be self-limiting: the higher the fees, the fewer the users.

If the trustees overcome that hurdle, they are prepared to discuss a number of possibilities.

According to Hayes, a fee for basic borrowing privileges would result in the loss of state library aid, membership in the regional library system, and membership in the computer network. The library receives $7400 in state aid.

Fees could be established for withdrawals of films, recordings, pictures, and museum passes; reserve requests; and for special reference and research assistance. Hayes fears that the amount of revenue generated might be at the expense of patronage and philanthropic giving.

Also under consideration is an increase in overdue fines and library card replacement charges.

Imposition of user fees is not going to come lightly. Not only do the fees and fines create ill will, but they require intensive staff time to process and collect, said Hayes.

The trustees asked selectmen and advisory committee for assistance in maintaining the current level of services that Cohasset residents expect from the library. At the present time, acquisition of books are running behind attrition because of age and damage. Given the high cost of books, level funding means a guaranteed reduction in library holdings, according to Hayes.

The advisory committee told the library to submit a level funded budget that absorbs wage increases and unavoidable cost increases.

"We will have to cut services to absorb those costs," said Hayes. "The library doesn't have anything to cut except the book budget and open hours."

Last year, the library was forced to cut the book budget by nine percent following a failed override. Some of the loss was offset by new gifts.

One strategy to keep the book budget at a realistic level that trustees intend to pursue is asking the Friends of the Library to discontinue donating Museum passes and dedicate the $2100 value to book acquisitions.

The Friends have also sent an appeal for contributions to every household in Cohasset.

Hayes is optimistic that residents will understand and come to the aid of their free public library. He fears that user fees will undercut library use by children and residents unable to pay a fee.

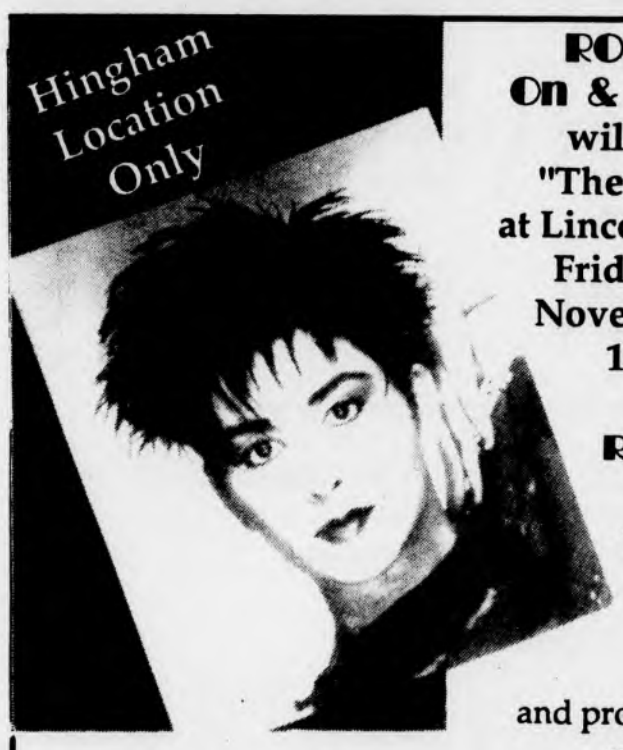
"We believe that the library is a public good, not a private need."

Cohasset recycling news...

The following, another in a series of weekly articles on recycling, was written by Recycling Committee member Jennifer Longley.

Did you know that one Sunday issue of the New York Times uses 68,000 trees?! Cohasset residents can help to lower that, and other such numbers, by recycling. For example, 5-10 percent of that newspaper is printed on recycled paper. That percentage can be increased as is demonstrated by the Los Angeles Times for which 83 percent of the paper is recycled. As Cohasset continues to implement, and begins to strictly enforce, its mandatory recycling by-law, it is useful to consider why recycling is so important. The reasons are both economic and environmental and at that, not mutually exclusive.

It has been estimated that each person in the U.S. generates about 3-5 pounds of solid waste each day. The average household generates about 3 tons each year, and since 1920, the amount of solid waste generated in this country has risen 5 times faster than the rate of population growth. What this all means is that the throw-away society, once welcomed when it began in the 1940s, has accelerated out of control. No one argues that there is now a solid waste crisis; in the U.S., in Massachusetts, and in Cohasset.



Eighty percent of Massachusetts' landfills are either at capacity, or will be within five years. Recycling will certainly greatly extend the life of our landfill as well as saving the town money. For example, each ton of paper recycled saves three cubic yards of landfill space. As was mentioned in last week's article, it costs the town $60 per ton to dispose of all unrecycled trash.

Cohasset Agrees
CARE
to Recycle Everything

WHY RECYCLE?

The environmental reasons for recycling are compelling. Recycling conserves resources but the process of recycling also conserves energy and water, and produces less pollution than the processing of virgin materials. Recycling aluminum achieves a 90-97 percent energy savings, and a water savings of 97 percent. Recycling paper achieves a 23 to 74 percent energy savings, uses 58 percent less water, produces 74 percent less air pollution, and 35 percent less water pollution. Recycling glass saves 4-32 percent of the energy, uses 50 percent less water, and creates 20 percent less air pollution.

Recycling, and thus decreasing the volume of waste needed to be disposed of, reduces our reliance upon incinerators. Burning trash releases both toxic chemicals and toxic ash into the air. This is compounded by the fact that several of the state's incinerators are old and have no pollution devices on them. The more we recycle, the less we burn. The incineration of plastic is particularly dangerous, releasing, among other toxins, dioxin. Many manufacturers are now packaging their products in containers made from recycled materials, for example, some cereals, detergents, pasta and cake mixes. Recognize these items by the recycling symbol displayed on the box. Buying recycled packaging supports this environmentally sound practice by manufacturers and discourages irresponsible and wasteful packaging. After all, 50 percent of the trash we produce is packaging.

Cohasset Branch Manager Helen Garvey on credit cards.

"THE BIG PROBLEM WITH MOST CREDIT CARDS IS THE BIG NUMBERS THEY CHARGE."

One of our checking account customers came in the other day to ask about our credit cards.

He said he had a Visa® from Citibank and a MasterCard®

from Chase Manhattan. And that he was tired of paying these big-city rates. (In his case, the annual interest was over $600.)

I showed him that if he switched to Rockland Trust, he'd be saving himself over $100.

Then I looked up at him and asked: "Wouldn't that money be doing you a lot more good if it were in your checking account?"

He just smiled and asked me for an application.

around town

❑ The Whiteley household will be an active and happy one this Thanksgiving! Gordon and Ann just became the parents of Bryn Elizabeth Whiteley, born on Oct. 18 at Newton Wellesley Hospital. So, Kyle and Megan have a baby sister and grandparents have a brand new granddaughter to spoil! Both sets of grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Severt and Rev. and Mrs. F.J. Whiteley, live in Canada, the Severts in Stratford and the Whiteleys, in Lakefield. That is more than an "Over the River and Through the Woods" journey, that's for sure! Happy Thanksgiving to you all!

❑ Plans are well underway for an upcoming benefit, to be held December 9. As most of you must have read, Ken Silvia lost his lobster boat when it exploded at sea a few weeks ago. Luckily he was rescued, but his boat, and livelihood are gone. So a dinner dance is being held at the American Legion, on December 9 from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. The tickets are $25 per person (that includes all of the roast beef that you can eat) and all are welcome. Plan to be there, and help Ken purchase a new boat! If you cannot, there has been a fund set up at the Cohasset Savings Bank. Please call Larry Souza for further details.

❑ Happy birthday to Roger Pompeo! Be sure to extend your best wishes, this may be the last one that he will admit to!

❑ There was a skating competition held recently, at the Rockland Rink. It was the Winterland ISIA Annual Competition, and once again some fine Cohasset gals "did their thing." We congratulate Kim Ward, 13, who won a first in Freestyle and a second in interpretation; Michelle Ward, 10, a second in competition and a second in spotlight; Kara Protulis, 14, who won a second in freestyle, a first in foot work, a first in interpretation, and a first in spotlight; Lauren Wood, 17, who won a first in freestyle, a first in footwork and a first in couples; and, Michelle Buckley, 10, who won a first in freestyle, a second in footwork and a second in interpretative. Take your hat off to these girls when you see them, they have worked long and hard at their talents to earn these medals, and they should be applauded!

Cohasset resident John Cuneo (third from left,standing) stands with other members of "Second Helping", an emergency food relief program, to congratulate the winner of a 1990 Corvette. The car was the grand prize in a contest benefitting Second Helping. With Cuneo are; (l to r) Peter Harrigan of NYNEX, George Downey of Second Helping, Westy Egmont of the Boston Food Bank, and David Urban of Porter Chevrolet. The winners are Mr. and Mrs. Austin Kairnes of Rhode Island. The B. C. Eagle gives the thumbs up sign.

❑ Lauren Wood has another accomplishment that is really worthy of mention! She skated in the USFSA competition, the Boston Open, held at the Boston Skating Club. It is an extremely prestigious event and Lauren earned a second in Freestyle! The Woods are going to have to build a trophy room onto their home! What a proud and happy family they must be!

❑ It sure is great news that the minister of the Beechwood Church and his wife are finally home. As most know, Steve and Marge Hall were in an accident in England, and they had a long siege there while recuperating. They are back and they are delighted to be here! Here's hoping they continue on the path to a rapid recovery.

❑ Speaking of recovery, we hear that Joe Nedrow is home from the hospital and doing nicely. That will surely make for a very happpy and thankful Thanksgiving at the Nedrow home!

❑ Hats off to the CHS Soccer team, all we can say is WOW! The boys were very impressive and you be sure to tell them so when you see them (you will recognize them by their hats, Lucy Marsac made them all nifty ones). Tell the boys how great they all are. They deserve it.

❑ Don't forget the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's House Tour! It is scheduled for December 7, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. with a boutique and tea included. The price is $20 for the day's worth of fun, and tickets may be purchased by calling 383-9341 or 383-9270. Don't miss it!

❑ We hope that Babe Trott is out of the hospital and recovering nicely from her recent surgery! Get well soon!

❑ Robert and Kimberly (Messner) McClelland of Cohasset are the parents of a girl born October 30 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ William and Mary (Ambrose) Foley of Beechwood Street are the parents of a girl who was born Nov. 11 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ Matt Beggan, a native of Cohasset, recently completed his freshman season as a member of the Saint Anselm College men's soccer team. Beggan, a graduate of Cohasset High School, played midfield for the Hawks this season.

❑ In its first undefeated season since 1978, the Belmont Hill Soccer team remained unbeaten, winning the Independent School League Championship with a total of 29 out of 30 possible points and 14-0-1 record. They scored 46 goals and only allowed eight to be scored upon them. Brian P. Pompeo, son of Arthur M. and Nancy L.Pompeo of Cohasset, helped the strong defense.

❑ Cohasset resident Jonathan Chase, received an EDM degree in Human Movement (Physical Education) from Boston University this fall.

❑ Congratulations go to J. Gaston, artist of the month at CHS. If you get the chance, take a look at his drawings, paintings and designs that are on display outside the Art Room at the high school.

❑ Finally, don't forget the 49th Annual Village Fair! Preparations are really geared up right now, with everyone working overtime to get it finalized! If you aren't able to contribute your time to this grand event, be sure to get there with your $$$, you'll be glad that you did! The Fair is a super place for the kiddos to do their Christmas shopping, adults too! See you there!

❑ That's the news for this week. We would like to extend warm and happy Thanksgiving wishes from our household to yours and remember, any newsworthy event that happens is news for us too! Give me a call!

Jean Valente (left) and Linda Campbell put the finishing touches on some paper angels and other gift items being prepared for the Cohasset Village Fair on Saturday, Dec. 2.

Annual Village Fair and dinner, Dec. 2

Workers for the 49th annual edition of Cohasset's Village Fair are in the final week of preparations for the benefit event to be held Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Helen Hooper and Betty Enders, co-chairs of the book committee, have received a first edition of E.B. White's classic "Charlotte's Web." The book will be sold at a silent auction to be conducted at the book location in the rear of Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House.

The book department also includes an extensive collection of sports books donated by Ken Coleman, the retired "Voice of the Red Sox" and a Cohasset resident. This collection is in addition to the library from the estate of a prominent Cohasset resident and more than the usual array of fine children's books.

Marsha Silvia and Carol Sandblom, presiding over the Bargain Bazaar this year, are considering an Elite Bazaar section for the sale of some more valuable antiques and jewelry. Saturday, Nov. 26, from 10 a.m. to noon, will be the last time for depositing Bargain Bazaar items being collected in the basement of St. Anthony's rectory on South Main St.

Meanwhile tickets for the articles and services being offered in the rafile are on sale.

More than 50 dolls will be offered at the fair. Many of the dolls will be going on display in local stores.

Aegean Fare Restaurant owner Mike Vallas has agreed to turn over all proceeds of sales between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., Dec. 2, to the fair treasury.

With the congregation of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church taking the leadership role this year, a menu of Baked Lamb, roast potatoes, and a gourmet presentation of artichokes, topped off with a Greek dessert, will be featured at the traditional Village Fair Dinner in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2.

The dinner will be prepared in the church kitchen and served by young people of the Greek church. Tickets are now available from representatives of the participating Congregational, St. Anthony's and St. Stephen's churches as well as the Panagia church.

To add to the holiday atmosphere, a brass quintet made up of Cohasset High School musicians will be playing at various locations throughout the day. The renowned carillon of St. Stephen's Church, recently enlarged and partially replaced, will be sending out Christmas music.

Get involved now

It has been a volatile issue in Braintree and Weymouth for several months. Clean Harbors Inc., a Braintree-based company, wants to construct a hazardous waste incinerator in East Braintree.

The plant would be located on the shores of the Fore River, adjacent to the Citgo petroleum storage tanks and the proposed MWRA sludge treatment facility. It would be situated within a congested neighborhood, filled with single family homes - families with children or elderly residents.

As soon as plans for the facility were made public, neighbors expressed their strong opposition. They were soon joined by concerned residents throughout Braintree and Weymouth.

But it took many more months before anyone other Weymouth and Braintree residents joined their ranks and spoke out against the proposal.

Suzanne Anderson, a Hingham resident for the past eight years, wasn't really aware of what was happening on the other side of the Fore River Bridge. She has a family to look after and is busy working as an accountant for a family-run business.

It wasn't until her father came to visit that she was awakened into action. Her father had been involved in a similar fight against a plant proposed in northeast Texas. He had read all the material he could get on the subject, and in the end he was convinced this plant would be a nightmare for everyone. He told his daughter she should be absolutely "terrified" of this proposal, and she should fight it with all her might.

Suzanne says it's not apathy that prevented the intervention of other South Shore residents. Rather, it was their lack of knowledge about the proposal. News coverage of the planned incinerator frequently did not reach Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate residents. And they were never told that the fearful effects of the toxic waste incinerator will reach far beyond the borders of Braintree and Weymouth.

With the help of Gini Kurtzman, Anderson has initiated a local group to stop the incinerator. Hingham Organized to Protect our Environment (HOPE) will hold its first public informational meeting Monday, Nov. 27 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hingham town hall. Residents from throughout the South Shore are invited to attend. There will be people there who have become experts in this new technology of toxic waste incineration. They will talk about the process and answer questions from residents.

This is an issue that should concern residents in Cohasset, Anderson says. While Proposition 2 1/2 overrides are grabbing local headlines and are admittedly important issues in our town, Anderson feels this proposal must take precedence.

After all, who wants to live in a home when there is an incinerator down the road fuming 9,000 pounds of toxic particles into the atmosphere each year? She argues that our homes will not be of any value if there is an accelerated cancer rate in the area, or if accidents occur at the plant which causes illness or death.

We urge all residents to join in Monday night's public information meeting. We must all become better informed about this issue that not only affects our neighbors next door, but also the community in which we live.

Town Hall holiday hours

Just a reminder - town hall will be closed Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 23 and on Friday, Nov. 24. It will reopen for business Monday, Nov. 27.

Student says ignorance is not bliss

Letters

To the Editor:

Writing in response to last week's editorial by Robert Flavell, I am a college student paying for my tuition without any aid from any source not disincluding my parents. I am currently working twenty-five hours a week in addition to a full-time course load.

I don't know what has upset me more, your obvious stereotypical impression of the college student or the fact that there are a myriad of ignorants similar to yourself, residing in Massachusetts as taxpayers. This pandemic of ignorance is contributing if not indirectly causing the disintegration of our State School System. And it is the media sources, such as The Cohasset Mariner, that sensationalize the inaccuracies contributing to this ignorance. The misinformed is led to believe by such sources that the State Colleges are not hurting from all the recent budget cuts.

I have had the privilege of attending the University of Massachusetts at Boston for the past three years. I have had nothing but success at this praiseworthy institution. It is only during this first semester of my junior year, that I have become enlightened to the devastation of what the future holds for my education. Upon returning to UMass/Boston for spring semester, I am to anticipate more than the usual renovations. The walls between classrooms will have been knocked down in order to increase class size, in some cases, 300%. This is not merely a threat. This is an actuality. The construction crews have been hired.

The drastic budget cuts have forced the university to lay off professors, hence the increase of class size. To say that the quality of our education will be diminished is a gross understatement. Could you ever realistically conceive of being taught, or, equally agitating, teaching Virgil's Aeneid in a class of three hundred students? I doubt it.

In closing, although I am fortunate enough to have the ability of quoting from Shakespeare, I choose instead to alter an overused cliche: In your case, ignorance is not bliss.

Sincerely,
Chantal M. Stone
Main Street

Education is a primary concern

To the Editor:

By beginning Executive Editor Robert Flavell's denigrating appraisal of the state's college students with a quote from Shakespeare, you lead one to expect that what follows would be an erudite criticism, an expectation that is unsatisfied. Throughout your sad commentary you refer to students and taxpayers as separate factions but what you fail to recognize is that the majority of those who marched in protest of the state's horrendous mismanagement of funds are both workers and students, an oversight that renders your editorial meaningless. There exist many individuals, including myself, who must take on the additional responsibility of a part time job to afford a higher education and who find your blind generalizations offensive.

You seem to be unaware that the protest was sanctioned by the Chancellor of UMass at Boston so I do not expect you to understand that the students' primary concern is the fate of their education and of their universities, and the protest was not motivated by an anxiety over inability to pay "grass and booze bills." Your insistence upon viewing students and workers as distinct entities betrays an arrogance shared by the man whose managerial and judgmental errors have cast the state into its current fiscal crisis. Recall that Lear's lack of self knowledge caused him to misinterpret the events which occurred around him; I suggest to you that you heed Kent's advice to the man too obstinate for his own good, "see better Lear."

Sincerely,
James E. Dowling

Thank you, Cohasset coaches

Dear Coaches:

First off, I'd like to thank each of you for the great job you have done with the 1989 soccer program. Cohasset is very fortunate to have a group of individuals willing to donate time, effort and expertise to the extent necessary for the smooth operation of a program of this magnitude. It goes without saying, that each youngster involved in the program joins me in gratitude for a job well done.

We will make up the games lost to inclement weather on 10-21-89, on Saturday, November 11. If you would tell your players that we will follow the schedule for 10-21, on November 11, it would be appreciated. Also, the games scheduled for Sunday, 10-22, can be made up on Sunday, 11-12-89.

It is my hope that each of you, in reciprocation of your hard work, have found the satisfaction and gratification that most often manifests from working with children. I am able to assure you, that you have been a very important person to each of your team members, and the scope of your influence upon them has been great.

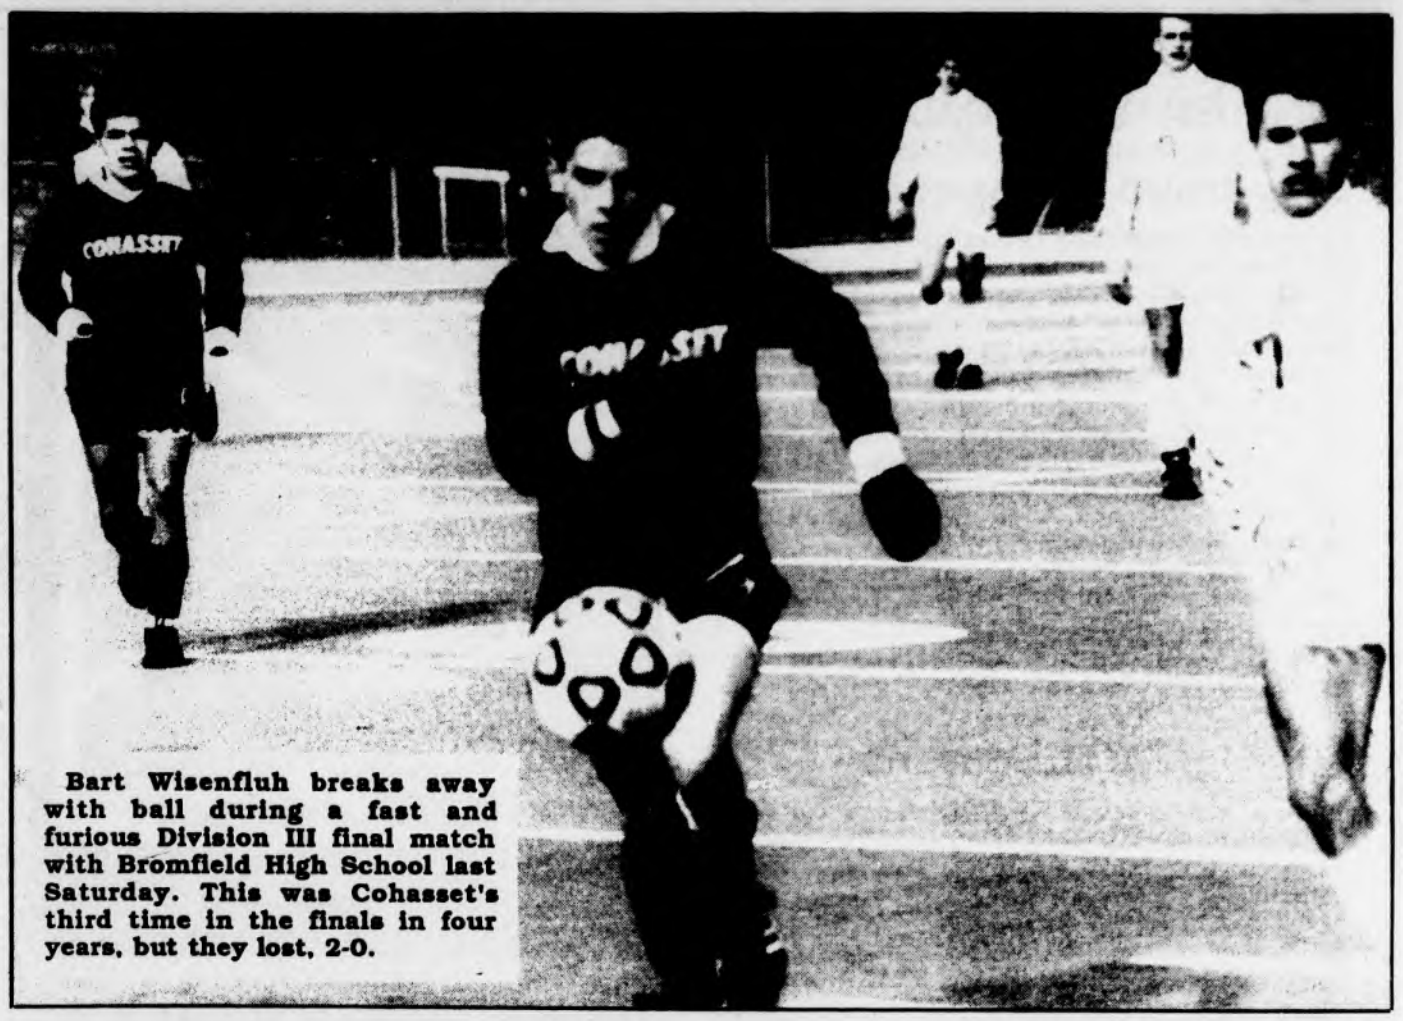
Should you have any questions about the make-up games that are scheduled for November 11/12, please do not hesitate to call. I realize that the make-up could present a problem to some of you, as it is scheduled past the regular season. Should you have other obligations, and not be able to attend, please inform us.

Very truly yours,
John M. Worley

Cohasset soccer in Division finals

For the third time in four years, the Bromfield High School boys soccer team has denied Cohasset an opportunity to win the Division Three state title. Unlike the two previous contests that resulted in overtime victories, Bromfield dominated this contest from beginning to end, coasting to a 2-0 decision at Worcester Polytechnic Institute November 18.

Another factor that led to Bromfield's win was having Jim Reidy, the all-time scoring leader for Cohasset, sidelined with a broken right foot. Reidy suffered the injury at the end of the South sectional match against Medway November 13. At the time, he thought it to be a bruised tendon and played against Marblehead two days later. However, x-rays on the following day confirmed the break and the three-time South Shore league all-star forward was put in a cast.



Less than 12 minutes in the first half Mark Dutkewych hit a ball in the strong wind from nearly 20 yards out on the right side. The high shot curled to the upper left corner of the Cohasset net, hit the post and went in.

Bromfield (21-1) made it 2-0 nine minutes later when Glenn Melus sent a low pass across the goal mouth to James Caprio, who kicked it into the wide open net.

Even with the wind at their backs, the Skippers (19-3-1) had difficulty getting scoring chances in the second half. Travis Coley and Gregg Nourie worked well in the midfield but forwards Linc Marsac and Jason Cameron were continually met by a strong Bromfield defense.

Cohasset's best bid came with six minutes to play when Marsac broke through the Bromfield defense but 25 yards from the goal his scoring attempt was broken up.

Joel Reidy, a high school All-American goalie, made 13 saves for Cohasset. Bromfield, meanwhile, outshot the Skippers, 15-5.

Bart Wisenfluh breaks away with ball during a fast and furious Division III final match with Bromfield High School last Saturday. This was Cohasset's third time in the finals in four years, but they lost, 2-0.

Gregg Nourie pulls some fancy footwork on the opposition.

Team co-captain Joel Reidy (right) stands with a dejected Jason Cameron as the score reflects bad news for Cohasset.

Garden club to meet Nov. 28

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will open its holiday festivities Tuesday, Nov. 28 at noon with a tea and program presented by Dottie Temple, former Chief Floral Decorator at the White House.

Temple will present a slide and flower arranging program titled, "Christmas at the White House."

She is a native of Massachusetts but now divides her time between Little Compton, R.I. and Mallorca Spain. She pursues her "retirement" lecturing all over the world, teaching and custom decorating. She resigned her position at the Reagan White House in 1985 after four years. Prior to that she served as a consultant during the Carter, Ford and Nixon years. Her 30 years of experience in decorating for Presidents, Kings, Queens and other world notables have left her totally unflappable with quick wit and humor under the most difficult conditions.

This past year Temple was invited to lecture in the Republic of China. She is a contributing editor for the Time Life books series Decorating with Plants and Flowers, is a board member of the American Horticulture Society and is International Editor for Flower and Garden magazine.

Fleuri will be located in the newly-opened Pride Building at 56 South Street in historic Hingham Square. Fleuri is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. In-home consultations, available for a fee, can be arranged by calling Belanger at (617) 740-4367.

A sentimental Thanksgiving game

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Every Thanksgiving the high school football game between Cohasset and Hull comes down to a physical, intense and emotional contest. However, this year's fifth annual affair might take on a new feeling — sentimental.

When the two teams clash on November 23 at Hull High School, it could signify the last time they will face each other on Thanksgiving.

Cohasset (2-6) will not field a varsity squad next year due to the declining enrollment figures in the entire school system. To ease the problem of being overmatched and oversized every Saturday afternoon, the Skippers will retain the Junior Varsity team, hoping to give some kids more exposure to football and a chance to be successful.

Cohasset head coach Phil Pisano thinks the team should take a sabbatical for a year. "I would like the JV program kept if the school cannot field a varsity squad next year. Possibly getting back to the varsity level in 1991," said Pisano, who is finishing his eighth season as the Cohasset coach.

For Hull (3-5-1), meanwhile, they are fighting the numbers game as well.

"We continue to be undermanned in every contest," said Hull head coach Charlie Richardson, whose team won last year's meeting, 12-0, but still trail in the series, three games to one.

"However, this will be the first time that we've played an opponent who is equal to our size. I think we are going to see a fair game."

"The Thanksgiving game is special. Most players remember this game the most. With a victory, it can either make or break a season," Richardson said.

The game will start at 10 a.m.

Mass. Audubon visits Osgood

Last week as part of the PSO Curriculum enrichment program, David Clapp of the Massachusetts Audubon Society visited all 2nd and 3rd grade classes to talk with the students about the nature trail at the Osgood School. After Mr. Clapp's presentation, Margaret Cotter took the classes on the nature trail as a reinforcement to what they had learned. The following article was written by Mrs. Schadhauser's Third Grade class:

A Talk and A Nature Walk

Recently Mr. David Clapp, a lecturer from the Mass. Audubon Society, visited all 2nd and 3rd grade classes at the Joseph Osgood School. He taught our class that leaves are the food factories for trees. He also told us that tubes in the trees carry sap up and down and after many years the hollow tubes get pressed together and form wood. Mr. Clapp said that some trees learned to protect themselves by growing thorns or producing poison in the bark. That is because animals and insects learned that sap is sweet. Humans discovered that the sap of sugar maple trees could be made into syrup. Humans found out that most medicines are made from plants. For example, Native Americans figured out that if they chewed the stem of the meadow sweet it released the chemical "aspirin".

After Mr. Clapp's presentation, the classes took a nature walk on the Osgood trail with Mrs. Cotter. We observed the old foundation of a farm with two "wolf" trees growing beside it. These trees were large with rounded shaped crowns because they were there before the present woods and didn't have to compete for sunlight. Next, we hiked through some wetlands until we came to an open space where a lonely apple tree grew. Mrs. Cotter said that this tree was proof that once upon a time this had all been farm land.

Monte Carlo wrap-up

The 1989 Monte Carlo Night fundraiser was a huge success and over $4,000 was netted for use by the Cohasset Public Schools! People enjoyed themselves immensely and there were many comments about the elegant ambiance of the Cohasset Community Center and the delicious hors d'oeurves and desserts provided by Roebuck's of Hingham.

The chairpeople, Cheryl Bugley, Mary Margaret Senechal and Allison Ulmer would especially like to thank Deedee Nicynski and Janet Amiri for the beautiful decorating, Reed's Nursery of Hingham for the loan of two dozen potted plants, John Kornet for his suave piano playing, Rhonda Meyers for her glitzy bags and decorations, Donna O'Donnell for transportation of the plants, and Elaine Coyne and Donna for our publicity, Claudia Story for her gorgeoous flowers, Beth Christoffel for her help at the door and the High School Music department for loan of a keyboard.

We would also like to thank the many people who donated items for our auction - Fleuri Home Fashions, Decorating by Kathleen Fox, a "rabbit rock" by Linda Keller, Celtics tickets by John Carr, Cleaning by Doreen Pride, Ste. Michelle wine by Bryan Welz, Navona Restaurant, Hugo's, overnights at Boston Harbor Hotel, Boston and Waltham Guest Quarter Suite hotels and Angie Walsh for Mary Kay Cosmetics. We also greatly appreciated our many dealers, without whose help the evening would not be possible.

The fifth grade news

At Deer Hill School, Mr. Deakin, our fifth grade Social Studies teacher, took his three classes to a presentation on baskets given by Mrs. Crafts. The fifth grade team is studying the Indians and the way they lived long ago. Mrs. Crafts brought in various kinds of baskets to show us. She told us about the different types of materials the baskets were made of. These included white ash, straw, reeds, and many other materials. She explained how they were decorated, and how they were used to gather food. Everybody liked the presentation and thought it was very informative.

varsity team is out.

"We're all really up for this game - it's really the biggest game of our season - probably because it's going to be the last for a while."

Although he will miss next year's traditional game against Hull High, McCarthy thinks it was a wise decision to eliminate a varsity team next year. It will give the younger students time to mature emotionally and physically, he said, and perhaps there will be more students to participate in the sport.

"Right now, we're really concentrating on Thursday's game," McCarthy added. "I guess the fact that we'll be the last ones to play won't hit me until after the game."

Chatterton, who played quarterback for the Skippers from 1955 to 1958, feels badly about the decision to stop varsity action next year. "I think the whole community feels badly," he said. "It's just part of the whole problem - fielding a number of teams in a small school."

Chatterton emphasized that the decision to end varsity action was not based on budget considerations. "Actually," he said, "football is a money maker for us. By dropping it we are actually going to lose revenue. We might be saving $5,000 by dropping varsity football next year, but we take that in on Thanksgiving Day.

"Conversely, when we decide to put the varsity program back, it won't be costing the town any more money."

Chatterton said until next year, when there is no morning football game to attend, when alumni can't mingle with friends from the past as Hull meets Cohasset, the community can't fully realize the impact of cutting the varsity team.

"It will be emotional," he said. "The Thanksgiving Day game is such a tradition in Cohasset - just about everybody attends. I don't think most people will feel too badly until this time next year."

Phil Pisano has been head coach at Cohasset High for the past six years. Before that he was assistant coach since 1981.

He's not sure if he will be staying on after this year. But it's not as if he wasn't warned.

"I'm pretty realistic about this. The numbers are just extremely low, and we've seen that for a few years," he said. "In terms of juniors and seniors for next year - I think we have about five for next year. We have a good crop of sophomores and freshmen, however, and that's a good sign for the future."

Pisano goes along with the decision not to field a varsity squad in 1990. Physically and psychologically, Cohasset could not compete with a team comprised mostly with young students. "It would be physically impossible. For safety reasons I wouldn't want to see a varsity team next year. It would be putting very young kids in a difficult, treacherous position, and we wouldn't do that," he said.

The last game of the season is always the biggest, he agreed, and the students will certainly be disappointed without a traditional football game on Thanksgiving, he said.

"But we've got to face reality and do the best we can after next year," he added.

There's at least one Cohasset resident who doesn't see the end of the Hull-Cohasset rivalry as the end of the world.

Cohasset Skippers tri-captains Pat Conroy, Joel Whitman, and Sean McCarthy are looking forward to their Thanksgiving Day game against Hull High. Photo by Dave Sullivan

Gerard Keating, who quarterbacked the Skippers in '36 and '37, said this won't be the first time Cohasset will be without a game to go to on Thanksgiving.

"Oh no. We've gone this route before," he explained. "In the 1933-34 season, there were some incidents aboard the players' bus to Hanover. I think a window in the bus was broken. And in their short-sighted manner, the school committee then decided to punish the players by eliminating varsity foot ball for a while. It didn't make much sense because it was the freshman and sophomores who were punished for something the juniors and the graduating seniors did."

Keating, who later had six sons who played football at Cohasset High, said the community managed quite well without the traditional Thanksgiving Day game.

"Although it was a ridiculous punishment, everyone survived," he recalled.

By his senior year, there were only 17 kids on the varsity squad. But Keating remembered that there was no trouble holding practices or competing in games. "We could makeshift and we survived," he said.

"Nowadays, the coaches spend too much time having these kids knock the daylights of each other Monday through Thursday. All they really need is two days of contact practice at the most, and then give them time to rest. It will help avoid serious injury - it will eliminate injuries and make the kids stronger as they go into the game."

Keating continued, "Having had six sons play high school football, some at the college level and two in the pros, I know that coaches should spend more time teaching techinques and getting them physically conditioned, rather than having these young boys knock the daylights of each other. The pros have practices with less contact than the high schools.

"And if we stopped all the contact practices, we'd have enough kids who were smart enough and conditioned enough to play," he said.

Keating, who still has rarely missed a Cohasset High Thanksgiving game, had two sons who entered the world of professional football. Chris is a former player for the Buffalo Bills and Washington Redskins, and Brian tried out for two years with the Baltimore Colts.

"You know, I'm not as alarmed as most people about ending the varsity team next year," Keating said. "We are very competitive in other sports, and we're a small town. It's not that unusual to have to stop one sport for a while.

"With the availability of funds reduced now, I guess there could be a concern with the cost of the sport. But I'm sure that football will continue to survive in Cohasset."

A traditional member of the Cohasset crowd at the Thanksgiving Day game is Superintendent Stephen Hart. He agrees that the full impact of the team's elimination probably won't be felt until this time next year.

"It's a time when people in the community come together. Alumni and parents look forward to meeting their friends from the past. It really will be a loss for everyone," he said.

The superintendent is hopeful that the tradition will be reinstated the following year. "It's just not possible for next year," he admitted.

"But we're hopeful for the following year," the superintendent added. "Then maybe we can pick up where we left off this year."

Students sand paint results

Fifth Grade Sand Paintings. On November tenth the students of the fifth grade met at one fifty to sand paint. The children used assorted colors to make Indian drawings or symbols, though some people drew their names. When real Indian sand paintings were made they were made by a medicine man to cure his patients. The Indians believed that if the painting was good it would cure the patient but if the painting was bad, the patient would die.

Fifth grade sand paintings

Last Friday the kids of the 5th grade team did sand paintings for artist of the month, with Mrs. Jenkins and Mrs. O'Donnell at last period. They looked at little pictures of real Indians, and played music to go along with the sand paintings.

It's wrong to burn flag

This week I received a paper on the American flag. I think it's wrong when people burn and wear the flag on their clothes for no reason at all. Our school would like a new flag because ours is old. But we would like it from the capital of America if we could.

Give to charity

Over the years at Deer Hill, the students have been more than generous in their giving of presents to the faculty at holiday time. The faculty requests that this year students do not give them presents but rather give something to a charity of their choice. Thank you.

Cohasset worship...

St. Stephen's Church

EVENING COFFEE RESULTS

Our stewardship Evening Coffees drew 50 parishioners to talk of our dreams for St. Stephen's. Many ideas were shared. If you would like a summary of these, they are available at the church office.

NAMES FOR VESTRY

The Nominating Committee, chaired by Pam Earle, is receiving names of persons to serve on the Vestry. The Vestry is the governing board of the church specifically charged with responsibility for finance and property. The next year will see a lot of planning and envisioning for the future of the church. If you know people you think would be an asset to this task, please forward their names to Pam Earle (383-1666), Sally Avery (383-6043), John Smoot (383-1195), and Mary Beth Curry (383-9104). The last day for receiving names for Vestry nomination is Sunday, December 3.

CONFIRMATION CLASS

Confirmation Class for youth grades seven and older began Sunday, Nov. 19 at 4 p.m.

Six sessions are planned leading up to Bishop David Birney's visit with us for confirmation on Sunday, January 14 at 10 a.m. Confirmation is the reaffirmation of the promises made at baptism—to turn away from evil, to turn toward God, and to follow Jesus. It is expected that every mature member of the Episcopal Church will have made such a declaration. At confirmation the Bishop prays for each person that God's Spirit within may be made strong so that each of us may live out what we promise.

ENQUIRERS' CLASS

Adults interested in learning more of the Episcopal Church's expression of the faith attended a first class this Nov. 19 at 7 p.m. We read together the book, We are Theologians: Strengthening the People of the Episcopal Church. Participants in the class may choose to be confirmed, received, or reaffirm their faith when Bishop Birney comes on January 14. It is expected that all adult members of the Episcopal Church will have made such a mature public affirmation of their faith.

COMMUNITY THANKSGIVING EVE SERVICE

An ecumenical service of Thanksgiving will take place on Wednesday, November 22 at 8 p.m. at First Parish (Unitarian). All town churches are participating with choirs from each joining together in song. The organist for the service will be our own choirmaster, Robert Barney. Let us join together in a town-wide service of thanks.

THANKSGIVING DAY EUCHARIST

A celebration of Eucharist (which means thanksgiving) will take place Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 23, at 9 a.m. We will worship early enough to get home for the family meal, travel to visit relatives, or to the nearest sporting event. Begin this day of thanks with worship at St. Stephen's.

VILLAGE FAIR SHAPING

Children's Activities during the fair include face painting, cookie decorating and other fun occupations. If you can help with these at the fair on Saturday, December 2 please call Nancy Swatek at 383-9992.

The plant table also needs volunteers. All who enjoy working with plants will meet at Bates Hall, November 27 through 30 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. to make boxwood trees and centerpieces. If anyone would like to work on projects at home for the plant table, Sheila Wallingford (383-6897) has projects and and supplies.

LOOKING FOR DONATIONS AND WORKERS

The Village Fair is drawing near, and I am looking for candy bakers, penny candy donators and table workers. Some candy suggestions are: fudge, popcorn balls, peanut brittle, homemade lollipops. For the penny candy table: gummyworms, lollipops, small candy bars, gum, were all favorites. We also could use any Halloween candy that you might have left over. If you can help please call Mary Sullivan at 383-6666.

AN OLD FRIEND IS BACK!

If you arrived early for the 10 o'clock last Sunday, you were treated to the first formal playing by Sally Slade Warner of the newly renovated Carillon. A "Cadillac" quality instrument is the way Milford Myhre, our consultant and carillonneur of the Bok tower, describes it.

Except for finishing up the area around the keyboard, some cosmetics and lighting, the job is about complete. An "open house" tour of the tower will be held when the final work is completed, certainly within the next few weeks. More about that later.

Community Garden Club's house tour Dec. 2

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

You don't have to wait until Dec. 25 to celebrate Christmas in Cohasset. Thanks to the Community Garden Club, seven of Cohasset's treasures will be opened on Dec. 7 as part of the annual house tour sponsored by the club.

Club members expect people from all over New England to take the tour of historic Cohasset. Making the tour will carry you from seaside to countryside with stop-offs in the village. Whatever your tastes-- colonial, contemporary, or French Normandy-- there's a house to fit your fancy.

The club has chosen the houses to reflect a variety of periods and styles in architecture and interior decorating. As an added treat, the club will deck the halls in Christmas finery to give tour-goers some ideas to try at home.

No one knows how many annual tours the Community Garden Club has sponsored. The first tour happened one summer in the '60s and became a Christmastime event in the '70s.

Each tour is unique. A home will not reappear on the tour unless it's been extensively redone or it's been a long time since it's been seen.

Hostesses will be at each home to provide information about the decor, architecture, and collectibles in each home.

Lovers of bunnies and Oz fanciers will find the Jerusalem Road homes particularly fun to visit, while a remarkable doll house awaits on North Main Street.

A Royal Barry Wills design on Deep Run was chosen to demonstrate how an owner can combine display an outstanding collection of within a modern setting antiques. Melding something old and something new is also part of the Howard Gleason Road home. The original part of the house is the oldest on the tour, but has been substantially expanded and decorated in what the club brochure describes as "an up-beat, contemporary style."

Views of Minot's Light are emphasized in the design and decor of the Mediterranean contemporary on Atlantic Ave.

This year something special is happening at the seventh house on the tour. The club will have a tree decorated to attract wild birds to your yard, their newest cookbook, "Cohasset Entertains, Encores", will be on sale, and samples of an hors d'oeuvre or canape recipe from the cookbook will be available. As an added treat, a harpist will provide background music. The house itself is a little more unusual than others on past tours. It's tucked away on Beechwood Street overlooking the Bound Brook and Aaron Rivers and is decorated in a minimalist style to keep the eye on the spectacularly panoramic vista.

Veteran tour-goers know better than to follow the geographical route-- by bouncing around they avoid the crowds and get a better view of things.

A tea luncheon is included in the price of the ticket to revive flagging energy. The tour is an adults only affair.

The Community Garden Club sponsors the house tour as a fundraiser. Money from the tour supports a wide range of activities, including scholarships for Cohasset students, beautification projects at the High School, Constitution Park, the Lathrop House (Cohasset Historical Society, and the Community Center. The club has also installed nature trails at the schools and supported the Audubon Society and various other conservation projects.

Tickets are on sale now. They sell out early, so club members suggest buying tickets as soon as possible. Last year the tickets were gone by the first of Dec.

Risk takers can wait and see if any are left on the day of the tour and show up at the Bates Bldg. in Cohasset village.

Even if you can't manage to get a ticket, you can still attend the Community Garden Club's boutique. Handmade mussel shell wreaths, starched bow baskets, and a host of other items to lend a special touch for holiday homes are available for purchase. You can even spend your megabucks ticket money on their raffle. In addition to the gift basket from Fleuri, a gift certificate from Peridot, and a lamp from Flemings, raffle buyers have a chance at a bat autographed by Wade Boggs and a ball autographed by his team mates.

Tickets are available from members of the house tour ticket committee:

Arlene Ferreira-- 383-9341/1832
Helen Brady-- 749-1262
Doris Swain-- 383-6682

The following businesses also have tickets for sale:

Streamlining the search for the Word

For centuries, mankind has searched the Scriptures, seeking passages which provide needed guidance, wisdom, and light for living. In this age, our need for the Word continues. But now there is Concord, a new, easy-to-use software program which streamlines the search.

Even if you've had no computer experience, Concord can streamline your search for the words that unlock the Word.

Come use Concord at the Christian Science Reading Room, 18 North Street, Hingham, during National Bible Week, November 20–25, 10 AM–4 PM (Monday and Tuesday, also 7-9 PM), except Thanksgiving Day.

New HOPE to fight against Clean Harbors

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Fact: The proposed Clean Harbors Inc. incinerator will burn 90 million pounds per year of some of the most hazardous wastes and toxic chemicals known to man.

Fact: It will contaminate the population, water supply and environment up to 40 miles away through stack emissions, despite state-of-the-art pollution control devices.

Fact: Children and the elderly are especially susceptible to health problems which result from air pollution.

Fact: It is not simply a Braintree issue.

According to Suzanne Anderson of Hingham, if a hazardous waste incinerator is built on the shores of the Fore River, its damaging effects will be felt by communities throughout the South Shore.

It was just a few weeks ago that Suzanne's father paid a visit to her Fearing Street home. He was reading about an incinerator planned by Clean Harbors that would burn about 90 million pounds of hazardous material each year.

"He said to me, 'This is terrifying,' and he wondered what I was going to do about it," she recalled.

Her father told her about a consultant's report about a similar facility planned in Lone Star Texas, where he lives.

"He told me the plume from the incineration goes anywhere from 10 to 40 miles from the site.

"The Clean Harbors plant would be releasing about 9,000 pounds of toxic chemical particles into the air each year.

"That's when I became terrified and decided this was something I had to try and stop," she added.

It had been sort of a one-woman crusade for a while, as Anderson would stop people in the supermarket or at the post office, telling them about the regional effects of this planned incinerator.

Now she has been joined by others, including Gini Kurtzman of Lazell Street in Hingham.

And, a new committee has been formed - Hingham Organized to Protect our Environment. The citizens' group is holding its first public informational meeting Monday, Nov. 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the Barnes Auditorium in Hingham Town Hall.

Anderson hopes to attract residents from other communities as well because this is an issue that doesn't stop at the Hingham border.

This is not about company-bashing, Anderson said. Clean Harbors, she believes, has promised to follow EPA federal regulations. And there is no reason not to believe the company, she said.

Gini Kurtzman and Suzanne Anderson talk about their new group, Hingham Organized to Protect our Environment, in an effort to block the proposed Clean Harbors Inc. incinerator in East Braintree. (Jane Lane photo)

But those regulations are troubling. They will allow .01 percent of the toxic material particles to be released into the air after incineration.

In other words, Anderson explained, about four-and-a-half tons of toxic particles — including lead, heavy metals, dioxins, zinc, acids and mercury — will be released from the proposed incineration stack.

Eighty to 90 percent of those emissions fall within two miles of the site, and 10 to 20 percent fall anywhere from 10 to 40 miles from the facility, depending on the prevailing winds.

"Incineration," according to Kurtzman," is a fairly new phenomenon. And, unfortunately, throughout the country it has been documented that we are learning by one disastrous mistake after another.

"This site is one mile upstream from Boston Harbor," she added. "It's unbelievable when you think we're spending millions to clean up Boston Harbor and now they're trying to place a hazardous waste incineration plant and a sludge treatment plant just one mile upstream."

Clean Harbors, Kurtzman explained, is planning to store about two-and-a-half million pounds of toxic materials on site. "If there is an accident, that material could flow right into the Fore River," Kurtzman said, adding that people should not confuse the two Fore River projects.

Clean Harbors Inc. is proposing the incinerator; the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority is considering a sludge treatment facility nearby.

Anderson got involved in this fight in late September. After an article was published in The Boston Globe about her efforts, Kurtzman decided it was time to join the crusade.

"Personally," Anderson said, "people talk about the importance of an override for the school system and the importance of recycling at the town dump.

"But the way I feel is that it will all be irrelevant if this thing goes through.

"No one will want to live in an area that has been polluted by a hazardous waste incinerator.

"It will have a major impact on everyone's lives. not just the people who live next door to it."

Studies have shown that a similar plant in Chicago has caused elevated cancer rates in the area surrounding that facility. And the nearest neighbors are two miles away, not 700 feet, as in the East Braintree location, Anderson noted.

"A lot of people don't understand that this plant will be burning hazardous waste from as far south as Maryland, west to Illinois and north to Canada.

"We have a responsibility to manage our toxic waste from this state, but must we also manage toxic waste from other states?". Kurtzman questioned.

Residents of the South Shore are not insulated from the effects of this plant, they said. Each day, hundreds of commuters from Scituate and beyond travel past the proposed site across the Fore River Bridge.

"A lot of life revolves around this area," Kurtzman explained.

But in their conversations with residents, the HOPE members have found that many people are unaware of the proposed Clean Harbors plan.

"It is most striking," Anderson said. "Most people are simply not aware. Once we start giving them the information, they become very concerned.

"That's why we want to get a lot of people to this meeting," she said. "There is a lot of information, and we have to get it out to the people."

When people ask Anderson's four-year-old son, Whittaker, what he thinks about the proposed incinerator, he immediately replies, "It's bad stuff. "

His mother adds, "But we're going to beat it."

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XII, No. 10 | Thursday, November 30, 1989 | 60 cents

Transfer station marks the end of 'town dump'

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Without fanfare, Cohasset stopped landfilling on Nov. 17. Although the official opening ceremonies are slated for Saturday, Dec. 2, Cohasset residents have been using their new recycling-transfer facility for almost a week.

Health board member Sharon Becker says things are going nicely. The only glitch was an unexpected box office business.

"The amount of trash was a surprise," said Becker. "The trailers filled up more quickly than we thought."

The biggest difficulty occurred on Sunday when the trailer was filled by noon and it became necessary to open the landfill.

The board of health anticipated receiving no more than 10 to 15 tons of trash per day. They estimate that they have been taking in 20 tons a day.

According to Becker, an extra trailer will be on site to handle any overflow.

The recycling is going well. The recycling committee handed out guides on recycling during the first few days. Alternative School students prepared signs directing recyclers to the proper bins.

Health agent Dr. Joseph R. Godzik also thinks part of the ease in transition is that recycling is nothing new in Cohasset.

"People have been doing it for years," he said.

Godzik said that although the system out at the transfer facility might cause folks to be "a little bit confused, once they use it a few times, it will be easy."

At this time, Cohasset is recycling newspaper, corrugated cardboard, glass, aluminum, yard waste, heavy metal, tires, and returnable bottles and cans.

The town gets the most money for aluminum, so Becker is hoping that lots of people will use disposable pans for their holiday roasting and baking.

Adding tin cans and plastics to the list of recyclables is high on the health board agenda. Becker said that polystyrene recycling at the schools is in the works, and office and computer paper collection at both the schools and the town

Buckley finds time to help disabled

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Like her parents before her, Michele Buckley feels compelled to give back to her community.

She may be physically limited, but Buckley, a 1968 graduate of Cohasset High School, is ready and willing to offer her extensive knowledge and experience as the town's first representative to the National Organization on Disabilities.

Buckley, who just turned 40 this week, is a lifelong resident of Cohasset. She was born with cerebral palsy, but finding it an impenetrable barrier was never even considered.

She attributes that overload of positive thinking and inspiration to her parents, Ray and Patricia Buckley, her three siblings who grew up on Forest Avenue, and 54 first cousins.

"I started physical therapy at four months," she said. "When my parents were told I had cerebral palsy, the family accepted it and we did what we had to do from there.

"I can't say enough for my parents," she added. Buckley's mother is a longtime member of the town's conservation commission and has been active in town politics for many years.

Buckley was mainstreamed into Cohasset schools from the start, although that term was not even coined when she attended school here. "Sometimes I would tell the teachers or other kids that I had CP and they would say to me, 'you do?' I could walk and get around and I did most of the things all other kids did," she recalled.

But after 15 years of physical therapy, Buckley underwent two serious operations on her right foot

Neighbors worry about Clean Harbors

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

More than 100 persons this week attended the first informational meeting sponsored by HOPE - Hingham Organized to Protect our Environment, and listened to warnings issued by that citizens' group against the proposed hazardous waste incinerator.

Longtime activists opposed to the proposed East Braintree facility came to Hingham Monday night to fan the flames of their fight against Clean Harbors They included Suzanne Anderson and Gini Kurtzman of Hingham, founders of HOPE, Dave Jenkins of Weymouth, founder of Citizens Organized to Defend the Environment, and Braintree Selectman Frank Toland.

And in the end, spokesmen for these citizens' groups said it will take legislative action to stop Clean Harbors from constructing a 24-hour hazardous waste incinerator along the shores of the Fore River. Kurtzman urged residents and local officials to pressure state legislators and senators into taking action against the facility.

According to Jenkins, who began his involvement

Business expansion concerns chief

Cohasset's police chief says crime isn't on the rise, as indicated in statistics released last week by the state for the first six months of this year.

Percentages can be deceiving in a small town such as Cohasset, where one reported robbery will double the total reported the previous year, he explained.

What does concern Chief Joseph Kealey, however, is the growth of business in Cohasset, particularly along Rte. 3A, and the probability that his department will be unable to adequately serve an expanding business area.

Currently, there is one patrol car per shift that travels through the Beechwood neighborhoods, along Rte. 3A to North and South Main streets,

The one area in town where reports of theft are up is along the business-zoned state highway. And Chief Kealey doesn't believe the situation will get any better.

I never believed what we have now is adequate. If we went lower than that - you can forget about it.
Police Chief Joseph Kealey

"The business there is unbelievable for any community - nevermind for a small town like Cohasset. And pretty soon there's going to be two more malls there. I'm very concerned that we won't be able to handle it," he said.

Although an increase of business is good for the town's tax base, it only causes more strain on an overly burdened police department, according to the chief. There is one officer per shift assigned to that stretch along the state highway, including a densely-populated residential area in Beechwood

Cohasset's week

Fees for landfill stickers

The Board of Health has set the following schedule for purchase of the new annual Recycling Transfer Facility stickers.

All Cohasset residents who personally dispose trash at the Recycling-Transfer Facility RTF) on Cedar Street are required to purchase a new sticker in order to gain entrance to the site. Trash is accepted at the RTF on Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The annual sticker fee is $52 per household, and is valid through December 31, 1990. If more than one family vehicle is used to bring trash to the RTF, one additional sticker may be secured at no cost. Vehicle registration information/documentation must be provided when applying for the new sticker.

Checks are to be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. Stickers are to be placed on the passenger side front bumper.

On Saturdays and Sundays, stickers will be sold at the RTF 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. only December 2 and 3rd, 9 and 10th, 16 and 17th.

They may also be purchased at the town hall Board of Health offices, floor 2B during normal weekday hours.

Wish lists reviewed

Cohasset selectmen got their first taste of the five year wish lists of the harbormaster, council on aging, and the tree and park department as they reviewed preliminary capital budget requests.

Harbormaster Irving Gadow will be seeking $10,000 to replace the floats near the Salt House in fiscal 1991, nearly $23,000 for three new floats at Government Island in fiscal 1992, $25,000 for a new Boston Whaler work boat in fiscal 1993, and $10,000 to replace the ramp at Margin Street in fiscal 1994.

Chairman Burtram Pratt praised Gadow's budget as "well thought out."

"It seems like a reasonable request to me," said Pratt.

Other selectmen urged Gadow to look into the possibility of state and federal aid as well as offsetting some of the cost with user fees.

The Council on Aging anticipates replacing the senior shuttle van in 1994 at a cost of approximately $19,900 less any trade-in.

The present van is logging at least 20 miles a day and the over 60 population is growing by leaps and bounds in Cohasset.

Also projected for fiscal 1994 is a $725,000 senior center, but Council on aging chairman Gerard Keating told the selectmen not to lose any sleep over the sum.

"In my lifetime, I don't think it's going to happen," said Keating.

Keating also told the selectmen that he is presenting the item in spite of the fact that their present location at the community center is perfect, because "things can happen."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested that the council explore the availability of the McCall Building in the center of town. Keating said he would.

Tree and Park superintendent Peter Laugelle gave them the most numbers to chew on.

When asked why he gave them a six year projection instead of the requested five, Laugelle replied, "because you gave me six lines to fill."

Laugelle is hoping for a ride-on multi-purpose mower in fiscal 1991 at a cost of $16,850, a $60,000 sprinkler system for the common in 1992/93, another $60,000 to reset the granite curbing around the common in "93/94, replacement of the winch truck in '94/95 at a cost $35,000, reloaming and reseeding a portion of the common near Beach Street for $40,000 in "95/96, and refurbishing Government Island Park in 1996-1997 for $12,000.

The sprinkler system was the item that the selectmen found toughest to swallow.

"That would be considered a luxury item in some quarters," warned Chairman Burtram Pratt.

Refurbishing the park at Government Island had more support than some of the other items. The selectmen suggested that Laugelle move that project up to the middle of his schedule.

Laugelle defended his plans to reloam and reseed.

"Once you get dry weather, the wind blows and the loam goes," he said.

Selectmen also approved step increases for Peter Laugelle and building department secretary Sandra Murray.

Cable TV going up

Cohasset cable watchers better prepare for another price increase.

Continental Cablevision will raise the monthly rate for its basic service package by $2 beginning Feb. 1, 1990.

The rate increase will affect six South Shore towns, including Cohasset, Scituate, Hull and Norwell.

The $2 increase means the basic service package will go from $13.95 to $15.95 per month. Continental's general manager John Walber said the rate hike was caused by increased expenses for the company, including higher fees charged by programming networks and increased employee wages and benefits.

The monthly charge for additional TV cable outlets will rise from $4.95 to $5.95 and the cost of a remote control will go from $1.95 to $2.25 per month. The rate for premium channel services will remain unchanged, according to Walber.

No dramatic club flag

All the Cohasset dramatic club wanted was to be able to hang out their flag at town hall whenever they are doing a production inside.

They wrote to the selectmen seeking permission to affix a small metal flag holder to the building for that purpose.

Chairman Burtram Pratt raised the matter for them at the Nov. 28 selectmen's meeting. He called their plans "circus-y". Pratt thinks the dramatic club gets quite enough free publicity with their street banners and signs.

Selectmen Diana Kornet questioned the aesthetics of the flag holder and the precedent that it would set.

"I'm not sure I like the idea of a little metal fixture on the side of the building," she said, although she did say she loved their over-the-door banners.

Ultimately, the club lost its bid in a four to one vote. Selectman Rocco Laugelle was the lone holdout.

He just smiled and asked me for an application.

Clean Harbors neighbors express their concern against the facility two and a-half years ago, the incineration issue goes far beyond the Braintree border. Clean Harbors is planning to construct a rotary kiln incinerator in a heavily populated area, he said, noting that 200,000 people live withina five-mile radius of the site.

According to studies he has reviewed over the past two years as a member of the Weymouth and the Braintree local assessment committees, Jenkins has concluded that more than 90 million pounds of hazardous waste will be burned at the plant each year.

And although he agrees that Clean Harbors will utilize state-of-the-art tcchnology, Jenkins said he and others are concerned with the .01 percent of toxic particulates which the EPA will allow to be released from the facility into the atmosphere. They are microscopic particles that include heavy metals and toxins such as dioxin, benzene and toluene that are emitted through the steam that rises from the incinerator. Jenkins said two years of study have concluded that these particles will be released by the proposed East Braintree facility. That steam plume, the cloud of smoke released from the incineration stack, will travel into the atmosphere as far as 40 miles, he added.

"A lot of their (Clean Harbors) work is commendable," Jenkins said, referring to the company's efforts in hazardous waste recovery. "But to proposed an incinerator in the middle of a heavily-populated area is not very good thinking."

Hingham residents and those in communities far beyond should realize the potentially dangerous effects of locating a hazardous waste incinerator in a densely populated area, he added. The danger of a spill into the Fore River would effect the coastal area into the Back River and Hingham Bay, according to Jenkins.

Clean Harbors has also proposed a two and a-half million pound storage facility on the site, which Jenkins believes poses a safety hazard considering its proximity to the Citgo fuel tanks along the Fore River.

Much of his opposition to the Clean Harbors facility was formed during a visit the Weymouth assessment committee made to a hazardous waste incinerator in Chicago. Although that site is located in a sparsely-populated area, Jenkins said the atmosphere there has been polluted with heavy metals that escape as particulates. "We have to worry about those particulates," he warned.

Jenkins also criticized the monitoring supervision which is regulated by the state and federal Environmental Protection Agency. One such regulations allows the proponent to conduct trial burns when weather conditions are optimum, he said. Massive budget cuts in state regulatory agencies have all but depleted the monitoring of air quality by an independent source.

"The real problem with hazardous waste incineration is with the materials that aren't destroyed, but are created," he ssaid, explaining that some hazardous waste materials, such as dioxins, are simply products of incomplete combustion which escape through emissions. Other particles are released through leaking pipes and there exists the possibility of explosions at the plant. These chemicals can be absorbed by humans through the lungs or by the skins. Once they enter the lungs, the particles tend to cling to the blood stream.

As an employee of the insurance company which paid liability claims related to the infamous Love Canal pollution case, Jenkins said he is opposed to locating an incinerator in such a populated area "where people are going to get hurt. It's a very big problem."

Frank Toland, another longtime opponent of the Clean Harbors facility and now a Braintree selectmen, urged South Shore residents to pressure legislators into opposing the incinerator.

"This is clearly not a Braintree issue. It goes beyond that and is growing to all communities," he said. "It goes beyond science and technology and to the quality of life for everyone in this area."

If you live within that 40-mile radius of the emission's plume, then you must be aware of the consequences, Toland warned. When surveyed, a panel of Florida scientists said they would rather live nextdoor to a prison, an airport, or a nuclear power station, than a hazardous waste incinerator/

People should be aware that this toxic waste, which will be shipped in from as far north as Quebec, and west to Chicago, will be transported on our state highways. There are questions as to whether the material will be shipped on the proposed Old Colony railroad system, he added.

Toland also noted that Clean Harbors have employed several people with politicial connections. The former head of the MDC, and a former DEQE official are now top officials at Clean Harbors, Toland said.

But next year is an election year, he noted, and residents should make candidates and incumbents aware of their opposition."Let our officials know that we are carrying our vote to the ballot box - that is our voice," he said.

Cindy DeChristofaro of the Quincy Environmental Task Force, shared her concerns about the possible detrimental health effects of the East Braintree incinerator.

She agreed with Jenkins that the emissions monitoring is not adequate, and noted that state and federal regulations are not stringent enough to protect the public health and safety.

In a report issued by the Department of Public Health last July, it was recommended that the hazardous waste incinerator should be considered a potential future environmental impact in the area.

"There are a lot of unknowns right now," DeChristofaro said. "And there is a great concern about those unknowns. It is frustrating to us because we'll have to wait 20 to 40 years for the outcome to be disagnosed."

She said a request to Clean Harbors that an air monitoring device be located on Stoddard's Neck in Hingham was denied by the company. DeChristofaro was critical of the company's refusal to consider alternative locations. Because Clean Harbors owned the East Braintree property, they were not even required to go through a public siting process, she explained.

The secretary of environmental affairs and the governor is where the buck will stop as far as Clean Harbors is concerned, she said. They will make the final judgment on this facility. Public pressure to oppose the site will bear considerable weight in their decision, according to DeChristofaro.

"We have the facts. We're just trying to get those facts out," Jenkins added.

No 'public execution' for Clean Harbors

Clean Harbors wasn't asked to join Monday night's informational forum in Hingham, and with good reason. After experiencing a few of these meetings held by the opponents of the hazardous waste incinerator, both sides knew better.

A spokesman for the Braintree company likened the process to a public execution.

Suzanne Anderson, a founder of Hingham Organized to Protect the Environment, admitted that Clean Harbors was not invited to the public meeting.

"We have the facts on our side," Weymouth's Dave Jenkins proclaimed to the crowd, saying the incinerator opponents have asked Clean Harbors to face them in public debates, but their invitations were declined. "They are avoiding us like the black plague."

Karen Clancy, a spokesman for Clean Harbors, disputed that statement. "We have the facts on our side. We have information from the best consultants and the best-qualified engineers. We are working with the EPA and MEPA. Nothing will be built that does not meet their standards."

Clancy also recalled that at one time incinerator opponents declared in a CODE newsletter, "if we play their game - if we try to fight them only with facts and figures - we will lose."

She said the proposed incineration process will release cleaner emissions than those from surrounding industries. "We will be using technology from the 90's," she explained. "It is the newest technology, more efficient and a better quality. We have 50 years of proven technology to back us up."

Clean Harbors, she said, plans to exceed the EPA standards which require that 99.99 percent of all toxic materials be destroyed in the incineration process.

"There will be no negative health impact from this incinerator," she said, adding that the opponents are spreading a "fear campaign" through the South Shore.

"To say that people in Hingham will get cancer from this incinerator is simply whoopla - a scary fear campaign without any basis in fact."

Regarding the charge that Clean Harbors will store two and a-half million pounds of hazardous waste on site, Clancy said that is incorrect. There will be no storage on site, rather the material will be shipped to the incinerator will it will be burned. Currently, the Braintree company ships hazardous materials to its headquarters, where it is stored until it is transported to an off-site hazardous waste incinerator.

Opponents have decried Clean Harbors' decision to locate the incinerator in a heavily-populated area.

Clancy replied, "If they are opposed to incineration in the city, they'll be opposed to it in the country. If they think it will be harmful in the city, will they change their minds and say it won't be harmful in the country?"

Many of the Clean Harbors opponents have scoffed at the company's practice of hiring former state officials and environmental agency employees. William Geary, former head of the MDC, is now director of public affairs at Clean Harbors. There are also former federal and state EPA officials now on the company's payroll.

"A lot of people who worked in the state environmental agencies had a good training ground before they set out for corporate employment," according to Clancy. "The state is a good training ground for these environmentalists.

"In regard to Mr. Geary, he was wooed by many private corporations when he decided to leave the MDC. He has said the least pressure was applied by Clean Harbors. With his solid background in public relations, advertising, and writing, I can't think of a more qualified person to head this department.

Buckley is finding time to assist disabled and had a muscle transplant in her right hand. For the first time in her life, she knew what it was like to be confined within a wheelchair, separated by physical barriers.

"I was never learning disabled, but I knew then what it was really like to be physically disabled," she said.

It was a feeling she would never forget.

Her greatest barrier came in high school, when Buckley found herself unable to learn to drive a car. While her friends took off in their cars from school, Buckley was often left alone.

She had taken and passed the written test, like all her friends. But she needed special controls on a car, a knob on the steering wheel to help her control the car, and a special left-foot gas pedal "because the reflexes on my right side are nil," Buckley explained.

She took it upon herself to find a driving school that would accommodate disabled drivers. She found that school in Taunton, and at 20, Buckley became the proud owner of a Massachusetts driver's license. Freedom was hers.

"It was exhilarating and scary," she remembered. "I thought, 'oh my God, I did it!' It was a huge step for me."

She now owns a specially-equipped car and travels extensively on her own.

Buckley graduated from college and attended Anna Maria College in Paxton. She earned a degree in special education, and is now working toward a master's degree in school librarianship from Bridgewater State College.

Her first love is children, she explained. And her second love is books. Her career as a children's librarian, now working at the Whitman Public Library, seemed a logical combination for this caring, effervescent woman.

"I've always loved people - I love talking to them and helping them," she said. "People always say I'm smiling and happy, and I guess they're right. I have a good disposition - I guess that's why I work well with children and the elderly."

In 1986, Buckley ran for public office and was elected to a term on the board of trustees of the Paul Pratt Library. For the first time in her young life, she now realized that her beloved library, a sanctum where she had spent hours, was actually a business with a complicated budget to oversee. "Boy, did I learn a lot," she exclaimed. Buckley did not run for re-election because of her job and her studies at Bridgewater State College.

That sense of responsibilty has continued. Not long ago, Buckley was reading an issue of The Voice, a newspaper published in Wellesley specifically designed for the disabled. There was an article about this new national commission, and it listed those communities which had committees addressing the needs of the disabled, and others which had appointed representatives to the national commission. Cohasset did not appear in either list, she recalled.

"I let it ride for a while, and then I thought that this could be one way I can give something to my community. This was a way to become involved again," she said. Buckley immediately submitted her name to selectmen for consideration as Cohasset's liaison to the national commission. She was appointed in mid-October.

Buckley's prime responsibility now is to seek members for a local commission on handicapped awareness. She has already talked to a number of people who have expressed an interest on serving on such a committee.

Once that local commission is formed, they can begin to formulate goals for the future, such as ensuring the creation of programs and employment opportunities for all citizens, ensuring that all buildings and facilities are accessible to the handicapped, and encouraging mobility in the community, such as carpools and vans for the handicapped.

"It's a big job," Buckley admitted. "But I think the effort will be worth it. We're talking about disabled people who want to live in this community, and we can help them lead a normal life. At least, we have to let them know what's available to them."

This commission can look into the social, religious, education and art opportunities available to the disabled. They will be an information clearinghouse for these residents, who may include people with physical disabilities, such as polio or CP. And there are those afflicted with mental handicaps and learning disabilities.

"I want this commission to be a resource and an advocate for the handicapped in Cohasset," she said. "I am already an advocate, but we need more."

Buckley decided long ago that she wanted to make life a little easier for people who sometimes find it difficult. "If I won't do it, who will? I know what they are going through - I've experienced it," she said. "We need this commission and they need our help."

Buckley is seeking the participation of other residents who would like to serve on a local commission for the disabled. Although they will concentrate on short-term goals for the immediate future, there are longterm initiatives, Buckley explained, including affordable housing for the disabled and assuring comparable educational opportunities for everyone.

"This is exciting and I'm happy to be a part of it. This is going to be the start of something new for me and the town," she said.

Chiropractic for Health

STRAINING BELIEF
Fully eighty-five percent of the people who incur back pain by improper lifting will experience the pain again later in life. While it is initially easy to blame back muscle strain on raising a heavy object, the real culprits are the muscles that attach to the spine and pelvis. They reach from the stomach, thigh, back, hips, and buttocks to the spine and pelvis. If these muscles are not taut and balanced, there is room for a sudden jolt to throw the spine and pelvis out of line. As a result, certain overcompensating muscles will strain at the exertion of a lift. The idea is to keep muscular support balanced around the spine. This will give the spine a strength and flexibility that will resist strains.

The end of the 'town dump' . . .

offices is contemplated.

The recycling committee plans to work closely with local businesses to assist them in complying with the recycling regulations.

Although recycling was made mandatory in Cohasset at Town Meeting in April 1988, no enforcement is possible until the official regulations have been published.

According to Dr. Godzik, town counsel is reviewing those regulations now.

"I'm sure we'll have them very shortly," he said.

Once those regulations have been printed in the newspaper, enforcement will begin.

Landfill superintendent Joseph Laugelle will make spot checks of trash bags on a random basis. Failure to stop at the recycling bins might increase a resident's chances of having his trash "audited".

Godzik says the board of health will have a "three letter system" for enforcing the regulations.

The first letter will inform the resident that recycling is mandatory in Cohasset, while the second letter warns that if the person violates the regulations again, he or she could lose the privilege of using the recycling-transfer facility.

A third violation brings a letter telling the person to appear at a hearing to determine whether the privileges ought to be revoked.

If the good news is that all is going smoothly at the $500,000 facility, the bad news is that residents have until January 1, 1990 to purchase the new $52 sticker to gain entrance.

Chief concerned with Rte. 3A . . .

and along the Village.

If next year's budget is cut further, requiring a reduction in personnel, there will be only two officers per shift - with only one officer on patrol.

"I'll tell you right now if there is only one man out on patrol throughout the town, as far as I'm concerned, they're not going to stop any crime. I never believed what we have now is adequate. If we went lower than that - you can forget about it."

The chief noted there is a correlation between increased business and more crime, such as thefts of motor vehicles and goods stolen from cars parked at those malls.

"It happens in towns like Hanover, and it will happen here," the chief said. The only deterrent Cohasset can offer is the presence of a marked police cruiser in those business areas. "Sometimes, people complain when they see a cruiser just sitting in a parking lot. What they don't understand is that the officer is sitting outside a bank or a jewelry store, and no one is going to go in and rob a store when they see the officer right there."

But that is a service Cohasset will be unable to offer around-the-clock for its growing business owners.

"We can patrol there up until nine or 11 p.m., but we can't forget the rest of the town either," he added.

Right now, there are 17 officers on the Cohasset Police Department including one plainsclothes detective. Eight years ago, before the onset of Proposition 2 1/2, the department boasted 18 fulltime officers.

And there are no assurances that things will get better.

For the past nine years, the police department's operating budget has remained at $54,425 - a figure Chief Kealey has memorized.

"That's insanity - having the same operational budget for nine years," the chief stated. Next year, the department may be forced to cut back if they are not allowed an incremental increase to cover negotiated salary increases. Because those contracts must be paid, reductions would have to be made in the operational budget, unless they are allowed more budget monies.

"The advisory committee must let this town know what their police department would be if we are forced to cut back," the chief said. "People must expect their taxes to rise if they want the same type of services."

If the department loses just one officer, it will decerase the number of officers per shift. That, Chief Kealey said, will effect the public safety within this community.

The town twice denied a Proposition 2 1/2 increase to finance repairs to the decaying police and fire station. But Chief Kealey would rather keep his officers while the building crumbles around them.

"If I had to choose, I figure we could stay in this building. If the roof leaks, we'll wear raincoats.

"But this town needs its police department and we need officers to staff this department," he added.

around town

❑ Hope that your Thanksgiving was a happy one, and that all of your family "gathered together" were able to make it after the snowstorm we received! The poor football team certainly had its share of confusion . . . most wound up at the high school thinking that there was a game when in fact it was postponed. Talk about confusion even the Boston Globe had its problems the next day! We saw a perfect picture of number 88, Sean McCarthy, only the name under it called him Rich Asbvacci! And Kurt Ludlow's name for the day after Thanksgiving was Pete Drummey! Guess Moms had to put the pictures into the scrapbooks without the names! Anyway congratulations to you boys, and to all of you for a fine season. The whole team did an exceptional job and you should all be proud of your efforts.

❑ Happy birthday greetings go to John Litchfield. May the coming years be as great as the last one was!

❑ Don't forget the two events to get you in the Spirit of Christmas that are going on around town . . . the Village Fair is this Saturday, and it is a great place to let the kiddos do their Christmas shopping, and let Santa know what is on their list. And the Cohasset Community Garden Club has their house tour; a fabulous way to get ideas for decorating your own home. Don't miss either event.

❑ William and Mary (Ambrose) Foley had a special reason to celebrate a joyous Thanksgiving this year. They had a brand new daughter born on Nov. 11 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ Emily Reardon knows how to start of a season with spirit. She will be starring in Thayer Academy's production of "A Christmas Carol." What fun, and we know that she will be grand.

❑ Hats off to the PSO, who awarded grants to several of the teachers to continue or begin programs that wouldn't be available due to the money crunch. They have really lived up to their promise to help the student and the teacher, and you should support their various fundraisers whenever possible.

Joel Carpenter (far right), 6, of Cohasset is one of the star models for the fashion show which will be held Dec. 3. The fashion show will benefit the Boston Floating Hospital for Infants and Children.

❑ We have spotted Martha Grinnell around town, looking super and feeling the same. It is nice to have you back, Martha.

❑ We sure do congratulate N. Frank Neer, who recently joined the Panorama Television Network as vice president of sales and marketing. Frank will be responsible for directing sales and marketing for the network's The Visitors Channel, the 24-hour television station that is all about Boston. Frank is an extremely talented fella, and they are smart to have chosen him for the job!

❑ Happy birthday to Laura Pompeo.

❑ Katie Horn, Kristin Ellinger and Alison Riley will all be happy gals when they next visit Cohasset High School! They had a dream concerning the court yard there, and the dream had its beginning recently, when a flowering crab tree was planted. Added to all of the other things (wooden benches in memory of Billy Wilmore, a pear tree for Dennis Reardon, and bulbs to honor Christine Burke among them). Anyone can contribute to the courtyard, and should! Keep a memory alive and growing, and beautify a courtyard at the same time! A nifty idea, gals.

❑ Finally, in case you missed it, tonight is the last night to register for ski lessons, arranged through the Cohasset Recreation department. There will be five weeks of lessons for a price of $80 per person, lessons begin on Jan. 4. The fee covers lessons and transportation, with an optional $8 equipment rental. Sounds like fun!

That's the news from here, please call me and let me know what is going on in your house! Holiday time is news time!!

❑ Joel Carpenter of Cohasset will be participating in "Fashioned For Life," a children's fashion show to benefit the Hematology/Oncology clinic at The Floating Hospital for Infants and Children.

Six-year-old Joel will be modeling fashions from Zabin's Clothiers of Cambridge at the Lafayette Hotel's Grand Ballroom on Sunday, Dec. 3, at 12:30 p.m.

The fashion show is open to the public. Refreshments will be served and a cash bar will be available. Tickets are $25. For more information, call the Division of Hemotology/Oncology at 956-5536.

Selectmen transfer license to new Cushing Plaza store

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset selectmen got an impromptu lesson on bankruptcy law from town counsel. Richard Henderson to help them deal appropriately with new developments in the continuing saga of Cohasset Meat and Produce, Inc.

The supermarket in Cushing Plaza filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 in U.S. Bankruptcy Court. Cohasset Meat & Produce, Inc. has debts of $1 million. Ferrara & Sons is owed $200,000 of that amount for groceries and supplies.

Under Chapter 11, owner James Hoban was allowed to continue running the business.

"But we observed unsound business practices by the debtor and we asked the court to give us possession," said Pessia.

Last week, the court ordered possession to be taken by James J. Ferrara & Sons.

"We have been running the store on a limited basis since Nov. 22," said Michael Pessia, director of legal services for Ferrara & Sons. Cohasset Meat and Produce, Inc. is still technically the owner.

Ferrara & Sons intends to run the business until the court makes further orders in the matter. Options are for the business to come out of reorganization or for the liquidation of the business.

If the business is liquidated in the future, Ferrara & Sons may bid on it.

Ferrara & Sons own and operate ten supermarkets in southern New England under the names Valueland and Scott's. They also supply other supermarket chains.

Ferrara and his attorney appeared before the selectmen to request a common victualler's license after questions were raised about the legality of conducting business under the owner's license.

Controversy erupted over whether Ferrara & Sons could bring in new stock.

Ferrara has been replenishing and supplementing the existing stock in order to continue to attract customers.

"We don't want to wind the business down to nothing because we don't know what the court will do," said Pessia.

"We are not here to liquidate assets. We recognize that there is a viable business there and we're trying to maintain," added James Ferrara.

Under the court's order, Ferrara & Sons is to run the business in a "reasonably prudent and reasonably economic" manner in order to preserve the collateral and maximize the profits.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle was livid about the new stock. He repeatedly asked town counsel if it was illegal for Ferrara & Sons to sell new merchandise under the current owner's license.

Henderson told the selectmen that it wasn't something he felt comfortable answering without doing a little research, but felt that the organization should be able to continue to do business until he came up with an answer.

Henderson also told the selectmen that they could avoid the problems by simply granting a food license in the name of Ferrara & Sons.

After heated debate, the license was granted 3 to 2, with Laugelle and Chairman Burtram Pratt opposed.

Pessia told the selectmen that they were not seeking a transfer of the liquor license. All the liquor has been locked up on the premises and is not available for sale.

Laugelle also asked Ferrara and Pessia if it was true that they were selling previously frozen food.

Ferrara vigorously denied that any such thing had occurred.

"The health agent inspected our food case. He will tell you we were not doing that," he said.

Laugelle indicated that he would in deed be contacting the health agent.

Cohasset Meat and Produce Center has been open for about a year. Previously, it was the site of J. Bildner & Sons.

Conservatory honors Playhouse Associates

At the Annual Meeting of the South Shore Conservatory Board of Trustees on Nov. 10, a plaque was presented to the South Shore Playhouse Associates for their support of the school through the years.

Bruce Cameron, president accepted the plaque from William Reardon, outgoing president of the Conservatory Board.

The Playhouse Associates directs the operation of the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset. Their Community Trust Committee annually awards funds to non profit organizations involved in the arts and education. The Conservatory has benefitted from these grants for a number of years. They have helped the school to pay for: the building of Cox Recital Hall, the library, a new roof, piano repair and other projects.

For the past two years, the Committee has funded the Conservatory's public school outreach program which has directly benefitted eight area public school music programs. The Conservatory has served as a resource to help these school music departments in any way they wish. Conservatory faculty members have assisted in choral coaching, conducting, and working with percussion, woodwind, and brass students.

The jazz faculty have performed for high school band students and conducted workshops in improvisation. The school could not offer this service without the support provided by the South Shore Playhouse Associates.

Celebrate in Cohasset

The holiday season officially opens this weekend in Cohasset with the annual Village Fair.

On Saturday, Dec. 2, beginning at 10 a.m., the Cohasset Common and the churches surrounding it will be transformed into a shoppers' paradise.

This is an eagerly-awaited event, and one that takes months and months of preparation, We congratulate the hard work of all those people who participated in this year's fair, and are especially grateful to the sponsors, the Greek Panagia Church.

Adding to the holiday flavor in Cohasset is the equally anticipated Community Garden Club's Christmas House Tour. That event will be held Dec. 7 in homes throughout the town. More information on that event is included in this week's edition of the Mariner.

And next weekend, the merchants of Cohasset Village and the Harbor, are planning an open house. They will welcome shoppers with special store prices and refreshments, as they lure customers into our bustling center.

Happy shopping!

Sam's new job

Our congratulations to Samuel G. Mygatt of Lincoln on his new job in the same private industry he once labored so long and so hard to regulate in the public interest.

Sam, you will remember, was director of the Environmental Impact Review Program for the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) from 1978 to 1986.

Commentary

Now he is going to be director of regulatory affairs for HMM Associates, the environmental consulting firm that just happens to list Clean Harbors, Inc., among its clients.

In fact, HMM is credited with an important role in the preparation of Clean Harbors' Preliminary Project Impact Report on the toxic waste incinerator proposed for the Fore River Basin.

The siting process was stalled last month when part of the 6,000-page report was ruled inadequate by the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Agency (MEPA), a division of the EOEA.

Clean Harbors, presumably with the aid of consultants, is hard at work amending the report for resubmission.

As yet, there has been no announcement as to Sam's specific duties with his new employers but when things are dull he can always stop by and reminisce about good old days in the Dukakis administration with:

● — Deborah Sanderson, former assistant secretary for policy in the EOEA, who is now in charge of the incinerator project for Clean Harbors.

● — William Geary, former head of the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC), a division of EOEA, now director of communications for Clean Harbors.

● — Frank Wright, once legal counsel for the Hazardous Waste Facility Site Safety Council (SSC), the division of the EOEA which will pass on the incinerator proposal, now on retainer as legal counsel for Clean Harbors.

Etc., etc., etc., at least seven more times by our count.

Attack on state schools was 'spitting'

Letters

To the editor:

In regards to Executive Editor Robert Flavell's spitting attack on the higher education programs provided by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I feel great dismay at the illogical, backwards position you have taken. If you had any desire to address an issue without smothering it under generalization and hyperbole, perhaps even this misdirected commentary would have seemed justifiable.

The University of Massachusetts has for years been known as an excellent institution, and its scholarships and grants funded by the Commonwealth have allowed many bright students to pursue a higher education. Without the support of the taxpayer, of course these opportunities would never be possible. This is a simple fundamental part of the state university system. There is just no way that all worthy students will be able to pay their way through college, especially now, when a year's tuition is pushing twenty thousand dollars. No matter how hard a kid works at the local Seven-Eleven, Mr. Flavell, it is just not going to work.

As the executive editor of this paper, I am dumbfounded as to how you can sit back and label me and my peers as worthless leeches of your "earnest, hard-working generation." Perhaps I have been misled by your article, but you seem to believe that a mere twenty years ago — real men worked harder, parents brought their children up better, and good kids kept their mouths shut. This is where you are wrong. As a freshman at Hopkins, I am surrounded by genius — some of the greatest minds of our future study here, as graduate and undergraduate students. The same can be said for all of the institutions the kids of my graduating class are attending, including The University of Massachusetts. There is no one here who is "squandering" the money put towards their education, be it from the university, the state, or themselves. Perhaps it was different in your college days, Mr. Editor, but today, a true college student works hard for his education, and if he is lucky, he will gratefully take any help he can get.

I am sorry that there are taxpayers such as yourself that are so completely disallusioned with the higher education system of today. I regret that you chastize the college students who protest simply to further the economic grants from our state. We vote too, Mr. Flavell. We too will be taxpayers; we are not a separate, outstanding class from yourself. To use an appropriate cliche — "Look at us! We are the youth, we are you . . . and we have the wings of the future."

It is you, Mr. Flavell, that has to wake up. Look at what you believe, and then think of where tomorrow's students should find their education. I don't think that you truly know.

Cohasset recycling news...

This week's article on the history of Cohasset recycling comes from Recycling Committee member Alix White.

Who built the Boutique at the Recycling Facility? How long have we been recycling? Who started the Recycling Facility?

There have been three groups—Arthur Lehr and the Boy Scouts, Blanche Buckley's group, and the League of Women Voters—that tirelessly worked as volunteers, at times without the Town's support. Thank you for your vision and patience. Without your perserverence we could never be recycling as we are today.

In 1955, the Boy Scouts, under Arthur lehr's direction, began their first paper drive in Wheelwright Park, and collected two truckloads a year. Money from the paper sales funded their projects for a year! Lehr and EustisJames then set up recycling paper in a North Main Street garage. In the early 1970's, the paper bin was moved to the Cedar St. landfill, and newspaper collection steadily increased. Up to two trailer loads of newspaper and cardboard are collected a week now, and will increase as participation grows.

In the early 1970's, a group spearheaded by Blanche Buckley began glass recycling. The dedicated group monitored the collection in 55 gallon drums, manually crushing the glass. It took a great amount of time to properly prepare the glass.

Lehr and the Scouts eventually continued the glass recycling and added aluminum collection, with the money going to the Town's General Fund. The League of Women Voters became involved with recycling at the landfill. Eventually, a roll-off container and automatic glass crusher were purchased, and part-time recycling monitors hired. The Town recognized that recycling would help extend the limited life of the landfill.

The recycling monitors began collecting treasures too good to be thrown out, and the Boutique building was built as part of an Eagle Scout project. Half of the building is used as storage space for returnable bottles and cans, which fund various Scout projects. The Scouts and their families volunteer many hours each week on returnables.

Cohasset Agrees
CARE
to Recycle Everything

In 1988, the Mandatory Recycling Bylaw was unanimously passed at Annual Town Meeting, as recycling was seen as not only the "right thing to do" but economically the "best thing to do." Recycling is now an integral part of Cohasset's waste management strategy. Maximum recycling and minimum incineration make sense.

For a number of years, the Recycling Committee was just three very dedicated members—Arthur Lehr, Merle Brown and Jack Hubbard. The Committee now has ten active members, and still growing.

What have we learned in the 35 years of recycling? The people I interviewed overwhelming said that the Town has to back the recycling efforts if they are to succeed, and that recycling worked because some people were so dedicated in using it. Thank you again to all who had the foresight and stamina to build the Recycling Center.

TROUBLESHOOTING AT THE RECYCLING FACILITY

The following two procedures would save valuable time— Rinse glass bottles and jars; Remove lids, plastic pourers, and wine bottle collars (which are often made of lead).

Hanover officer praises school's DARE program

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset alcohol and drug abuse committee got a close look at what they've spent the last eight weeks talking about.

Lt. Paul Hayes, the Hanover drug enforcement coordinator, brought in a collection of drugs that included everything from marijuana to crack to heroin. Many of the items were from undercover drug purchases made on the South Shore.

Hayes got involved in drug investigation and education in 1979. At that time, common wisdom had it that drug abuse was disappearing. Hayes found that it was actually getting worse.

"Drugs didn't disappear with the hippies and the Vietnam war," he told the group.

His first experience with education was in the high school and it was a disaster.

"It turned into being a joke as far as the students were concerned."

Hayes decided that high school was too late to begin. He approached the superintendent and the school committee about starting a drug education program in the elementary school.

"It took a little coaxing--this was '81 or '82," he said. No one could imagine what concerns a third grader would have.

It didn't take long to find out that many third graders had been exposed to drugs through older brothers and sisters and parents who were leftovers from the '60s.

Going to a professional sports game was another place kids came in contact with drugs, primarily marijuana being smoked in the bathrooms.

Today, Hanover participates in the nationally touted Drug and Alcohol Resistance Education Program, commonly referred to as D.A.R.E.

The Hanover program has a uniformed officer assigned to a different grade each year. This year he is spending with the fifth grade.

Not only does the officer teach a drug and alcohol unit, but he's there all day. Hayes said Officer Spooner goes to lunch with the kids, goes out to recess with them, and even goes on field trips with them whenever he can.

The goal of the program is to give children the information they need before they are confronted with the choices. It all comes down to instinct and training, he warned.

Other towns participating in the D.A.R.E. program operate differently. Hayes told the committee that each community is free to structure the program according to "what you think is appropriate for your community, what you can afford."

Hayes has little patience with people who say "We can't afford it. 2 1/2."

"The bottom line is not money," he contends. "D.A.R.E. is very self-sufficient."

In Hanover, the program runs on $500 for materials with the cost split 50/50 with the school. The officer was drawn from existing staff. His salary for the day's duty comes out of overtime one week and compensatory time off the next.

He told the committee that if they want a D.A.R.E. program, they may have to put themselves on the line for it at town meeting.

"It's your money being paid out, so when it comes up on the town meeting floor, someone has to get up and ask 'Do we have money in there for drug education?' If not, ask 'why not?"

Ultimately, said Hayes, someone may have to get up and offer an amendment.

"Money -- or the lack of it -- is not a valid excuse," he reiterated. "What you're getting back for it is well worth it."

Whatever the committee chooses to do, Hayes told them that they had to know exactly what they wanted to do, how much it would cost, and what kind of a commitment would be required from the participants.

"You've got to do your homework before you go in the door," he said. Otherwise inertia and indecision would kill the project.

He also told the committee not to lose sight of how many good kids were out there.

"They need to be rewarded," he advised.

If children and adults don't make the right choices, they are likely to confront Judge Patrick Hurley or one of his fellow judges.

Hurley told the committee that judges can only react to the problem that they are presented with. Though they try to be creative, try to turn kids around, they can only work within the limits set for them by the legislature.

Three speakers were greeted at this week's drug and alcohol abuse committee meeting by chairman Jack Golden (far right). The guest speakers this week included (l to r) Judge Patrick Hurley of Cohasset, Lt. Paul Hayes, Hanover's drug enforcement officer, and ToughLove representative Betty Joy.

"The debate is always about toughening things up," said Hurley about the trend toward mandatory sentencing. "Then you get the cases and they're not always the cases you read about in the papers."

Hurley frequently hears parents say things like "I'm all in favor of toughening things up, but . . . do it on somebody else's son or daughter."

The family tragedies that Hurley sees on a daily basis in the district courts of southeastern Massachusetts obviously trouble the judge, as does the lack of resources to help them solve their problems.

Helping parents deal with out of control children is the mission of Tough Love.

"By the time parents come into Tough Love, they're in big trouble with one or more of their children," according to Betty Joy, the eastern Massachusetts director for the Tough Love program.

"We teach parents how to take a stand, how to put an end to unacceptable behavior," said Joy of the program run by parents for parents.

Joy got into the program when one of her children got into trouble. Joy describes herself as a perfect mom who stayed at home and did everything to nurture and protect her children. It was a family that nothing bad should happen in.

"It did happen to us."

Joy came to Tough Love because the more she tried to be loving and supportive, the worse things got.

"I was supporting bad behavior without knowing it," said Joy.

Tough Love helps parents take authority back, to sort out what's normal adolescent behavior from what is not.

The Tough Love program in Hanover started with three parents. It's grown steadily.

"There hasn't been a meeting where we haven't had new parents," Joy told the committee.

Joy believes that every community needs a Tough Love chapter. Until that happens, Cohasset residents who want to know more about Tough Love are encouraged to attend either the Hanover or Scituate meetings.

"Anyone is welcome to come. It's not a closed meeting," said Joy.

The Hanover meeting is held Wednesday nights at 7:30 p.m. at St. Mary's church. The Scituate group meets Mondays at 7:30 p.m. at St. Luke's. For more information, call 878-3414 or 878-8638.

Hurley, Hayes, and Joy were the last people to speak to the alcohol and drug abuse committee about the nature and extent of the problem and the possible solutions Cohasset might employ.

Now the committee gets down to the business of making recommendations. Chairman Jack Golden expects to have the preliminary report to the selectmen by the middle of Dec. The final report is in Feb., and Golden anticipates presenting their recommendations at town meeting in April.

One thing is clear already. The committee has developed such a commitment to ending the scourge of alcohol and drug abuse that they will recommend that the committee be made permanent.

Euginia Syrmopoulos and Betty Madden are busy putting the finishing touches on the beautiful wreaths which are always a highlight of the Cohasset Village Fair. The fair will take place this Saturday in church halls around the common.

Harbour choral arts concerts

On Friday, Dec. 1, at 8 p.m. the group, under the direction of Ken Clinton, the choral director at Hanover High School, will perform at Norwell's Cushing Center. A second concert will take place at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 2, at St. Andrew's Church, Hanover. Both concerts will feature the accompaniment of the ensemble, "A Touch of Brass."

Spring soccer registration

Registration for the 1990 Spring Soccer season was held Nov. 21, at the Deer Hill School.

Over 300 players registered at that time. A few teams still have some openings. Accordingly, registrations will be accepted through Dec. 16. Note that all registrations received after Nov. 22, 1989, are considered late and subject to available openings. Late registrants will be notified by Dec. 31, 1989, if there are no team openings.

Cohasset has a shortage of acceptable playing fields. In order to relieve pressure on Milliken Field next spring, the games for under 10 and under 8 boys and girls teams will be played on the field in front of the high school. This will reduce the number of games to be played each weekend on Milliken Field from 12 to 8.

All interested players, age 6 through 18, are urged to register. Registration forms may be obtained at the main office of the Jr./Sr. High School, the Deer Hill or Osgood Schools.

The fee will be: $30 for first child, $25 for second child and $20 for each additional family member. Make checks payable to: Cohasset Soccer Club. Mail to: Cohasset Soccer Club, c/o S. Endus, 46 Black Rock Rd., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Basket making

Mrs. Crafts came to the Deer Hill fifth grade team to tell about baskets. Many students thought it was very interesting. She told people about what baskets were made of and where they came from.

We enjoyed this very much.

Reporter Antoin Trowers

About one week ago Mrs. Crafts came and showed the fifth grade team about baskets, their history and today our class is making gods eyes. Mrs. Seeley and Mrs. Camerom are here to help us. We took reeds and popsicle sticks and wove them together. It took about 15 minutes and the results were great.

Mrs. Crafts came and did a special thing for the 5th grade team. She told us everything about making baskets. She said that almost every Indian tribe used baskets. She makes baskets herself. She really enjoys it. It was very interesting.

Montessori open house

Old Colony Montessori School, 20 Derby St., will hold an Open House Sunday, Dec. 3 from 2 to 4 p.m.

Parents who are interested in learning about the school and Montessori education are invited to attend. Children are also welcome.

Located in South Hingham, the school currently serves children from Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, Hanover, Rockland, Weymouth, Braintree, Quincy, Milton, Holbrook, Halifax and Brockton.

Old Colony Montessori School is accredited by the Association Montessori Internationale and classes are taught by Montessori trained teachers. It is a non-profit school, administered and operated by parents. This "parent-run" aspect gives parents direct influence on their child's education, keeps tuition levels lower than most comparable programs, and makes it possible to fund scholarships and tuition assistance.

For more information, call the school between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. at 749-3698.

Ellen Kelly from the South Shore Conservatory of Music, demonstrated the fine art of improvisation to the kindergarten and first grade students at the Osgood School.

Six Apple Computers ordered

As we reported two weeks ago, thanks to the efforts of the entire Cohasset community, Apple Computers offered by Stop & Shop's "Apples for the Students" program were ordered for each of our three schools.

This week we are thrilled to report that three additional computers have been ordered. We now have two Apple Computers for each of the three schools and we expect to order several more computers, printers and educational software before the program ends March 10, 1990. So folks, continue your efforts in collecting the register tapes, feel confident all of the schools are benefiting from your efforts, and keep saving those tapes!

Also, please be aware that Bradlees department store has joined the Stop & Shop program. The special "Apples for the Students" stub on Bradlees register tapes should be saved and turned in with your Stop & Shop tapes. It's a great opportunity we hope to benefit by during the busy gift-buying season.

Many thanks to all of you and keep up the good work!

"Pilgrims"

The 6th and 5th grade Open Space made a presentation about the Pilgrims and Indians of the 1600's. This is a summary of what they said: In the year of 1620, people from Europe came to Cape Cod, Massachusetts; but they did not stay long because the soil there was not good for farming. So they sailed a little bit further north, and they landed in Plimoth (Plymouth). Their boat was 90 feet long, and called the Mayflower. Their trip across the Atlantic Ocean was hard. Everybody had to drink beer because there was not much good water on board. Some people died, and one baby was born. After they landed, half of them were dead by spring. They still drank beer; but not much because the barley that they made it from was not so plentiful. So they drank water mostly. It took 3 to 4 months to build some houses and buildings. They were made by wood, thatch, or other materials. Girls do chores all day, and boys, when they are 6 or 7, learn their father's trade. When children are from ages 3 to 6 or 7 work in the fields, they then learn to read and write. When males turned 16, they must become a soldier. One big problem was a hostile Indian, or Indians. So they had small battle ships bring clothing and other goods yearly. You take what fits, and not all of it does. Some of it still has to be mended. You had to make your own sheets for beds.

"Indians"

The Indians smoked tobacco and pipes. They used leather for houses. Also they talked and traded with the Pilgrims. Feasts were held with them also. Children played there. Their main ways of exchanging were gift giving and trading. Usually no one lived alone; most people lived with their parents until they got married. If an Indian boy wants to be a real man, he must go out into the woods and survive a winter alone.

The Village at Duxbury

A Senior Living Community based on Hospitality

The Duxbury Distinction

Great Hospitality. The Village at Duxbury has a number of distinctive factors like our wonderful location on the South Shore and sponsor/owners with 40 years of experience in senior housing and healthcare. But, the fact that the philosophy for The Village and its operation has a foundation in hospitality is very important for our residents. Along with your own spacious apartment home comes convenience and a simpler lifestyle in a worry-free environment, with on-site healthcare available.

There's no more maintenance of yard and grounds (but indoor and outdoor gardening spots, if you enjoy that). Lots of help indoors with housekeeping, linen and maintenance services. When you travel, you lock the door and leave. Things will be taken care of for you whether you're gone a few days or a few months.

Select lunch or dinner from the tempting daily menus, attractively served in The Village's own beautiful private restaurant.

*The pineapple has long been a symbol of hospitality, friendship and celebration. We have chosen it to represent the lifestyle at The Village of Duxbury.

It's easy to host your family or friends. Enjoy the event in your own apartment home and do it all yourself, or call on the chef and staff to plan and help—either in your home or in the private dining room. Guests are also welcome at lunch or dinner in the restaurant or at The Village Cafe. Guest suites are available for overnight visitors.

We'd like to send you a brochure on 11 Great Reasons The Village at Duxbury Should Be Your Next Home. If you would like a copy, or if you would like to hear more about the Village, please call our Information Center at 617-934-9744, or return the coupon below.

A tough loss for the team of 1989

It was a great game, despite the final score, for the Skippers who played their last varsity game. In last Friday"s action against Hull, Jon Mitchell (88) and Sean Bishop (64) roll over a few Pirates as they gain some yardage for Cohasset. Three Cohasset players, Sean McCarthy, Steve Ritts, and Kevin Mulcahy, discuss strategy before play begins, while they gain some needed inspiration from Cohasset's cheerleaders. There was some frantic action in last week's game as (l to r) Michael Rolandelli, Jon Mitchell, and Sean Bishop try to gain a final victory for the Skippers.

A tough loss as Skippers play out final season

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

There is one thing that opponents can never take away from the Cohasset High School varsity football team – PRIDE.

Playing on a frozen field at Hull, it was the end of the line for the Skippers, who dressed just enough players to take on the Pirates in the fifth annual Thanksgiving Day rivalry.

However, Hull (4-5-1 overall, 3-3-1 in the South Shore League Small Schools Division) prevailed, 24-12, on the strength of P.J. Bossey's 218 rushing yards and Monty Baker's two touchdown runs last Friday morning (moved to Friday due to Thursday's surprise snowstorm that canceled many games around the area). With the victory, Hull now trails Cohasset in the turkey festival, three games to two.

Cohasset will scrap varsity football next year because of a lack of players and will compete at the junior varsity level only. A decision on whether to field a team in 1991 won't be made until a later date.

"It is a very sad day for Cohasset football," said CHS coach Phil Pisano, whose club ended its final season at 1-9 (1-6 SSL).

"I feel sorry for the kids still in the varsity program, but we just have to be realistic. They wanted to win so badly, for themselves and for the town. I just want to thank the people of Cohasset for their yearlong support."

While Cohasset's comeback bid fell short, the Skippers gave their loyal following something to cheer about. After Hull jumped to a 16-0 lead in the second quarter (Bossey's one-yard burst up the middle and Baker's eight-yard score), Cohasset stormed back. Senior Sean McCarthy, a former lineman and tight end, highlighted a 17-play drive that took eight minutes, with a 14-yard touchdown run to cut Hull's lead to 14-6. The 5'10", 200-pounder came through again in the third period, this time galloping 68 yards for a touchdown, beating a Hull defensive back in a footrace to the end zone. McCarthy did finish with 96 rushing yards, the most by a Cohasset running back this season.

Cohasset's conversion pass failed, but the Skippers were within 16-14.

From there, Baker's three-yard scoring plunge with 6:22 left, set up by two big gainers by Bossey, ended hopes for a positive swan song for Cohasset.

Synchronized swimmers compete

The Swoglan Synchronized Swim Club Master Team recently returned from the Masters National Championships held in Fort Lauderdale, Fl.

The competitors made up a team of six: Elizabeth McMullan, Meryl Cole, Amy Hicks, Ariel Stiles, Michele Bouche, and Kathy Turner. The Masters group also had a trio compete made up of: Elizabeth McMullan, Ariel Stiles, and Kathy Turner and a duet made up of: Elizabeth McMullan and Ariel Stiles and a solo by Amy Hicks.

The trio came home with a fifth place ribbon and Amy Hick's solo won a fifth place ribbon. Elizabeth McMullan came in seventh overall in her figure age group and Meryl Cole and Kathy Turner came in eighth in the age group figures.

It was a lot of work but also a lot of fun.

What a deal for VFW!

If the local Veteran's of Foreign Wars are still interested, the Cohasset board of selectmen have a real deal for them.

At the regular selectmen's meeting on Nov. 28, the board agreed to offer the closed fire station at West Corner to the VFW for $1 a year.

According to selectman Rocco Laugelle, maintaining the abandoned fire station is getting to be a real headache. He suggested that the VFW might be interested in moving into the building.

"They did ask us for a building a couple of years ago," recalled selectmen Martha Gjesteby.

Chairman Burtram Pratt agreed with Laugelle and Gjesteby that it would be a good idea.

The VFW would be expected to maintain the property and would have to provide their own utilities in exchange for the bargain rental.

Hedlund named to task force

State Senate candidate Robert Hedlund was recently named to Republican State Committees' Victory "90" Task Force.

Hedlund is one of 30 members asked to serve on the task force which has been created to coordinate activities and strategies among various statewide Republican organizations for the 1990 elections.

Ambler budget amendment

State Rep. Robert B. Ambler (D-Weymouth), a candidate for State Senate, was successful in attaching an amendment to the recent budget cut proposal which would fund a cost of living adjustment for some 40,000 state, county and municipal retirees. The Governor vetoed a 3 percent cost of living adjustment last July, which Ambler called "unconscionable."

An outside section of the budget cut proposal authorized the establishment of a teletheatre in Chicopee which would televise racing from tracks both inside and outside of Massachusetts. Proponents of this proposal estimate that upwards of $100 million would be wagered at such a facility each year. Ambler's amendment would take 1 percent of the total amount wagered and place that revenue in a special account to be used exclusively to fund cost of living increases for the retirees.

McDonald opposes Pilgrim

Weymouth Democrat Brian J. McDonald, candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth state Senate seat, spoke last week at a coffee hour hosted by Tom and Janice Jackson of 29 Seaflower Lane in Marshfield.

McDonald spoke about a wide variety of issues facing the South Shore and the state including his support for restored commuter rail service for the South Shore.

Responding to questions regarding the operation of the Pilgrim nuclear power plant in Plymouth, McDonald indicated he has serious concerns about Boston Edison's management of the facility and has reservations about the ability of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) to make objective decisions relating to the operation of nuclear power plants.

Hussey travels to State House

The South Shore Republican Club held its 65th birthday anniversary party at the Norwell Grange Hall last week. Among the guests were Donald Hussey, Republican candidate for State Senate.

Candidate Hussey was inivted to the State House last Tuesday to meet with Rep. Peter Foreman, Asst. Minority Leader in the House. Among the topics discussed at the meeting was Hussey's campaign efforts to win the Republican Nomination to replace William Golden in 1990.

Cohasset church sponsors Christmas program

The Broad Cove Chorale will perform a concert of Christmas music for women's voices at Broad Cove House in Hingham, home of director Margo Euler, on Friday, Dec. 1, at 8 p.m.

The hour-long musicale will include chamber music by the North River Trio (pianist Lydia Madrick and violinist Donna Culley, both of Norwell, with cellist Jane Hallett of Hingham) and carol arrangements for audience, chorus and instruments. The evening will conclude with a candlelit reception in the spacious music room at Broad Cove House. A few remaining tickets are available at $5 at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square or by calling Liz Murphy at 749-0056. No tickets will be sold at the door.

The Unicorn Singers will present three area performances of their annual Christmas concert, entitled "Three Kings and a Star".

The centerpeice of the program will be Menotti's chamber opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors," about the surprise visit of the three Kings at the humble cottage of a crippled shepherd boy and his mother, and the miracle that takes place there. The opera's story is told from a child's point of view, and contains humor and beautiful music. The three Kings are played by Norman Shaw of Weymouth, Bob Detwiler of Norwell, and John Kaloyanides of Hingham.

The concert will begin and end with carols and other Christmas music for choir and audience, led by director Margo Euler. The program will last about 80 minutes and is ideal for school-age children and their parents.

"Three Kings and a Star" will be presented by churches in Hingham, Norwell, and Cohasset to raise money for Christmas projects. The phone numbers are for the church offices (weekday mornings) where tickets may be reserved. Tickets ($5/person) may possibly be available at the door. Performances are as follows:

Saturday, Dec. 9 at 4 p.m. at Old Ship Church in Hingham (749-1679); Sunday, Dec. 10 at 7 p.m. at First Parish in Norwell (659-7122); and Sunday, Dec. 17 at 4 p.m. at First Parish in Cohasset (383-1100).

Christmas Hospitality Days set

The Cohasset Village and Harbor store owners will be holding Christmas Hospitality Days in Cohasset Village on Friday, Dec. 8 and Saturday, Dec. 9.

There will be special open house hours at the Village stores from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Dec. 8, and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Dec. 9. The shops and offices of Cohasset Village and the harbor welcome everyone to enjoy this old-fashioned Christmas in the Village.

White candles will be displayed in each window of the Village stores, as customers will be able to browse along the center of town.

The Cohasset Village and Harbor businessmen have pledged to continue the traditions that make the Village a unique place to shop, with plenty of personalized service, said store owner Phil Smith.

There is free parking in the municipal parking lot behind Main Street, and many of the shops offer free holiday gift wrapping.

Plans for this year's Christmas celebration were made by the merchants of Cohasset Village and the Harbor during a series of meetings held this month.

Wildlife center program

The New England Wildlife Center in Hingham is beginning an Animal Adoption program.

Any of the Center's non-releasable education animals, including an Oppossum, eight birds of prey (including a Barn Owl and a Red-tailed Hawk), and many others, may be supported through this program. Adoption fees range from $15 to $500, depending on the type of creature. The donations help the Center to feed, house, and care for "your" animal. "Adopted parents" receive, depending on the level of support, a certificate, a photo of the animal, and/or a framed photo of your family with the adopted animal.

For more information, contact the New England Wildlife Center at (617) 749-5397.

The New England Wildlife Center is a private, non-profit wildlife rehabilitation, research, and education organization.

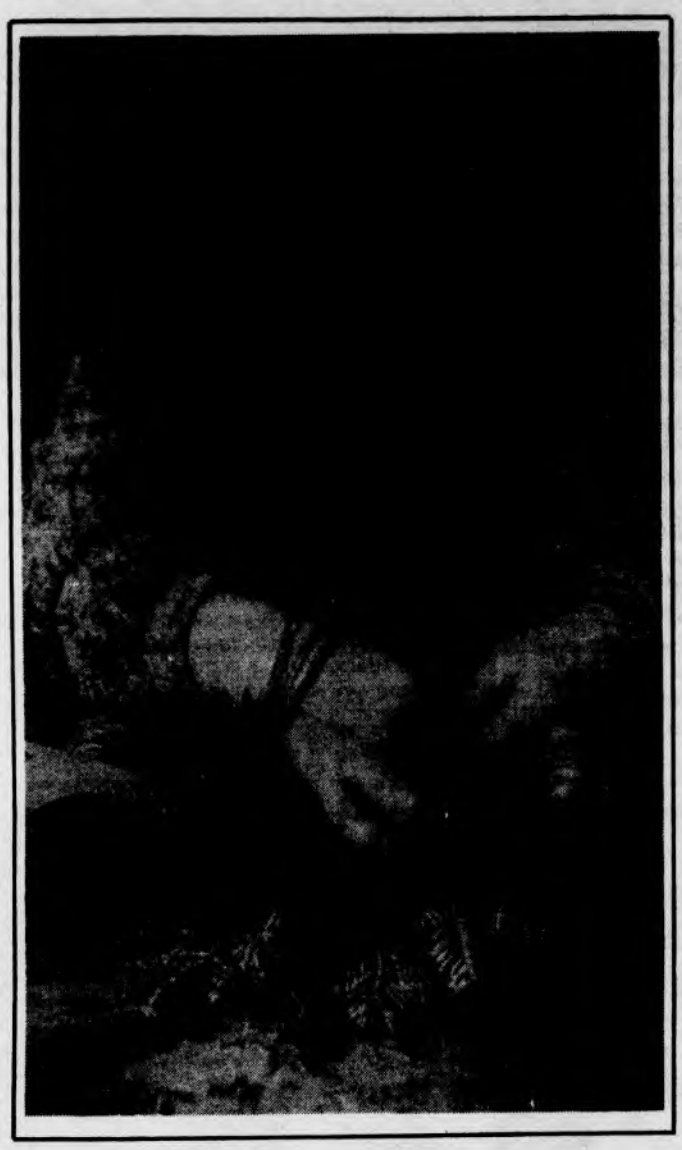
Churches sponsor Dec. 2 edition of Village Fair

Saturday, Dec. 2 is the date of this year's Cohasset Village Fair.

A wide variety of handmade items will be offered from 10 a m. to 3 p.m. in locations in and around the churches surrounding Cohasset Common.

The four participating churches in this year's holiday fair are the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, sponsors of this year's fair, along with St. Anthony's, the Second Congregational Church and St. Stephen's Church. Georgia Parros of the Panagia Church is chairman of the event.



Members of those churches have worked for several months, preparing a variety of items which will be sold on Saturday.

A highlight of the Village Fair will be the arrival of Santa Claus aboard a Cohasset Fire Department truck. He will take his seat at the Unitarian Parish House at about 10:45 a.m., and will be available to talk with the children while photos are taken of this memorable event.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. children will be able to participate in face painting, mask making and other crafts in the Cohasset Community Center. Throughout the day, they will be able to do their holiday shopping at the "Secret Room" which will be located at St. Stephen's Church. Children are invited, but parents are advised not to enter this secret shopping area where prices are moderately priced for the younger buyer. Teenagers will be available to assist the young buyers and to help with their gift wrapping.

Many local merchants are contributing merchandise and services to the Village Fair raffle which will be held on Saturday. Prizes include a color television set and merchandise from Flemings, Liquors Unlimited, and Cohasset Colonials. Several local businesses will also be offering gift certificates for the Village Fair raffle.

Agean Fare Restaurant owner Mike Vallos is turning over all the proceeds of sales between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. to the fair treasury.

One of Santa's helpers was on hand this week to finish some of the wreaths that will be on sale during the Dec. 2 Village Fair.

In addition, the annual Village Fair supper will consist of traditional Greek food, including baked lamb, roast potatoes and gourmet artichokes, topped off with a Greek dessert. The dinner will be served in the Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2.

Tickets are available from representatives of the four churches, including Jean Syrmopoulos and Eva Sedeall of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church; Sue Cameron and Debbie Anderson of the Congregational Church; Nancy Brock Swatek and Sheila Wallingford of St. Stephen's; and Chris and Rose Kierce of St. Anthony's.

The book department located in the Unitarian Parish House includes an extensive collection of sports books donated by Cohasset resident Ken Coleman, former "Voice of the Red Sox." A first edition of the E. B. White classic, "Charlotte's Web," will be sold at a silent auction at the book department.

In addition, more than 50 dolls will be offered for sale at the fair. Many of those dolls are currently on display in stores throughout Cohasset Village.

Home-cooked food is always an attraction at this holiday fair.

In a pavillion set up on the common near the town hall, hot dogs and hamburgers will be sold along with coffee and soft drinks.

The vestry of the Second Congregational Church will contain this year's Chowder Bar, hosted by Ralph and Susi Coley.

Free parking will be available at the municipal parking lot behind the Village store on South Main Street.

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce news . . .

A Chamber of Commerce, especially a small, local Chamber such as ours in Cohasset, is usually perceived by the public to be made up of a town's retailers . . . stores, shops, boutiques. These businesses are visable, and openly encourage foot traffic in the retail areas of their town. In fact,they rely heavily on such trade. And these businesses are, indeed, often members in their Chamber of Commerce.

But the majority of members are businesses that most townspeople never see or think of in their daily travels. These are the contractors, builders, carpenters, plumbers and electricians. . . . the insurance agents, travel agents, health professionals and restaurants . . . the designers, landscapers, window treatment companies. In short, the people that you think of only when you desperately need them. Many of them do not have storefronts or signs.

Their main business is not goods, but services. And here in Cohasset we have many, many such businesses. They offer needed services at competitiveprices. with a little something extra thrown in — friendly, down to earth service to the customer. For the same price that you would get elsewhere, these professionals give you much, much more. Many of them come to your home, at no charge, to give advice and estimates. They don't rush you or give you a lot of high pressure sales pitches. They will tell you how to go about getting what you need, and will try to accommodate your budget. And if they cannot, they will usually tell you the HONEST reason why.

With all of this, we wonder why so many people do not give their own Cohasset businesses a try. They are not hard to find. The area phone book, the Yellow Pages, the local newspapers — all have our business people listed. And a call to the Chamber of Commerce will get you names and addresses of our members who can handle your specific needs. We are, as the ads say, just a telephone call away.

So the next time you need a service by a professional, call a Cohasset professional. We are close, good at what we do, and competitive in price. If you can't find us, call the Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010. We will try to steer you in the right direction.

By the way, this is an excellent idea for town and school officials, also. It wouldn't hurt the town to patronize their own, when possible. Try us, Cohasset, you'll like us.

And for those of you who have had a difficult time the last few weeks getting in touch with us, we apologize. The glitch has been worked out, and we are ready to help in any way we can.

Town counsel assures officials they met illegally

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The open meeting controversy reared its head again at the Nov. 28 selectmen's meeting.

Responding to a question raised by Robert Davenport, a volunteer with Continental Cablevision, town counsel Richard Henderson reiterated that the financial advisory group was a governmental body and therefore was subject to the provisions of the open meeting law.

Henderson told the selectmen that the D.A.'s office agreed with him 100 percent. Because no substantial violation of the law occurred, no official action will be taken, said Henderson.

The group must now constitute itself properly, post all meetings, and keep minutes. Additionally, said Henderson, the group should explain the situation under which they met and disclose the content of their deliberations.

Chairman Burtram Pratt protested that brainstorming sessions were routinely conducted in 50 or 60 other towns.

"I agree -- 50 or 60 towns do it, but it doesn't make it right," said Henderson.

Diana Kornet hastened to explain the situation.

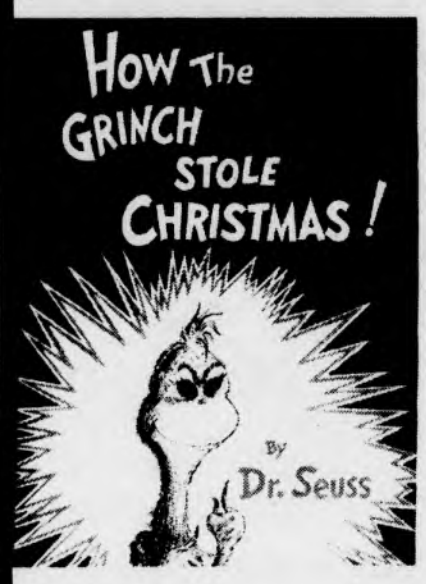
"There was no intent to be secretive. There were no decisions made," she said.

"It was intended to be a brainstorming session," she continued. "Sometimes an idea gets floated that could be devastating to morale if taken to the media even if it was killed 11 seconds later."

Henderson reassured Kornet that the sincerity of the group was never in question.

The selectmen will abide by the advice of their counsel. An unhappy Chairman Burtram Pratt released a memo from executive secretary Gregory J. Doyon detailing the substance of the hitherto confidential meeting.

Pratt stated that he intends to pursue the matter further. He continues to hold that the financial advisory group is not a governmental body even though the members are drawn from the ranks of town government.



When questioned, he said he would be doing this as a private citizen, not in his official capacity.

Pratt also indicated that representatives from other towns wishing to have private brainstorming sessions may join with him.

Officials question legality of stickers

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset selectmen want to know if the new landfill stickers are legal.

They will ask Town Counsel Richard Henderson if it is legal for the Board of Health to issue a new sticker for the recycling-transfer station before the old facilities sticker expires.

Residents are now required to purchase the new sticker at a cost of $52 by January 1, 1990 in order to continue using the transfer facility. No sticker or fee is necessary for use of the recycling center.

"They feel as though they've paid until Jun. 30 for a dump sticker, why should they have to pay a second time," said selectman Rocco Laugelle.

Laugelle and chairman Burtram Pratt have both received numerous complaints from residents disturbed at the prospect of paying the new fee.

The health board has received no complaints, according to health agent Joseph Godzik. There have been a few inquiries, he said, but there have been no complaints received by that department.

Health board member Michael Sullivan said he had talked to a couple of residents who expressed some concern about the overlapping stickers. "I understand where they're coming from. But in reality, it really comes down to about a dollar and twenty-five cents," he said, explaining that since half the year is over, residents have already used about $3.50 worth of the $7 stickers. And since the

To level fund school budget means more cuts

By Margie Kelley
Mariner staff

The school committee continued trudging through their budget this week, trying to find the least painful places to make cuts in the event that an override election should fail again this spring.

If residents vote against an override of Proposition 2 1/2, the advisory board has asked all departments to prepare a level-funded budget for the fiscal year 1991.

For the school department, a level-funded budget does not mean level-services, committee member Ralph Kidder said Monday night.

To keep the budget at the current level of spending, the school department will need to cut approximately $250,000, plus an additional amount to cover unemployment insurance for any staff that is laid off in the cuts.

According to school superintendent Stephen Hart, the advisory board has instructed the committee to prepare the level-funded budget for a January 8 meeting so that the public will have time to understand what may happen if an override is not passed.

"If we need to cut $250,000, we would actually have to cut more," said committee chairman Barbara Bliss. "We'd have to cut $8,000 for each person reduced."

"A $250,000 reduction is a considerable reduction," Hart said. "We have to make a priority list of what we'll want to put back if the override should pass."

Kidder said the first thing that should be reinstated, if the override is a success is the teaching staff.

The committee expressed concern that the presentation of their budget in the town warrant, which lists individual capital items, may be too confusing for voters and decided to consider a simpler format by the January deadline.

"There's so much detail," said Bliss. "But what does it mean?"

"Maybe we shouldn't do it that way anymore," said

Officials say CHL not threat to water

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Town officials who once denounced the commercial landfill on Rte. 3A, blaming it for possible contamination of the town's water supply, now say that is not a threat.

Although they believe monitoring should continue indefinitely at Cohasset Heights Ltd., they are willing to concede that their original fears were not steeped in scientific fact.

Board of Health chairman William Baird said the threat of leachate contamination into nearby Lily Pond has never been documented, and engineers hired by CHL and the town now agree there is minimal threat of that ever occurring.

Their concerns now center on the odors eminating from the commercial landfill, not the contamination.

"We heartened to see that the board agrees with what we've been saying since 1983," said CHL attorney Antone Moehrke, referring to the contamination issue.

Now the two sides can concentrate on eliminating the odors that have pestered the Rte. 3A area for four years. Although not conceding that the odor is formed by the landfill alone, Moehrke said steps are being taken by the Barry Brothers to alleviate or eliminate the problem.

"We really don't know the source, but we've always said we'd take the steps necessary to alleviate any odors from our landfill," he said. The owners have recently hired engineers who believe Assessors ask: why no invitation?

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

"Why didn't they call us first?"

That was assessor James Lagrotteria's reaction following a Sunday night meeting attended by several residents who question their tax bills.

The assessors were not invited.

Lagrotteria recalled a similar incident last year when a group of residents at Wheelwright Park confronted the board with questions about their tax bills. The assessors met with the residents, and one-by-one, their questions were resolved, Lagrotteria said.

Regarding Sunday night's meeting called by three "Concerned Cohasset Citizens," Fred Quelle, Eli Manchester and David Weltman, the assessor said, "I don't question their motives, but I wish we were asked to attend. We could have helped these people understand what was done and why it was done."

Manchester said the purpose of the meeting was to gather more information before presenting to the assessors. "All we had was Fred's (Quelle) data. We wanted more - that's why we had the meeting," he said.

When asked why the meeting was held, Manchester answered that people "all over town" were discussing their tax bills.

Selectmen discussed the merits of the citizens' meeting during their Monday night session. Selectman Ned Tebbetts was impressed with the statistics presented by Quelle at the citizens' meeting, and noted that his analysis revealed disproportionate property assessments in comparison to sale prices.

Selectman Diana Kornet praised the efforts of the residents who organized the meeting. "They are

Selectmen pick subcommittee

Selectmen Diana Kornet and Ned Tebbetts will serve on a subcommittee of the board of selectmen which will review a proposal to combine or eliminate certain town departments.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby will not serve on that subcommittee, as previously reported in The Cohasset Mariner. Their findings will be reported to the town government structure committee. The subcommittee will study the reallocation of employees and departments in an effort to operate a more efficient town government.

Tax bill payments due

Tax bill payments are due by Thursday, Dec. 7 at the treasurer-collector's office at town hall.

That office will remain open on Thursday, Dec. 7 until 7 p.m. for anyone who has not paid the first half of this year's tax bill.

Any payments received after December 7 are subject to a 14 percent interest charge commencing November 7.

The treasurer-collector's office will be closed all day Monday, Dec. 11 so that tax payments can be processed into the computer system. The office will reopen at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 12.

Helping heat others

Cohasset selectmen will allow local carpenter Thomas Judge to cull dead wood from town- owned land for donation to a Marshfield couple who heat with wood.

Judge told the selectmen Monday night that he wanted to take burnable wood from a lot on Beechwood Street to help the needy family.

Only dead and fallen wood will be taken by Judge.

"I won't cut anything green," he said.

He also promised to waive liability and to be cautious about lot lines.

"If you're doing this for someone else's heat for the winter, I'm all for it," said selectman Rocco Laugelle.

Selectman Diana Kornet added, "That's great. Admirable effort. Thank you for your effort."

Keeping warm is also a problem for Cohasset youth waiting for the bus to take them on recreation commission ski trips and for patrons of Cohasset Drama Club productions in the auditorium.

Selectman solved the first problem by voting to allow the town hall lobby to be opened on Sundays to shelter the children. Chairman Burtram Pratt reported that the town was working on the heating system and hoped to have the problem resolved.

New playpark sign

The school committee unanimously approved a new sign this week for the Osgood Playpark which they say will give police some basis for protecting the new playground from being abused.

The new sign will read:

"Welcome to Osgood Playpark. The Playpark is designed for children 12 years old and under. Adult supervision is requested. The Playpark is restricted to the use of the Osgood students during school hours. Please use safety sense on the equipment. The Osgood Playpark closes at dusk."

The Playpark committee decided to add the sign because the park sustained a substantial amount of damage in the fall, according to committee member Ralph Kidder.

The sign is not meant to prohibit anyone anyone from using the park, but to give police a way to measure it's appropriate use in situations where someone may be found abusing the property, the committee said.

Swim team approved

Cohasset now has an official winter swim club, thanks to the school committee's approval of a request by Chris Henderson to get the four-member team recognized.

Henderson and three other students, Chip Anderson, Dave Leahy, and Mickey Hawkes have been practicing with a coach at the YMCA in Quincy, but could not compete in league swim meets without the school committee's recognition.

The school committee called the winter team "a fine idea". Henderson said anyone can try out for the team, but they will have to pay to $300 to participate.

Selectmen's action

Tuesday night, Cohasset selectmen selected a Stoughton firm to reroof the old Town Hall.

Dostoomian Roofing Systems of Stoughton, one of eight firms bidding on the project, submitted a bid of $23,410.

Selectmen also deleted Cohasset Meat and Produce Center and Cohasset Central Market from the list of license renewals they reviewed and voted on.

According to Chairman Pratt, Cohasset Meat and Produce Center is no longer in reorganization under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy laws. It is expected that the business will be liquidated in due course.

All liquor licensees will be checked against a list of tax delinquents before renewals will be granted.

In other business, the selectmen:

- Approved a change of manager at Liquors Unlimited subject to a review of the prospective manager by the police chief.
- Directed selectman Martha Gjesteby to get information from the Department of Motor Vehicles regarding registration of long term rental cars in Cohasset.

Gjesteby had raised the possibility of urging residents with rentals to register them in Cohasset so the town could reap the excise tax monies.

- Gave permission to the Community Garden Club of Cohasset to use the parking lot at Sandy Beach for a shuttle bus relay to reduce traffic on Hobart Lane during the annual house tour scheduled for Dec. 7.

Assessors wanted an invitation . . .

sharing their information with other people who have questions about their tax bills," she said, adding that if enough residents question their tax bills, then there could be a meeting arranged with the board of assessors.

That should be the first step before a class action lawsuit was ever mentioned, Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said, referring to a comment at Sunday's meeting that residents whose tax bills have increased by more than 10 percent should file for an abatement.

The board of assessors could sit down with those dissatisfied residents and review it, Pratt said. If the assessors feel it is appropriate, they could bring in the professional evaluators. "Talk it over with the people involved," he recommended.

According to the one-page information sheet mailed to homeowners by the three residents whose names were not revealed, the property revaluations completed this year "has produced a large disproportionate increase in property values in certain regions of our town." The group used homes on Nichols Road to illustrate how some property owners have been hit with "an extremely unfair" hike in their assessed value.

Yet, according to statistics provided by County Home Data Service, property sale values on Nichols Road have not increased any more or less rapidly than sale values for the town as a whole.

Preliminary investigation by these three residents indicates "a similar phenomenon has occurred in other areas of town."

"The average increase in assessments in Cohasset as determined by the change in the tax rate between last year and this year, taking into account the 2 1/2 percent budget increase plus the override, is less than 1.6 percent," it was stated in the mailing. "By contrast, on Nichols Road the average assessed valuation was increased by a factor of 1.95 causing the average property owner on our street to pay almost 30 percent more taxes this year."

In addition, the three residents urged other homeowners whose tax bills have increased more than ten percent, to file for an abatement.

The assessors office has received a greater number of abatement requests than in previous years. In fact, chairman Lagrotteria has allowed the office staff to distribute abatement forms, even if residents have not yet paid their 1989 first-half tax bills.

But if the office is inundated with abatement requests, it could cause further calamity for the town, Lagrotteria said. There is $235,000 set aside from which all tax abatements will be drawn. "If everyone files for an abatement, we'll have about $10 for every homeowner. The more people who file, the less money we'll have for abatements," Lagrotteria explained.

Lagrotteria has talked individually with about three dozen persons since the tax bills were mailed last month. They included businessmen, residents, and several elderly people who were unaware of the senior citizen abatement policy.

"What I'm saying is that we're available, and if people have problems, we welcome the opportunity to meet with them," the assessor said.

The company that completed the revaluation, Appraisal Consultants of New England, is the same firm that Cohasset used three years earlier. They are also the same company that completed revaluations in Scituate, Norwell, Hanover and Hingham, so they are familiar with assessing waterfront property, Lagrotteria said.

The town has approved a $9.1 million budget for fiscal 1990, he explained, which must be raised by taxation. If the valuations are reduced, Lagrotteria said, then the tax bills would have to be increased correspondingly.

If the residents were discussing the inequities of the Nichols Road valuations, Lagrotteria said they would have to inspect each individual parcel and determine the reason for a specific valuation. In other words, he explained, there could have been some "arms length sales" in which elderly parents sell a home to a child for much less than its worth, or perhaps a home was sold quickly during a divorce settlement. There are individual cases which makes the average valuations "go screwy," he said.

"I hope we can get together with these people because if we're inundated with abatements, it's going to delay us considerably and we won't be able to devote our time to those people who really deserve the abatement," Lagrotteria said.

Officials opposed meeting

It was not made clear in an article published in last week's Cohasset Mariner that Selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Ned Tebbetts did not attend any meetings of the "long-range financial planning board" which had failed to post its closed meetings.

Selectmen Gjesteby and Tebbetts refused to attend the closed-door meetings because they were not open to the public, nor was the time and place of the meetings posted in town hall as required by the open meeting law, Gjesteby said.

Town counsel has advised those town officials involved in the closed meetings that they were in violation of the state open meeting law. Atty. Richard Henderson told the officials they must post any future sessions, and that the public must be allowed to attend.

Officials say CHL no threat to water supply

the problem can be abated with a series of vent pipes and flares. This procedure needs to be approved by the board of health and the Department of Environmental Protection, but Moehrke said the Barrys are willing to provide the equipment at their expense.

Water commissioner Ron Goodwin, once an outspoken critic of the commercial landfill, now believes there are more serious concerns than the issue of leachate contamination into Lily Pond.

One of the main issues that has never been resolved is the requirement that CHL provide a spotter to check the contents of the trucks that use the commercial landfill. Since the board of health required that during site assignment hearings two years ago, there has been infrequent occasions when an inspector is there checking the truck loads.

According to health board member Michael Sullivan, although that is a requirement, it was never decided who would provide the spotter, and how frequently he would be stationed at the landfill.

"I'd generally agree now there is no immediate risk to the water supply from Cohasset Heights," water commissioner Goodwin agreed. "Although the monitoring has determined the leachate is leaving the site, the contaminate levels are so low it doesn't affect anything."

But Goodwin's concerns aren't altogether abated, since he wants to ensure that Lily Pond remains protected, long after the landfill is filled and closed.

"I want to know, as time progresses, what will happen then," he stated.

"Any solid waste disposal area should be watched carefully. And the fact is, CHL is located in our water protection district. Water supplies in almost 60 communities in this state have been lost because of inappropriate use of land in that district. And landfills are the number one thing we don't want to see in our watershed."

Goodwin, who was usually present at all the hearings involving Cohasset Heights' amended site assignment, said he is still concerned that Cohasset Heights is still not in compliance with all the requirements, including the spotter.

"The town spent countless time and money to develop a site assigment in 1986 that has not been toroughly enforced," he said. The issues of liability insurance, a spotter and the odor problems have yet to be resolved, according to Goodwin.

"It seems to me that the board of health has a bigger agenda - to send the town's trash to CHL once area five (the next area of proposed expansion at the landfill) is approved," Goodwin stated.

As for contamination into Lily Pond, Goodwin now believes there are more severe causes of contamination, including failing septic systems that drain into the water supply.

Board of health member Sullivan believes that although there is minimal risk at this time to the town's water supply from the landfill, he remains concerns about the unresolved issues between CHL and the town.

He would like to see the hearing which was adjourned two years ago to be reopened for discussions about insurance, the spotter and the odor problems which persist.

"Odor is a big issue that still hasn't been resolved," Sullivan stated. "And the issue of a spotter has never been enforced. That was a requirement before I came on the board, but it's a difficult one to enforce."

Sullivan said the original concerns about a possible threat to the water supply was the basis of all the commotion over Cohasset Heights for the past six years.

"As it stand today, there is no evidence of contaminates in our water supply from Cohasset Heights. But I want to remain concerned about this into the future," he said, which will require continual monitoring of the leachate collection tanks at the landfill.

The most serious issue now facing the embattled commercial landfill is the odor problem, Sullivan said. "This is a big commercial business that is in this for the profit. If other big businesses impacted neighboring areas with odors like Cohasset Heights, they'd be shut down. We don't have that authority, but we intend to have this problem resolved."

Atty. Moehrke said Cohasset Heights has voluntarily agreed to find a solution to the odor problem.

And perhaps within the next year, he said, the landfill will be back before the town for a site assignment proposal for expansion into area five.

Complaints about permit sticker . . .

landfill comprises only one-half of the facilities included in that sticker permit, Sullivan calculated that approximately $1.25 is still valid until the end of the year.

"I think there are a lot more important issues to be upset about in this town," Sullivan said.

Selectman Pratt tells callers complaining about the cost, "to break it down to $1 a week and it doesn't seem like so much."

For Laugelle, it is the principal as much as it is the cost.

"I was against the $52 in the first place and I will lead the pack to fight it," he said.

When told that the Board of Health was contending that the new sticker fee was legitimate because it covered a new facility, Laugelle was unimpressed.

"In my book, it's still a dump," he said.

Selectman Diana Kornet believes that it would be preferable if the fee covered the fiscal year rather than the calendar year.

"Perhaps we should charge just $26 until June 30," she suggested.

Any action may be premature according to selectman Martha Gjesteby. Gjesteby reminded the selectmen that separating dump fees from beach parking fees required a change in by-laws which must be approved by the state Attorney General.

"I don't think approval has come back from the Attorney General," said Gjesteby. "I haven't seen anything in my packets."

"In that case, I think we do need a legal opinion," said Chairman Pratt.

The selectmen opted against taking action until they could review the legal issue and their options with Town Counsel Henderson.

Level funded means more cuts

Kidder. "Certainly we don't want anyone to think we're changing this to hide anything. This just is not a useful document."

Bliss said that the possibility of making a less detailed presentation might be okay because the detailed forms are available to the public at the library.

In discussing the reductions, Hart said that $50,000 would be cut from the Deer Hill School alone.

The committee said it will prepare a priority list of things to be restored, and then added to the department if the override is voted in.

Among the items which will be restored are repairs to the bathrooms, carpeting and heating at the Osgood School, and to the leaching fields.

The school department budget is $5.2 million.

Committee member Chris Ford said the task of convincing voters that the override is crucial to the schools will be harder this year than last because of the anti-tax feeling across the state.

"I think we have a tremendous uphill fight," he said. "Last year, I thought we had a 50-50 chance at getting the override, but this year, I'd say we've got one chance in ten. We really have to dig our heels in."

Kidder suggested that the board explore some "non-traditional" ways to promote the importance of the override this year.

Fire chief lists future equipment to be purchased

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

If the fire department's wish list comes true, Cohasset residents will have more money worries than a $52 dump sticker.

The selectmen reviewed the proposed five-year capital budget at their regular meeting on Dec. 4.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock told the group that he based his capital budget on standards set for towns of Cohasset's size, studies prepared in the past, and his best guess of which pieces of equipment were likely to "go bad".

For fiscal year 1990, Brock would like to be able to replace a 1979 ladder truck that needs work on the hydraulic system and has some body rust. A new truck is estimated to cost $75,000.

Repair and redesign of the forestry truck so it can be used as a general pickup when not required for fighting brush and forest fires is calculated at $11,000.

Replacing the ambulance was also recommended at a cost of $85,000.

Selectmen Kornet wanted to know why an ambulance that is only four years old would need to be replaced next year.

"Because it wears out," said Brock.

Brock explained that ambulances age more rapidly than other vehicles. According to Brock, it is expected to start cold, run at full speed immediately, the brakes are subjected to heavy use, and the vehicle runs at its maximum weight all the time.

Engine No. 2 was on the list for replacement in fiscal year 1991. Brock projected a cost of $200,000 to replace the nearly 30 year old vehicle.

"It's simply an aging piece," said Brock.

When asked what condition it is in, Brock paused and then said, "Operating."

The fire chief told the selectmen that parts are no longer available for many of the repairs, but the mechanic is able to keep it running.

Brock would also like to replace the rescue boat with an inflatable boat and outboard motor and expand the department's water equipment in '91.

"It's not the safest thing to put in the water, generally," Brock said of the 14 foot aluminum boat they must rely on when they can't borrow the harbor master's equipment.

Kornet was opposed to this item.

"We are not Bay Watch with thousands of people needing rescue," she said. "This is not a good use of money."

Brock defended the item against suggestions that he could continue to rely on the harbormaster's equipment.

According to Brock, the fire department needs its own equipment because the other departments are not available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

"Judging from what you have as a risk in this town, I project what we need," he said.

Laugelle told Brock that the present boat was sufficient.

Equipment for dealing with hazardous materials was also on tap for '91 at a cost of $20,000. Currently, Cohasset must rely on borrowed equipment from surrounding towns.

"You're taking the gamble [that we could get somebody else's], warned Brock.

"That's the way we're going to have to go," replied an unconvinced Diana Kornet.

Resident Robert Davenport asked the selectmen to keep in mind the possibility of an oil spill near the reservoir when considering this item.

Fiscal year 1992 contains two items: replacing the chief's car at an approximate cost of $16,000 and replacing the hydraulic rescue equipment for $15,000.

The chief's car is only two years old now, but has 37,000 miles on it. If a new car is purchased, the equipment from the existing vehicle would be transferred into the new vehicle to keep the cost down.

The hydraulic rescue equipment is more commonly known as "The Jaws of Life".

Cohasset's equipment is 12 years old.

"I projected replacement of equipment I project will go bad," Brock said.

In response to a question, Brock told the board that the equipment was used approximately four or five times a year.

"It gets limited use, but when you use it, you generally save a life," he said.

Brock also told the selectmen that most fire departments own their own hydraulic rescue equipment rather than sharing with other towns. He said that Hingham has two and Scituate has at least one, if not more.

The most controversial item on Brock's wish list is a new fire station.

Brock joked that he set the price at $990,000 "because $1 million wouldn't fit on the sheet."

Chairman Pratt agreed that it was impossible to build for less than a million, but most of the selectmen didn't seem convinced that the town had reached the point where a new station needed to be built.

Rocco Laugelle did point out that the Beechwood area had been densely built up since the former fire station in the area had been closed down.

"We really better consider it," Laugelle said.

The same forestry truck that Brock wanted to redesign for $11,000 in 1990 was on the list for replacement in 1993.

Brock said that basically he wanted to purchase a new truck chassis to mount the equipment on.

Brock projected a cost of $30,000, but hastened to add, "I have no idea what truck prices will be in the future."

The only goodie on the list for 1994 was a new pumper for a mere $240,000.

An unimpressed Kornet told the chief to "draw a line through that one!"

Brock told the group, "Standards say a town our size should have four pumpers." He explained that the oldest pumper would be 15 years old in 1994, and the life expectancy of a pumper is 15 years.

Brock would reserve the old pumper as a back-up to be used in emergencies.

In answer to a question posed by Burt Pratt, Brock said that if the fourth pumper were added to the fleet, an additional bay would need to be constructed-- or new fire station built-- to house it.

Cohasset Branch Manager Helen Garvey on credit cards.

"THE BIG PROBLEM WITH MOST CREDIT CARDS IS THE BIG NUMBERS THEY CHARGE."

One of our checking account customers came in the other day to ask about our credit cards.

He said he had a Visa® from Citibank and a MasterCard®

from Chase Manhattan. And that he was tired of paying these big-city rates. (In his case, the annual interest was over $600.)

I showed him that if he switched to Rockland Trust, he'd be saving himself over $100.

Then I looked up at him and asked: "Wouldn't that money be doing you a lot more good if it were in your checking account?"

He just smiled and asked me for an application.

❐ Ned Thompson certainly did himself proud at Tabor Academy this fall, where he was a member of the Cross Country Team. The team recently won the Southeastern New England Cross Country Championship held at St. George's School in Newport Rhode Island. That's exciting, but the really exciting thing is that Ned also received the Cobbold Trophy, which is rewarded yearly to the outstanding Tabor Cross Country athlete. Congratulations to you Ned.

❐ Bob Shultz, son of Linda and Larry Shultz of Linden Drive fame, has an extra-special reason to celebrate this Christmas Season, he's getting married! Bob and Jen Tuws will be "hitched" on December 29, 1990 in Minnesota. We know the marriage will be a happy one, he proposed to her on Thanksgiving (the day Clark and I got married 26 years ago!) The best of luck to you, Bob and Jen!

❐ Happy birthday to Laura!

"Why pay more?"

Editorial

The bell has been rung

An interesting gathering of local residents was held this week. Three residents hosted a meeting of angered and curious taxpayers - people who are anxious to know why their assessments have risen sharply, when it appears that others have not.

Their meeting was informational. They explained the tax rate process to the gathered residents, and they discussed the abatement procedure. They urged residents who feel their homes have been unfairly assessed to file for an abatement with the assessors' department. Noting there is strength in numbers, they argued that the more people who complain about their taxes, the better the chance that any discrepancy will be rectified.

We applaud the citizens' initiative in this serious matter. Obviously, they view this as a common problem within the community, and they have tried to seek a collective solution.

If there is a discrepancy to be found, or an unfair method in the ways our homes were appraised, then we have every right to search for the truth. And these three gentlemen have helped to create a means to do that.

Yet, from our vantage, and we were not invited nor did we attend this taxpayers' meeting, it seems they may have been using tactical force when simple tact may have sufficed. They have questions, concerns and perhaps serious disagreement with the way property has been assessed this year. But rather than firing up the troops, why not first try some negotiation ?

Would it have been more constructive to invite the board of assessors to their meeting.? We think so. They are not "the enemy" in this circumstance. They are simply town volunteers, who, by the way, also own property in town and pay their tax bills.

Questions could have been asked, and answers could have been forthcoming at that meeting. Right now, a group of volunteers will be surveying the town for possible inequitable assessments in all areas of the community. The assessors could have saved them the trouble, if they had been invited to this meeting. They could have offered their statististics and services in order to simplify the request.

Every revaluation year there are disgruntled taxpayers who question the validity of their tax bills. They file for an abatement, attend a hearing, and their request is denied or approved.

But this group of residents wants to gain strength through numbers. If everyone files for an abatement, they told the residents, then the town will be forced to listen to our concerns. And if the town doesn't respond affirmatively, then this group will take their fight to the courts. Oh boy, another lawsuit for the town. And where are we supposed to get the money to pay off this one? The taxpayers, of course.

As Assessor James Lagrotteria explained. Cohasset voters approved an annual budget of $9.1 million to be raised by taxation. If everyone gets an abatement, how will be the town raise that amount.? How about another override?

Although these residents may have legitimate gripes and accurate figures to support them, we believe their concerns should have first been brought to the assessors. Let the town officials do the footwork and prove that these assessments are fair and accurate. But to sound an alert at this time is unfair to those residents who deserve an abatement, and to the town officials who are trying to complete their task in an equitable, efficient manner.

Incinerator fight not against company

To the Editor:

I was distressed to read that Karen Clancy, a Clean Harbors, Inc. spokesman, characterized HOPE's Public Information Meeting on the Proposed Hazardous Waste Incinerator as a "public execution." HEALTH is and will always be the issue, not Clean Harbors, Inc.

Ms. Clancy said, "...We are working with the EPA and MEPA. Nothing will be built that does not meet their standards."

Unfortunately it is not only a question of meeting legal standards and regulations. It is a question of inadequate standards and regulations which do not address the very real problem of protecting the environment in the case of the concentration of millions of pounds of Hazardous Wastes in a single location, in addition to the existing pollution sources in the Fore River Basin.

The potential of this proposed burning facility to cause serious air quality problems is high. The facts are:

* Burning of Hazardous Wastes generates a range of pollutants, including extremely fine particles and off gases that can contain heavy metals and dioxins. These contribute to Acid Rain and a degeneration of air quality, which can lead to respiratory and other health problems. Over 50% of the total particulates in the air exit the gas cleaning system as a gas and are converted to particles in the atmosphere by incompletely understood mechanisms.

* Tragic as it is for the environment, regulations today for the control of the burning of Hazardous Wastes are based on a percent of total weight rather than on control of the particles and off gases being emitted, except for a limited few. It is not the weight being emitted that does the damage, but the fine particles and harmful constituents of the off gas. Unfortunately it has been easier to delude the thinking of the public that they are being protected than to pursue the technology which is an essential component to the solution of the crisis faced by the government as well as the private sector in the destruction of Hazardous Wastes.

Ms. Clancy is correct when she states that the opponents are spreading a "fear campaign" through the South Shore. We are very frightened, unfortunately with justification.

As human beings our bodies need only food, water and air. We can live weeks without food; we can live days without water; but, we can only live minutes without clean air.

If you too are frightened, call your elected officials: Governor Dukakis ( ), Speaker Keverian ( ), Senator Bulger ( ), Representative Murray ( ) and Senator Golden ( ). Voice your opposition. Ask where they stand on this issue.

The process of siting a Hazardous Waste Incinerator is political. The only way to stop this siting in Braintree is to become political. Please call.

Medway resident says MIAA unfair

To the Editor:

Recent conduct of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) should be of concern to parents of students who are involved in high school athletics. The MIAA has been criticized recently for inconsistent rulings on eligibility questions, but its recent handling of the Division III South Sectional soccer championship play-off between Medway and Cohasset is the worst nightmare of anyone who supports fair play and sportsmanship.

The MIAA has sent our children the sad and tragic message that if they play a game fairly, by the rules, and in the presence of MIAA officials, those same officials, under pressure from adults with flawed values, can cause the game to be replayed. That is a disgraceful abuse of the power entrusted to the MIAA and should make parents reconsider whether the adults involved in this incident should be allowed to continue as role models for our children.

The message the Cohasset coach and the MIAA tournament director sent to our children is that sportsmanship and fair play can be set aside if the outcome of an athletic contest is not in your favor. Athletics, at least at the high school level, must be kept free from the meddling of adults who would teach our children a cynical disregard for fairness.

Thomas G. Carson
29 North St.
Medway

Ed. note

As we understand it, the timekeeper for the Cohasset-Medway game admitted to MIAA officials that he illegally stopped the clock and restarted it without authority. With that admission, the MIAA ruled the results of the game invalid, and scheduled a second game the following Monday - which Cohasset won.

Disposable is a problem

To the Editor:

The Board of Health and the Recycling Committee greatly appreciate the Mariner's excellent coverage of Recycling News.

I would like to correct a misstatement, however, in the November 30 issue stating my hope "that lots of people will use disposable pans for their holiday roasting and baking." Disposal "anything" poses problems for the environment (diapers, pans, plastics, batteries). We need to advocate the idea of Reduce, Reuse and Recycle — in that order. Reusable pans are best, of course, but aluminum recycling is the answer for any foil in our trash.

Thank you,

New wildlife center director ready for new challenges

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

If you want to talk to the new director at New England Wildlife Center you may have to compete with a critter for his attention.

His staff teases him about having left the world of wildlife for spread sheets and computer terminals, but Rick Horton still puts first things first-- and last week a Great Horned Owl, a Saw-whet Owl, and a Tufted Titmouse pulled rank.

Horton came to the center as its first program director in 1985. For Horton, it was the best of all possible worlds, combining his love of animals, children, and education.

There's no bizarre tale of how he got interested in wildlife education. His dad was involved with a children's museum in Connecticut. Holidays and vacations meant the Horton home would be taken over by the museum's menagerie.

"There was a steady stream of animals-- monkeys, snakes, birds," recollects Horton. Those animals joined the usual domestic assortment of dogs, cats, guinea pigs, and the like.

Majoring in biology was a natural extension of his life's path. When he graduated from Colby College in 1977, he worked as an animal curator for a children's museum and then as a veterinary technician and consultant on wildlife cases.

When Horton came to the New England Wildlife Center, it was still a fledgling operation. The center had been established by Cohasset veterinarian Dr. Vaughan Pratt only two years earlier.

The center's mission was "to improve the conditions under which wildlife and people can coexist." The center devoted its efforts to treating and rehabilitating injured wildlife, conducting research to improve the odds of survival, and educating the people in the region.

In March of this year, Dr. Pratt decided that it was time for him to make some changes in his life. When Pratt left, the Board of Directors appointed Horton acting director. They made the appointment permanent in November.

Just as the apple doesn't fall far from the tree, Pratt didn't get far from wildlife. The past six months have found him commuting between Cohasset and the Philippines as he concentrates his energies on the plight and needs of international marine life.

Meanwhile, the animal traffic in the treatment rooms at the clinic is mind boggling. Horton said that the clinic treats 1500 wild animals each year. Most are rehabilitated and released. Those that can't fend for themselves in the wild are generally retained for educational purposes.

The greatest cause of injuries? Cats, collisions with man-made structures, and toxic poisoning.

When Horton first joined the center, it was operating out of a tiny space on Rte. 3A. Today it has more spacious, if not more glamorous, quarters in the old Naval Ammunition Depot off Fort Hill Road in Hingham. Bit by bit, donated stuff by donated stuff, the center has expanded its treatment rooms, educational space, and animal living quarters.

It's clear that Horton loves educating the public. Even though he has become an administrator, he'll keep his hand as well as his heart in education.

"I'll tenaciously cling to the right to do programs," he says.

"It's a part of the job that is really important," he continues. "There is a great ripple effect when you help people with their animal problems."

For Horton, his staff, and volunteers, the opportunity to provide wildlife education often begins when a family shows up at their door with an injured animal.

The center has handled just about any animal you can imagine-- deer, snakes, turtles, raccoons, opossums, and an amazing variety of birds. The wildlife comes from the entire New England region.

During Horton's tenure, the center has grown to be the largest wildlife center in New England. Unlike many centers, this one has developed an expertise in wildlife in urban and suburban settings.

"The board sees us as being strong in those areas," says Horton. "We have a certain responsibility to share that information."

No change in the basic work of the center is envisioned by the new director. Now is the time to consolidate the gains and make sure the money is there to accomplish their goals.

All of the center's work is done on a shoe string budget. Horton gladly accepts cast-off refrigerators, old bathtubs, cases of Dawn detergent (for cleaning oil off waterfowl), paper towels-- and volunteer time.

Taking care of injured or orphaned animals is truly labor intensive. Feedings alone are a round-the-clock proposition.

With a limited amount of resources, sometimes hard choices have to be made.

"Calls can't always be made on the side of animals," Horton said.

The biggest challenge for Horton is money.

"The basic thing is our financial footing," he said. "We've grown very quickly from no staff in '83 to five full-time staff and two part-time."

The payroll isn't the only financial demand.

"We've got to make sure we've got enough income to maintain this service which people have come to expect," Horton added.

Horton is proud of the fact that the center provides educational programs for schools in 35 towns, for scout troops, private schools, and the general public.

"There are magic moments in education. It keeps us going," he says.

The importance of research is growing stronger, he says. Not enough is known about surgical and rehabilitation techniques, or about the toxic properties of commonly used chemicals.

Knowledge about toxicity may be as important to people as it is to the animals. Odds are that if six geese die in your backyard, you don't want your children and pets out there rolling around in the grass. Wildlife may well be an early warning system

The Society's 1990 wall calendar "Cohasset Harbor and Shores – Then and Now" features a series of early photographs relating to Cohasset's maritime history, along with modern views showing the same historical sites. It contains old photographs taken from the Society's own archives and reproduced especially for this year's calendar.

The 1990 Society wall calendar is available at a number of shops and stores in town, or through the Society directly.

Another item suitable for holiday gift-giving is the definitive history of the town and its people, Rev. E.V. Biglow's 561 page Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, Massachusetts. First printed in 1898 and recently reprinted by the Society as a commemorative volume, the "Narrative History" is the story of Cohasset

The Village at Duxbury
A Senior Living Community based on Hospitality

The Duxbury Distinction

Great Hospitality. The Village at Duxbury has a number of distinctive factors like our wonderful location on the South Shore and sponsor/owners with 40 years of experience in senior housing and healthcare. But, the fact that the philosophy for The Village and its operation has a foundation in hospitality is very important for our residents. Along with your own spacious apartment home comes convenience and a simpler lifestyle in a worry-free environment, with on-site healthcare available.

There's no more maintenance of yard and grounds (but indoor and outdoor gardening spots, if you enjoy that). Lots of help indoors with housekeeping, linen and maintenance services. When you travel, you lock the door and leave. Things will be taken care of for you whether you're gone a few days or a few months.

Select lunch or dinner from the tempting daily menus, attractively served in The Village's own beautiful private restaurant.

*The pineapple has long been a symbol of hospitality, friendship and celebration. We have chosen it to represent the lifestyle at The Village of Duxbury.

It's easy to host your family or friends. Enjoy the event in your own apartment home and do it all yourself, or call on the chef and staff to plan and help—either in your home or in the private dining room. Guests are also welcome at lunch or dinner in the restaurant or at The Village Cafe. Guest suites are available for overnight visitors.

We'd like to send you a brochure on 11 Great Reasons The Village at Duxbury Should Be Your Next Home. If you would like a copy, or if you would like to hear more about the Village, please call our Information Center at 617-934-9744, or return the coupon below.

Senior center news . . .

As we move into the Holiday Season, perhaps we should pause for a moment and give thanks for the wonderful country we live in. Every day we see new evidence of the clamor for freedom by the citizens of the communist bloc countries. We pray for those millions of people now pouring through the Berlin Wall for a peak at the freedom we already enjoy.

Your Council On Aging is enjoying an active and successful year and continuing to expand. Our year started in September with a luncheon at the beautiful new South Shore Art Center, which was colorfully decorated by the ladies of our Board of Directors. A fine meal was served and our annual business meeting followed a luncheon. Many thanks to the South Shore Art Center for the use of their facilities.

One of the newer and more successful programs is our Men's Wednesday morning breakfast club which visits a new restaurant each week. They have visited about 35 different restaurants to date. Any man feeling in need of a little laughter each week should join this group and participate in their story telling. Dr. Win Merrill is the organizer and leader of this group, which now travels radio equipped. The men's breakfast club also drove to Barre, Vt. one week and to Mt. Wachusetts the next week to enjoy the beautiful foliage. Thank you Win Merrill for the great job you are doing with this men's group which will add morning bowling starting November 15.

Activities always seem to increase in November as the holiday spirit starts to take hold. Our outreach worker, Sue Connolly, continues to locate new seniors who are in need of companionship and advice. Kathy Bryanton, Director, Joe Buckley, Shine representative, Pat Ryan, Shine Coordinator, Marguerite Rittershaus, Secretary and Gerard Keating, Chairman Council On Aging all represented Cohasset at the regional meeting in Worcester, held by the Massachusetts Councils On Aging on November 2nd and 3rd.

Sunday, Nov. 12, eight seniors from Cohasset rose early to participate in a Walk-A-Thon held by South Shore Elder Services at the Braintree Mall to raise money for the "Meals on Wheels Program." This group was led by the energenic leader of the Cohasset Strutters, Ann Leonard. Our thanks to you ladies for your contribution to this worthy cause. November 8, a well attended "Keep Well Clinic" was held at the Senior Center in cooperation with the Social Service League.

The Tuesday luncheons have become more active. The number attending has increased and the programs are expanding.

The Seniors Gourmet Cooking Class enjoy pieces of gourmet pizza after their lesson. They are, l to r, Joe Buckley, Tom Anderson, Suzanne Fone, Josephine Irwin and instructor Anna Abbruzzese.

I interrupted writing this article on November 14 to attend a Workshop "On the healing power of Humor" sponsored by the Social Service League. Loretta LaRocke, a health educator and humorist, who conducted the program was outstanding in her presentation, far more enjoyable and beneficial than the latest bottle of Geritol, as she boosted the spirits of those in attendance.

November 29, the Fourth Ecumenical Service of the Towns of Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset was held at St. Helen's Church in Norwell, with a luncheon following the service. This is always well attended with many of the residents of the Nursing homes participating.

Early in December, we will recognize our many volunteers at a luncheon to be held at Kimballs By The Sea. Once again, we wish to thank Dan Leahy for making this popular event possible.

November 7, I attended the annual budget meeting of the Advisory Board along with the heads of all Town departments, to listen to instructions and advice on preparing budgets for the coming year. While some might say we are facing a financial crisis, I call it a period of adjustment, whereby we rethink our way of doing business and attempt to preserve the programs now in effect.

On the last two elections on budgets, the voters indicated very clearly they expect all departments to hold the line on expenditures. Department heads will try to follow this sentiment, but voters too must be prepared for adjustments, as services in some areas may have to be reduced or eliminated. With patience and understanding on all sides, much can be accomplished toward maintaining quality service and good government.

The Board of Selectmen are discussing the possibility of a Citizens Committee to evaluate the levels of service below which the various services should not be permitted to fall.

In the meantime, put a smile in your day and enjoy the Holiday Season. We wish to recognize two of our citizens who will become Centurians in the next few weeks and wish for them a special holiday season. First, Mrs. Jessie Wilson of Black Rock Rd. who becomes 100 years of age near the end of December and Mrs. Margaret Hendrie of Margin St., who will reach that charmed figure early in January. May this Holiday Season be especially happy for you both.

A special thanks to our hard working Director, Kathy Bryanton, her assistant, Marguerite Rittershaus, all our volunteers and the various Town employees who assisted through the year. Your good work and dedication is appreciated by all our Seniors.

As we close out this year 1989, my own good wishes to all Seniors for good health and continued peace in the years ahead.

"May The Blessings Of Christmas Be Yours!"

Gerard Keating, Chairman
Cohasset Council On Aging

THANKS TO ALL!!

My sincere thanks to all who assisted us during the past year – board members, office staff, drivers, "The Friends", many, many drivers, instructors, nutrition volunteers, our Shine workers, our Outreach worker, and all the other wonderful people who have volunteered in any capacity.

I wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Chamber of Commerce news . . .

Well, here we are. Less than a month 'til Christmas, and the shopping crunch is on. Now the panic starts in earnest. The kids, the dog, Aunt Marie and Uncle Jim. . . oh no, who did I forget? You sneak in shopping between work, the kids, the house, the meals. When you have a minute to breathe there's decorating, cards, sending and answering invitations, pageants, shows, and, and, and. . . . . .

Hey, slow down. Forget the Mall, the Plaza, the Basement. Take stock. Gulp down a big breath of air. Now, where's your list? Let's see. Aunt Marie loves fine porcelain figures. Have you been to Cohasset Jewelers lately? Uncle Jim is a jogger. The Good Sport has just the thing for him. Your sister would die for a Cohasset tile from Cards and Shards. And I bet it wouldn't end up in the Good Will pile like last year's sweater. The new Buttonwood Books and Toys has just the thing for little Lisa and Tim; and an outfit from EIEIO childrens wear would look darling on the baby. Can't you just picture her snuggled up next to the cameo brooch from King's Jewelers on Grandma's dress? A new camera from Noble's Camera Shop would help preserve that moment forever. And while you're there, you can pick up the film for the stockings.

But there's still so much to do. How about a sculpture from the So. Shore Arts center or a beautiful Lisa Bemis water color from Cards and Shards? Mom would never forget it. And the college girl has had her eye on jewelry and watches from Kings and Cohasset Jewelers for months. Flowers from Elena Sestito can bring your best wishes all across the country; and a basket from Sea'n Cheese will bring a Holiday smile to any friend. How about a sign for dad's tool shed from David Hassan Woodcarvers? Or a birdfeeder from Cohasset Hardware for Grampa? And Hagerty/Cohasset Colonials has just the piece of furniture you've had your eye on since you first saw it. Drop a hint. He won't even have to travel to find it. It' right here in Cohasset. And don't forget the essentials under the tree. Perfume and make-up from Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy, a bottle of fine wine from Liquors Unlimited, a good book from Buttonwood's. Just wrap them all up, put them under the tree, and relax. In Cohasset, we've got it all. All you have to do is look.

If you would like more suggestions, call your local Chamber members. They will be happy to help you make the perfect choice. Or call the Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010. We'll be glad to point you in the right direction. Right here in Cohasset.

The Sunoco Station on Rte. 3A, across from the Super Stop & Shop, is now under new ownership.

Paul and Donna Duddy has recently opened under the name 'Duddy Family Sunoco.'

"It's a great location and a beautiful town" Donna said. "Our only problem is the station was shut down for so long after Sunoco installed new tanks and equipment that people haven't realized we're here yet." Donna worked at Quincy CoOperative Bank for 11 years, starting off as a teller and working her way up to a supervisor.

Paul is a certified Automotive Technician and worked at South Shore Buick for nine years. Paul and Donna have been married for 11 years and have a son Edward, 4. They currently live in South Weymouth, but plan to move to Cohasset this spring.

The Sunoco Station on Route 3A, opposite Super Stop & Shop, has opened under the new management of Paul and Donna Duddy.

Deer Hill students win award

Last year's sixth grade students produced 3 video news programs which aired on cable Channel 3. These programs were entered in a Student Video Contest sponsored by the Mass Assoc. for Educational Media and Mass Educational Television.

The school was recently notified of the results of that contest, and received a Certificate of Excellence in recognition of their Honorable Mention Award.

Wampanoag Indian visit

The third grade students at the Osgood School recently were visited by Anita Nielsen, a Wampanoag Indian. Ms. Nielsen kept the children enthralled with her stories regarding Indian culture, customs and the difference between Native and non-Native values. Some of the differences she mentioned were that the Native American strives to live in harmony with nature, and values cooperation and humility, the non-Native tries to have a mastery over nature and values competition and winning. Ms. Nielsen stressed the environmental aspect of living on this planet. She told the children:

"The only way we can't survive is when other men destroy the earth. Then there will be no survivors of mankind — and we are close to that "Brave New World" of destruction. When we hold Mother Earth in our hands we can feel the life fading and hear her cry. It saddens my people for we stand helpless and feel that we have caused our ancestors to become restless and we await the return of the Spider Woman."

Mrs. Montouri's class sent individual thank-you notes to Ms. Nielsen in which they thanked her for showing them the fire starter, what she did with corn, animal skins and other interesting facts about Wampanoag life.

This program was brought to the third graders to enhance their curriculum by the PSO Curriculum Enrichment Committee. The teachers and students in the Osgood Third Grade classes would like to thank the PSO for bringing them this interesting program.

Deer Hill receives a gift

Recently, Kenneth Ekberg, Principal of the Deer Hill school accepted a gift from the Cox Estate. It consisted of a two piece library table, a four piece livingroom set and an office secretary. The furniture will be put in our school library. Our school is very grateful for the donation.

Art Center comes to Osgood

Mrs. Hurley's first grade class visited the South Shore Art Center recently. Mrs. Connolly an artist and art teacher gave the children a sneak preview of the current exhibit "Artful Apparel." Afterwards the children went upstairs and received a lesson in creating their own imaginary creatures using different textures, sequins, buttons, fabrics, and other materials which they had been collecting all week. Mothers and Dads may view their children's finished projects which are on display in the upstairs gallery. All had a grand time, thanks also to Mrs. Kinch and Mrs. Palone for their assistance in planning this trip.

We have it on video, (I hope)!

Thanksgiving presentation

November 21, Deer Hill Open Space had a Thanksgiving presentation. Many of the students dressed up as pilgrims and Indians. Also Mr. Ekberg, our principal, was a pilgrim, along with Mr. Shultz, the sixth grade Open Space teacher.

It was as though pilgrims and Indians were really there talking to us, about how they lived in Plimouth.

Osgood artist of the month

The Artist of the Month program was off to a great start as very special moms introduced the children at Osgood to America's most famous female artist, Mary Cassett. Our young artists blended pastels as they created an impressionistic picture like Mary Cassatt using one of her favorite themes of mother and child.

Many thanks to all of the parents that participated and to the curriculum enrichment of the PSO that funds our program.

Drug and alcohol committee begins report

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

After spending eight weeks exploring the underside of life in Cohasset, the drug and alcohol abuse committee is ready to move into the future.

Tuesday night, the committee went to work on their preliminary report to the selectmen. The report will outline the nature and extent of the problem in Cohasset. The final report will contain the recommendations for dealing with drug and alcohol abuse among townspeople.

The meeting was the committee's first opportunity to share perspectives and approaches to the task of informing and educating the community at large.

Some members expressed a desire to get involved in making program recommendations, particularly for the school age population. Other members counseled against getting too far ahead of their agenda.

"It occurs to me that maybe we need to step back . . . and come up with some recommendations we can all feel comfortable with," suggested Wigmore Pierson. "Maybe we ought to find out what areas we want to get involved in."

It's already apparent that many of the recommendations will deal with programs to be introduced into the schools.

One reason that the schools are getting so much attention is that there is a perception that this is the most vulnerable and the most reachable group. There is also a perception that too little drug education is being provided to the youth of Cohasset.

Although some members thought that the school system was providing too little too late, Pat Baird and Mike Sullivan told the group that their early elementary age children were coming home with facts about alcohol and drug abuse to share.

"Mike Gill (director of health education for Cohasset schools) is doing everything that it is possible for one man to do," said Baird. Gill has instituted a sequential program of drug and alcohol education introduced in the early grades by classroom teachers and later in special health classes.

The superintendent of schools Stephen Hart prepared a letter for the committee stating that the school system needed $25,000 in order to hire another health education teacher in order to more adequately address drug and alcohol education.

The controversy over the school's apparent disinterest in the D.A.R.E. program continued to preoccupy the committee.

Wigmore Pierson related a recent conversation with Superintendent Hart. Pierson said Hart admitted that the administration was opposed to the implementation of the D.A.R.E. program in the school system. According to Hart, the program is not necessary because the school has other programs to address the problem.

D.A.R.E. may be the only way to expand drug and alcohol education in the schools, according to committee members.

A D.A.R.E. program can be instituted with minimal cash outlay. The training is provided at no charge to the officer assigned to the program. Hanover's D.A.R.E. officer draws his salary out of the police budget for overtime and compensatory time. Materials for the program average $500 per year.

David Hayes of the Norfolk County District Attorney's office also expressed a willingness to provide training and back-up services for drug education in the schools at no cost.

The state's fiscal crisis loomed large in the minds of the members.

"It's an exercise in futility to ask for extra money," said committee member Priscilla Tebbetts. "I think we have to be realistic. You better believe we aren't going to be getting any money."

The committee will probably ask for funds anyway. Both Jack Golden and Wig Pierson indicated a willingness to go on the floor at town meeting to plead the cause.

The committee plans to send out a mass mailing asking parents to pledge not to provide alcoholic beverages to minors or to condone drinking by youths.

Recipients will be asked to put themselves on public record by contributing to an advertisement listing the names of every household taking the pledge.

The program is modeled after a Michigan project.

The committee will meet again next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Town Hall. The group will review drafts of the preliminary report and share information on programs under consideration. The general public is welcome.

New Theatre schedule change

That New Theatre, the community theatre based in Norwell, has announced a change in its 1989-90 season schedule.

TNT has replaced its April show with the musical-comedy "Baby," which focuses on three couples and their journey to parenthood. There will be open auditions for the show during the first week in January.

Because of the show change, TNT has rearranged its production dates for the remaining three musicals of the season. All shows will be presented at the Cushing Center, Rt. 123 in Norwell. They include: "The Rink," Jan. 18 and 19 at 8 p.m. and Jan 20 at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.; "Baby," Feb. 22 at 8 p.m.., Feb. 23 and 24 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 25 at 7 p.m.; and "Cinderella," the last two weekends in April.

Tickets for "The Rink" are on sale now at $10 each, and can be ordered by calling 878-1298 or 826-7983, or by mailing a check to TNT, P.O. Box 270, Norwell, 02061 with a self-addressed stamped envelope. Orders should specify performance date and time desired. Mastercard and Visa are accepted.

St. Stephen's Church

The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, Rector
383-1083

A welcome to new lay readers

Ben Lacy and Alicia Seavey have accepted positions of lay readers at St. Stephen's. Ben is a relatively new member and Alicia has been a member for many years. They will bring much to this ministry.

A warm thank you and well done go to JohnVivian and Willa Hood, who finish their terms as lay readers. Lay readers are licensed by the bishop, read lessons, administer the chalice, offer meditations, advise the rector on matters of worship, and help coordinate meetings of lectors and chalice bearers.

Prison Fellowship "Angel Tree"

Church School families and others in the church are invited to purchase presents to be given to children of parents who are in Massachusetts prisons. The Angel Tree program is sponsored by Prison Fellowship.

A Christmas tree will be set up in Walton Rodgers Hall decorated with paper angels that bear the names and gift wishes of children whose parents are incarcerated. Individuals select angels, purchase the gifts listed, and return them to Sarah Pease (383-1406) who is heading up our Angel Tree program. Gifts will be distributed to the children in time for Christmas.

Sarah anticipates that 20 children will be assisted through the project here. Similar Angle Trees will be set up in hundreds of cities across the country.

The Angel Tree will be up from Sunday, Dec. 3, and will remain until Friday, Dec. 15. Call Sarah to find out how you can help.

A Wellspring Christmas

If the "angels" get picked off the tree before you get there, here is another opportunity for local giving. Joan Cellini, Executive Director of Wellspring, a major social service provider in Hull, has explained that she always has families or individuals in need at Christmas. With state cutbacks in services, these times are financially devastating for the poor. If you would like to sponsor a child, an adult, or a family this Christmas season, please call Joan at 924-3211. The Rector has suggested we make our secret pals our neighbors at Wellspring this Advent. Your thoughtfulness will make a big difference to someone otherwise forgotten this Christmas time.

Potluck suppers

Potluck suppers will again take place on Wednesdays in Advent. The suppers will begin at 6:30 p.m. Families bring casseroles enough for eight, couples bring salads, singles bring desserts.

The first potluck supper will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 6. The program will be one of making Advent Wreaths, which we can then take home and use throughout the season. Families with small children who wish to get them home after supper in time for bed, can come early and make their wreaths at 5:45 p.m.

Because of the hardship experienced at Wellspring this year, our secret pals will be our neighbors there in Hull.

Our second potluck will be on Wednesday, December 13. The program will be a hymn sing featuring many of our most loved carols.

Evensong in Advent

Thursdays in Advent will feature a service of Evensong in the church beginning at 6 p.m. the service lasts about half an hour. It is a good way after work and before dinner to come in and recognize God's special presence and beauty in our lives. Evensong will take place on Thursdays, Dec. 7, 14, and 21.

Advent perspective

Ever feel harried at Christmas time, lose the spirit in the press of people at the shopping mall? Each year St. Stephen's offers a quiet day, this year Saturday, December 9 from 9 a.m. to noon. The morning features times of quiet, meditations, and worship. It is the best way we know to take time out and remind ourselves what Advent and Christmas are really all about.

Wellspring update

Nov. 5, Joan Cellini, Executive Director of Wellspring in Hull, addressed the Outreach Committee. She thanked the congregation of St. Stephen's for its generosity and ongoing commitment to Wellspring. Wellspring's focus is to address the food, clothing, and counseling needs of Hull's needy families. She informed the group that the first 6 months of 1989 have produced a need to service 35 families per month (average of 6 persons per family), which is already equal to all of 1988!

Help is now needed due to the Commonwealth's funding cutbacks and difficult economic times. Please consider volunteering time in the Wellspring shop (located at 814 Nantasket Ave., Hull) or donating money on a monthly basis to meet the ongoing expenses of the Center. Volunteers are also needed to instruct the Adult Literacy Program. Interested volunteers may reach Joan Cellini at 925-3211.

Nominating Committee

The last day for parishioners to forward names for Vestry to the Committee is Sunday, Dec. 3. you may call Pam Earle (383-1666), Sally Avery (383-6043), John Smoot (383-1195), and Mary Beth Curry (383-9104).

Plant Offering

If you would like to provide a poinsettia for the altar on Dec. 24 please call Nina mornings at the church office. Cost per plant: approx. $10.

From the Outreach Committee:

Thanks to your generosity and caring, we were able to give a lot of food, etc., to Wellspring, and restock our Homeshare apartment. Beginning in January, baskets will be provided every Family Circle Sunday for a monthly in gathering (the next one is Jan. 14) so we can continue to make a real difference.

Our first Homeshare family stayed barely six weeks before finding more permanent housing. The next family will be moving in soon. The Outreach Committee thanks you again for your continuing support.

South Shore Hockey League action . . .

By Marc Nantel
Special to the Mariner

If the fans had to pay to watch last week's South Shore Hockey Assn. action, they certainly would have received their money's worth. Three of the most action-packed games held in years were played before a near capacity crowd of screaming fans.

First game held between Bay State Auto Spring and the Varmints had the fans standing up all night. Bay State drew first blood when Skip Manganaro scored after a nice fake to make it 1-0. Varmints spare player John McNulty tied it up half way in the second period. The Varmints scored again to pull ahead when Joe Slowe shot in thru the legs of Bay State goalie Mark Selbert. Bay State tied it up 30 seconds later when Tom Chisolm scored on a beautiful pass from Steve Levangie. Chisolm scored again on the same set up from Levangie to make it 3-2. 3rd period was scoreless when both teams missed numerous chances.

The second game was between Sullivan Tire and Garden's Pub who always come out with their best games. Sullivan opened the scoring early, 30 seconds into the 1st period when Pub's goalie kicked the puck into the net. Sullivan sustained the pressure long enough to make it 2-0 when Marty King took a pass from Dan Begin and weaved his way to the slot and fired low on the ice and in-between the legs of Pub's goalie. Sullivan kept the pressure on but Pub made their chances count. Tom McLaughlin fired in the first goal and Paul O'Brien fired in the tying goal.

Pub's Mike O'Connell stole the puck from a Sullivan defenseman and wristed a nice shot past their goalie with one minute left to earn the 3-2 victory.

The last game featured Gulph Construction vs. Roman Garden in a real battle of the goalies. Gulph's Larry Fell scored both goals in the third period on assists from Chuck Nash and Ted Malley. Gulph's style of checking kept Roman off stride all night. Goalie Brian Deacetis came up with some exceptional saves to keep Roman in the game. Gulph's Rick Swanson earned the shut-out.

Around the Rink:

Credit all the goalies for the low scores for this week, numerous saves were labeled goals all the way. QYH rink is working on an over 30 tournament for April. Gulph uses more subs than regulars. Purple is starting to look green.

Evy Scotvold

Special skating clinic offered

Reknown figure skating coach Evy Scotvold is conducting a special six-week clinic for the Skating Club of Hingham at the Pilgrim Arena off of Derby Street.

The Cohasset resident teaches two ability groups of young figure skaters in two 45-minute sessions starting at 5:40 p.m. on Friday evenings.

Scotvold has been an Olympic figure skating coach for the past four Olympics. One of his students is Paul Wylie, who placed in the top ten in the 1988 Olympics. A student at Harvard, Wylie plans to compete in the 1992 Winter Olympics.

Scotvold, who also coaches at the Acton rink, thinks the interest in figure skating is on the rise.

"There's been a pick up in interest due to a change in fundamentals," says Scotvold. Scotvold explained that the figures and free-style schools are now separate.

"Skaters who only want to do free style can do that," he says. "And the cost is 1/2." Before the change, an aspiring skater would have to spend three hours a day on patch or figure practice and another three hours on free skating – now that's all changed, according to Scotvold.

"Figure skating has now opened up to five-to-10 times as many people," he says. Scotvold doesn't think the lack of concentration on school figures will hurt the quality of the sport.

"The greatest free skaters through out history have always been poor figure skaters," says Scotvold.

In the Hingham clinics, Scotvold is working on technique, carriage, and proper positioning in jumps and spins.

For more information about the Skating Club of Hingham, please call 749-6660.

Continental Cablevision changes . . .

Belliveau to Scituate

Robert Belliveau, Continental Cablevision's program director in Cohasset for the last year and a half, has been named program director for the company's Scituate cable system.

Belliveau, who started his cable career as programming volunteer in Hingham in 1987,replaces Wendy Forman, who recently was promoted to area program manager for Continental Cablevision on the South Shore.

"Scituate cable viewers will now be the beneficiaries of the energy and talent that Bob Belliveau used so effectively to get a number of exciting community programming ventures off the ground in Cohasset," said Forman. "I'm confident Scituate will like what it sees of Bob's work.

While in Cohasset, Belliveau was instrumental in launching the very popular "Pierson to Person," a live weekly interview and call-in program with host Wigmore Pierson; he produced "Drugs and Youth," a live, Donahue-style talk show from Cohasset High School; he instituted regular cable coverage of selectmen's meetings; and he started a cable program with the South Shore Arts Center.

Belliveau is a Dean's List graduate of the Northeast Broadcasting School; has served internships with WBZ-TV4's "Evening Magazine" and WCVB-TV5 sports department; and was an on-air volunteer at National Public Radio's Las Vegas affiliate, KNPR.

He resides in Pembroke with his wife , Connie.

Forman is regional manager

Wendy Forman of Scituate, a seven-year veteran of cable television programming, has been named area program manager for Continental Cablevision's six-town South Shore cable system.

She will direct Continental's local programming efforts in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate, supervising local program directors in each of those towns.

Forman, who has served as Continental's Scituate program director for the last six years, replaces Patricia Farrell, who recently was promoted to operations manager of Continental's new Mashpee cable system on Cape Cod.

"Continental Cablevision is fortunate to have someone of Wendy Forman's talent and experience," said John Walber, Continental General Manager. "Wendy has been particularly successful in building community involvement in cable, and that should translate into more and better programs on our local and regional channels."

"I want to see even more comprehensive coverage of our six communities, particularly 'Newsbeat 53' program," Forman said. "And I'd like to involve a broad cross-section of community volunteers, from students to senior citizens."

Forman began her cable career in 1982 with American Cablesystems as an intern with the Newburyport cable system, then as assistant program director in Arlington. She became Scituate program director in 1983 and stayed with the system after American's merger with Continental Cablevision.

In Scituate, Forman helped build a strong core of community volunteers, 35 of whom have contributed to local TV coverage continuously for her six years there. She also has actively encouraged young people to learn about television production, this year teaching an advanced course to 40 high school students at Continental studio.

Forman grew up in Ipswich, Mass., and is currently working toward her degree through an independent study program at the University of Vermont

Cohasset recycling news . . .

The Recycling News this week was written by Jennifer Longley.

In order for recycling to be economically viable, we should buy products made from recycled materials whenever possible. We cannot recycle if there isn't a market for it. Supporting the markets saves energy, saves resources, reduces incineration, and helps protect the environment from contamination from a variety of sources. It will also help to bring downthe cost of recycling. Listed below are locations where recycled products can be bought, or phone numbers or addresses from which catalogs of recycled products (and other environmentally safe products) can be ordered. Following that, there is a list of non-toxic alternatives to common toxic household products.

Graham Knight, from Leicestershire, England, helped to restore St. Stephen's Carillons. He is the Scoutmaster of the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts in England. He graciously invited the Bear Dens to tour the famous Bells of St. Stephen's. The Scouts eagerly asked him how Scouting differed from Cohasset to England prior to the tour. The Scouts even were able to practice in the "practice room" how the bells are played. In appreciation, the Scouts will be sending Mr. Knight the photos taken of him and the Dens and our Old Mills District Patch and Pin. Troop 28 BSA provided a monogramed neckerchief of Cohasset.

Keep path to mailbox clear of snow

The U.S. Postal Service asks area residents to clear ice and snow from walkways and steps leading to their mailbox so letter carriers will be able to deliver their mail in a safe and timely manner this winter.

According to the Postal Service, letter carriers experience a high incidence of injuries resulting from slips, trips and falls when icy and snowy conditions prevail. Many of these accidents could be prevented if walkways and steps were shoveled, salted or sanded.

Health board gets okay to re-issue $52 stickers

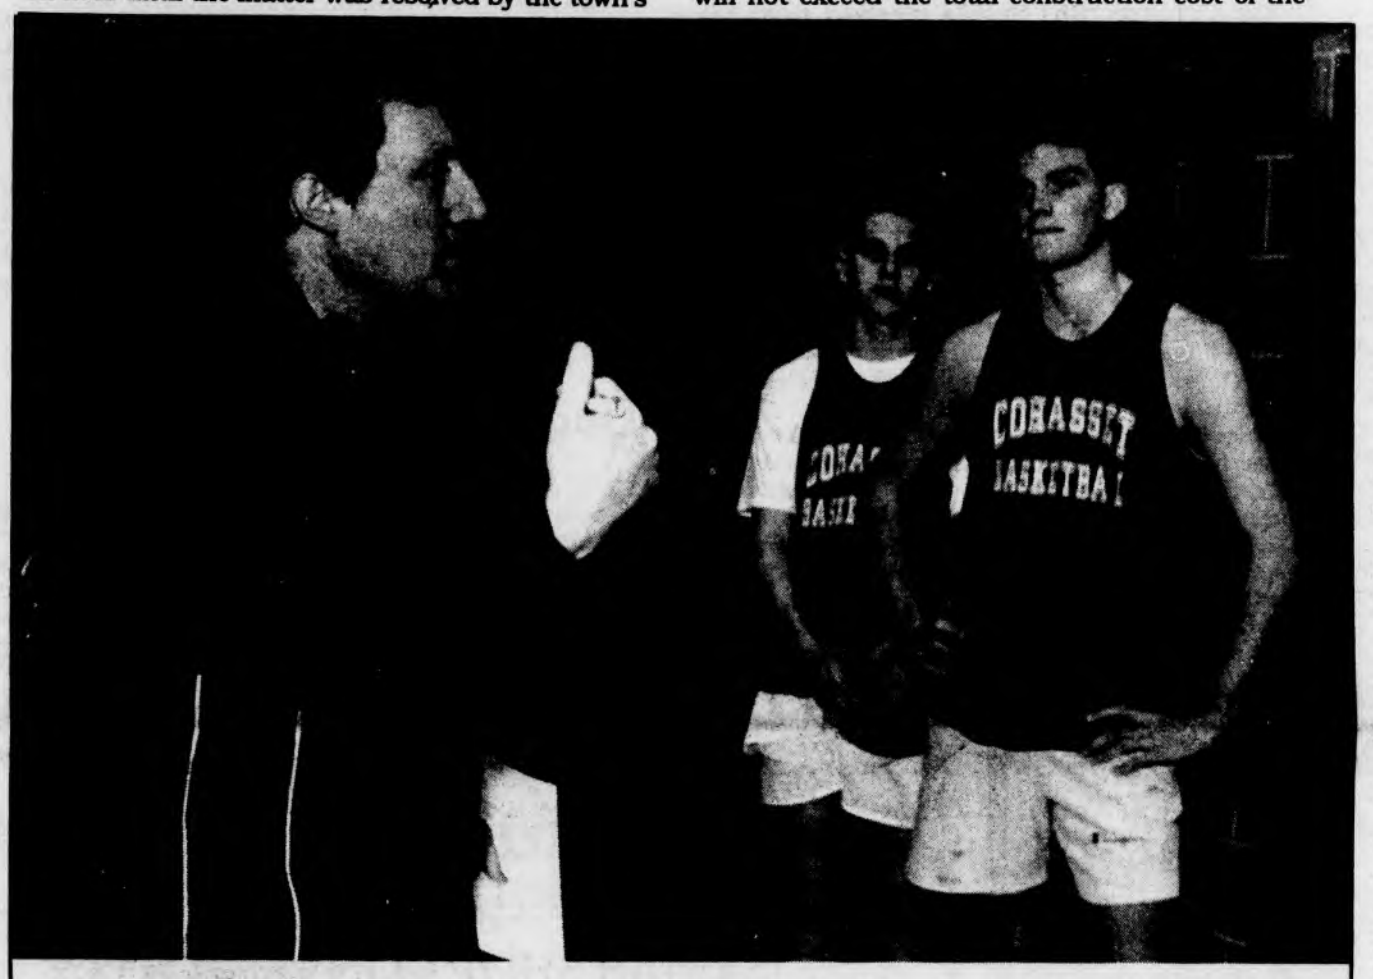
With the blessing of town counsel, the board of health will again be issuing separate permit stickers for the new transfer station.

After researching the legality of whether the board can issue a separate user fee for the transfer station, town counsel Richard Henderson told the health department this week it was okay to issue the $52 stickers. The sale of the stickers had been on hold until the matter was resolved by the town's attorney.

"I am not ruling on the morality of issuing the permits, just the legality," Henderson said late Tuesday. After researching the Massachusetts General Laws, Henderson decided it was within the health board's authority to issue a user fee for the landfill facility. And the $52 total was well within the allowable limit, since the per capita payments will not exceed the total construction cost of the facility.

The health board voted Tuesday night to begin re-issuing the transfer station stickers once they receive a written statement from Henderson.

Health Agent Joseph Godzik said they are prepared to begin selling the $52 stickers this weekend, as long as they have received that formal decision from attorney Henderson.



If the decision is rendered in writing by Friday, the transfer station stickers will be sold at the landfill from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 16 and Sunday, Dec. 17.

Those will be the scheduled hours for the sale of the stickers, except during the holiday weekends. The transfer station permits will be sold from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 23 and Dec. 30 only.

"As long as we get that letter, the stickers will be sold this weekend," Dr. Godzik stated Wednesday.

Selectmen requested the intervention of town counsel in the matter after they received complaints about the new transfer station stickers. Residents are now required to purchase

Boys' basketball team shoots for top

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

They're not shooting for the state finals, just yet. But that doesn't mean the boys' basketball team won't get there.

Coach Arnie Reppucci is setting his sights toward more simple goals. He just wants his boys to have fun, to enjoy the game, and maybe to learn something along the way.

The team captains are of a similar mind.

"We're not saying we'll win the state title," tri-captain Sean McCarthy said. "But maybe we will."

What Coach Reppucci does promise, however, is a season filled with "different" things for both players and spectators.

It will be, he said, a season for everyone to enjoy. Reppucci is putting the finishing touches on some of those changes, so he isn't free at this time to elaborate. But he promises, a trip to the games this season will be well worth the price of admission.

"I have to thank the basketball boosters for all their help in making this all possible," the coach said. "With their assistance, we'll be having some new stuff that I think everyone will enjoy."

That "new stuff" includes a pre-game show in which music will be provided while the team warms

Fire damages Atlantic Ave. home

For the second day in a row, fire seriously damaged a single-family home in Cohasset.

A two-alarm fire Wednesday morning caused at least $100,000 worth of damage to an oceanside home at 255 Atlantic Avenue. One firefighter sustained a bruised finger, but no occupants were injured in the blaze that was reported to the fire department at 11:50 a.m. by an owner, Mrs. Sam Wakeman.

The fire was brought under control by about 1 p.m., according to Fire Chief Daniel Brock, who praised the mutual aid efforts of Hingham, Hull and Scituate.

A cause has not been determined, although the blaze began in a second floor bedroom of the original portion of the home, Chief Brock said. At the time the fire began, two painters from The Livingstone Co. were inside the home using flammable materials. Chief Brock said it is unknown at this time whether the fire was ignited by the materials, or whether the materials helped to accelerate the blaze.

The fire spread from the second floor bedroom, gutting the entire second floor in the original section of the home. There was severe heat and smoke damage throughout the entire second floor, Chief Brock stated.

The fire spread down the front stairway through the ceiling into the first floor living room. The entire house sustained smoke and heat damage.

Officials declared the home uninhabitable and shut off all utilities to the structure.

Mrs. Wakeman was home at the time of the fire, along with a group of friends who were playing cards in the first floor of the house.

500 beat deadline for tax abatement

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

It was tax abatement filing day as well as Pearl Harbor Day.

Approximately 500 Cohasset property owners beat the Dec. 7 deadline for requesting a non-statutory abatement. The number is not quite so overwhelming considering the town always gets "a couple hundred requests" for abatement. "We had well over 100 last year," recollected assessor Thomas S. Duggan.

Tax bills were sent out for 3300 parcels.

Homeowners who are entitled to a statutory abatement based on age, death of a spouse, handicapping condition, or veteran status still have until Dec. 15 to file, but all other property owners are stuck with the bill they received if they missed the Dec. 7 deadline.

According to Chairman James W. Lagrotteria, no exceptions are made for late submissions. Assessors have little sympathy for those who plead ignorance: in addition to the information printed on the back of the tax bill, the assessors' office went to the trouble of stapling a bright yellow notice to the front of every bill to make sure property owners knew exactly what steps to take to get an abatement.

The assessors established a procedure for dealing with abatements.

"We'll take each case individually, just as we have every year before," said Duggan.

Tax bills that are obviously in error will be dealt with on a priority basis and residential properties will be handled before commercial properties.

One piece of irony gave assessors the only amusement they're likely to experience for some time to come: the requirement that the first half of the tax bill must be paid in full in order for an abatement to be considered means that the more requests for abatement, the better off the town is -- at least for the short run. Given the cash flow problems that Cohasset is experiencing, the treasurer needs all the tax dollars she can get.

CHA settlement

The Cohasset Harbor Association tax abatement settlement has finally been put to rest with an agreement to apply the remaining money owed to CHA against their taxes over the next three years.

The dispute over the taxes was settled out of court with the parties agreeing to an abatement on the 1987 and 1989 taxes. A certificate of withdrawal was filed with the court.

That should have ended the matter. Cohasset Harbor Association duly "filed for the '89 abatement, but it was never perfected," according to town counsel Richard Henderson.

The explanation from the assessors office is that the staff didn't realize that the case had been settled for '89 as well as '87, and the necessary paperwork was not processed.

Because no money is left to pay for 1989 abatements, the parties have agreed to apply the $11,100 abatement owed to CHA in the form of credits against future taxes spread over the next three years.

According to Chairman James S. Lagrotteria, "This is a very clean solution to a very messy situation."

Morning fire on Sheldon Rd.

The cause of an early morning house fire Tuesday on Sheldon Road is under investigation.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock said a fire at 25 Sheldon Road was reported by the homeowner at 5:48 a.m. At this time, officials believe the fire may have been caused by either electrical wiring or electric heat in the single-family home.

The fire began in a first floor ceiling in the home belonging to Pauline Toumpouras. She was home at the time of the fire, along with her sister-in-law, according to Chief Brock. No one was injured in the blaze which was brought under control within thirty minutes, he said. Scituate Fire Department covered the Cohasset station while the engines were at the fire scene.

The fire was contained to two rooms within the first floor and a small closet on the second floor, although there was smoke damage throughout the house.

Chief Brock estimates the damage at about $50,000, although the occupants may remain in the home.

To renew or not?

The selectmen's office will give two local auto companies one last chance to renew their licenses for 1990.

Two companies, Brown's Foreign Motors and Cohasset Imports, have not notified selectmen whether they will renew their licenses for next year. Their current licenses expire by Dec. 31, and selectmen have only one more meeting to decide on their license applications.

Girls Scouts caroling

The Cohasset Girl Scouts received permission from selectmen to perform Christmas Carols in Cohasset Village on Dec. 20 from 4:30 to 6 p.m.

The Girl Scouts will travel from the Village to the senior citizen housing at 60 Elm Street. Selectmen voted unanimously to support the proposal.

Town pays off paint job

Selectmen voted Monday night to pay Smith-Grove Construction Co. the remaining balance of $2,116 for painting they completed to the exterior of the Paul Pratt Library.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle warned the board that after inspecting the cupola atop the library roof, he's convinced the widow's walk which surrounds the cupola is ready to collapse. Reconstruction of the widow's walk was not part of the contract with Smith-Grove, according to executive secretary Greg Doyon, although there was some minor repair to cupola.

"But something has to be done immediately," Laugelle warned, saying that the library trustees should make sure that renovation work is completed soon.

Dunkin' Donuts gets license

After conferring with town counsel, selectmen decided to give a common victualler's license to John Cadette, owner of Dunkin' Donuts which will be located within the Cohasset Plaza on Rte. 3A.

There was some question whether the store could be opened until 12 a..m. The planning board wrote a letter to selectmen, stating their objections to the closing time, saying that a town bylaw prohibits retail stores from remaining open after 11 p.m.

But selectmen noted that other establishments have been allowed to remain open until 12 a.m., including the Mister Donuts shop at Cushing Plaza. The ownership of that store has voluntarily requested a 10 p.m. closing.

"My understanding is that the (town bylaw) restriction is specific to the Stop and Shop," Selectman Diana Kornet said.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson ruled later in Monday night's meeting that establishments holding a common victualler's license, such as Agean Fare and Cohasset Pizza, may be open until 12 a.m. According to the bylaw, it is retail establishments, such as the Stop and Shop, which must close by 11 p.m. Therefore, the new store may be open from 5 a.m. to 12 a.m. as requested, he said.

The new donut shop will be located in the southern end of the new plaza building, toward the right of the main entrance.

Duggan resigns from board

Selectmen voted to accept with great regret the resignation of Charles Duggan from the personnel committee. His replacement is Peter Pacetti of Evergreen Lane. There is another new member of that board. Jim French of Doane Sreet is the new member of the personnel committee.

Looking for Dusty

A Scituate woman is desperately seeking her lost puppy.

The woman is looking for her daughter's beige Cocker Spaniel, named, "Dusty." The dog, who is not yet a year old, was last seen in Cohasset on Saturday, Dec. 9. The dog has been seen in the Village area and in Beechwood.

Dusty is wearing a blue collar and has registration tags. There is a reward for anyone who finds Dusty. Please call 545-2058 if you can help this woman find her lost dog.

Woolworth's open early

Selectmen support a request made by Woolworth's at the Tedeschi Plaza to open early on Sunday, Dec. 24.

Store manager John Hathaway asked permission to open the store at 10 a.m. on that day only for the convenience of Christmas shoppers. Although he first went to the police department for permission, he was told by an officer that it was a decision to be made by the selectmen.

Selectmen said since the issue is under the pervue of the Massachusetts Blue Laws, the police chief must make the final decision. Selectmen voted unanimously to support Hathaway's request, which must now go before the police chief.

And in other action, selectmen voted to extend the hours at With Richard's restaurant on Dec. 31 to 2 a.m. This has become an annual request by the restaurant in order to accommodate its New Year's Eve customers. There has never been a problem with the late closing, according to Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who checked the situation with the police department.

Correction...

Health board member Michael Sullivan was quoted in last week's Mariner as saying that residents have already used about half of their $7 facilities sticker for 1989. That leaves a remaining balance of $3.50. And since only half of that permit is used for the landfill, he figured residents have a balance of about $1.75 on the old permit.

In last week's article about the landfill permit controversy, Sullivan's theory was published incorrectly. We assure our readers it was a typographical error, and not a mistake in Sullivan's mathematical computation.

Residents study property assessment process

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The residents involved in organizing an informational session regarding property valuations, say they hope to gather enough information to go to the assessors.

Following last week's meeting, Eli Manchester, one of the Nichols Road residents who organized the session, said that volunteers are soliciting additional property assessment information throughout the town. With that information in hand, individuals will be able to approach the board of assessors with questions and concerns, he said.

This is not an organized effort, Manchester responded, noting that disgruntled taxpayers who attended last week's meeting were never encouraged to file a class action lawsuit against the town.

"We just want to pay our fair share," he said. "And right now we think that something is very wrong."

Dr. Frank Quelle agreed. After receiving his tax bills, he had discussions with several neighbors who had similar concerns about their increased rates. "You look around the area and realize that things aren't quite copacthetic," Quelle said, adding that after he "put down some figures," he realized that property values along Nichols Road and along the waterfront had increased beyond market value. "Our actual tax dollars are up by 30 percent," he added.

"Our property sale values have not increased more rapidly than in other parts of the town, so we were feeling that is was unreasonable that are taxes were going up so high," Quelle noted.

The main reason they called last week's meeting, he explained, was to alert residents about the approaching deadline for filing abatement applications. That deadline was Dec. 7, and after that, no applications would be accepted by the assessors.

"The purpose was to alert residents that if they had enough questions, they have a right to preserve their rights. That was our objective last week," according to Quelle.

"We weren't trying to pull off any wild games."

As Manchester noted, "We like this town. And it's the first time in 26 years I've ever filed for an abatement.

"We're not organizing a movement against the assessors. It's just that the assessments seem strange. We simply wanted to share the information to see if we could make some sense of it."

Quelle said they did not go straight to the assessors with his data because, he said, "with the short time we had available, we just wanted to let people get their oar in the water so we could sit down and try to argue the details." A meeting with the assesssors, he said, could be scheduled on an individual basis, after they gather more statistical data.

"To a large extent, the purpose of the meeting was not to discuss the merits of what we found on Nichold Road, and to argue what was right and wrong, but to alert the people," Quelle said.

He said a previous experience with an abatement request taught him to proceed quickly and with as much information as he could gather. That was not a difficult task for the Navy Department statistical analyst.

In fact, when he previous applied for an abatement with the state appellate board, he won the entire amount of his request. As it turned out, only 45 days later he received his latest tax bill "and now they've turned around and given me the highest assessment on the street," he said.

"Under circumstances like that, one is not moved to resolve those issues with the assessors, per se," he said.

Assessor chairman James Lagorterria complained last week that residents who have a problem with their tax bills should bring their concerns to that board, rather than organizing neighbor groups against the town.

"We are not an organizied movement," Manchester stated. "We want to keep a lot profile. We just want to pay our fair share."

Following last week's meeting, Quelle said about 12 volunteers will "rapidly" solicit assessment information throughout the community.

It is their hope that by providing complete information, all residents will understand the assessment process. "If everyone understands how these assessments were done, no one's nose should be out of joint," he said.

Everyone should understand how these assessments were completed, "and only then will we have a warm feeling for the process. We'll be able to say we were all fairly assessed. That's the way it should have been done," he added.

"But the way it appears now, a lot of people are suspicious."

"It did motivate people to get their money in," said Lagrotteria. "I wish we had thought to thank them."

Lagrotteria has been in touch with the appraisers concerning all the claims of inequitable assessments.

"They're willing to provide us with whatever information is necessary," he said.

No plans have been made to meet with the appraisers until after the assessors have had an opportunity to review the applications.

"We need to know what we want to discuss first," said assessor Michael C. Patrolia.

The glut of media attention caused by disgruntled taxpayers was obviously on the minds of the assessors.

"I am not upset at any citizen who is upset with his taxes," said Lagrotteria. "What I am upset with is that they didn't come to us first."

Not everyone organized a meeting first and asked questions later. Of those who did call, most have been polite, but the women who staff the office have received some abusive calls.

Lagrotteria's roster of concerned callers included Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray and chairman of the selectmen Burtram Pratt.

"Mr. Pratt is very concerned," said Lagrotteria.

Just before the assessors meeting, Chairman Lagrotteria received a brief call from Fred W. Quelle. Quelle is one of the Nichols Road homeowners who organized a meeting of concerned taxpayers. Lagrotteria said he asked Quelle why he hadn't contacted the board of assessors with his concerns and questions before organizing a mass meeting. According to Lagrotteria, Quelle never responded to the question.

Quelle was slated to appear on Continental Cablevision's local talk show, "Pierson to Person", that evening.

Some callers are upset not by the amount of the tax bill, but by the fact that it does not correctly state the amount of acreage held.

"People are screaming at us because their bills are wrong," said Lagrotteria.

He explained that "the computer did the arithmetic correctly, but because of a printer error it doesn't show the proper number of acres of land held."

According to Dorothy V. Graham, administrative assistant for the assessors, the computer calcu-

Tebbetts suspects unfair assessment

Selectman Ned Tebbetts believes the Super Stop and Shop property on Rte. 3A received a lower assessment than other commercial properties in town, and he wants to know if "the largest commercial enterprise" in Cohasset is receiving special treatment by the assessors.

In a prepared statement Monday night, Tebbetts suggested that selectmen and the advisory committee should play a more active role in determining how revenues are received by the town.

According to Tebbetts, the property occupied by the Super Stop and Shop was assessed in 1988 at $6,022,530. But the following year, its assessment had dropped by almost $2 million, primarily because the building value had been lowered from $5,365,530 in 1988 to $3,137,800 in 1989.

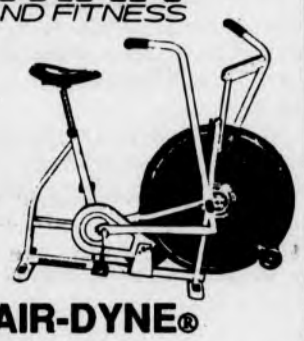
"I would like to inquire of the Board of Assessors why that building, which wasn't even opened on Jan. 1, 1988, lost $2,250,000 in value by Jan. 1, 1989, when it was apparently a thriving commercial store?" Tebbetts questioned.

"My research indicates that this reduction did not result from a decision of the state appellate tax board, since no appeal by the owners has ever been filed there. So if this was a reduction based on an abatement, the abatement had to be by agreement of the Board of Assessors," he continued.

Donald Staszko, developer of Cohasset Plaza where the Super Stop and Shop is located, said the property was granted a tax abatement from the board of assessors last year. Following two hearings with the board, they decided to determine the valuation of the property by adhering to the costs contained in the standard construction industry data guide. By following that code, Staszko said, the board determined the building and property were of less value than originally determined.

Tebbetts said it was important to know if the Super Stop and Shop was being assessed by the same standards as other retail properties on Rte. 3A and along South Main Street, particularly when "some of these merchants who couldn't possibly be attaining even a small fraction of the revenues of the Stop and Shop, received an increase in their assessments.

After Tebbetts finished his statement, Selectman Rocco Laugelle noted that when an abatement if filed, the three members of the board of assessors make the decision. "But they don't have any more information on the property than we do," he said. "They should go right to the person assessing the property."



Appraisal Consultants of New England was the company hired by the assessors to complete the current year's property revaluation.

Tebbetts noted that selectmen decided earlier this year that commercial and residential properties would be valued on the same basis to determine a common tax base. So if the value of a single-family home is to reflect the market value, then wouldn't it follow that commercial property would be based on the same criteria, Tebbetts asked. At the 1989 assessment, the new Super Stop and Shop building would be valued at about $50 per square foot. And that, Tebbetts said, is a very low assessment according to construction experts he has talked with.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt concluded the discussion by saying that any questions pertaining to assessments should be directed to the board of assessors.

Cohasset girls dance their way to 'Nutcracker'

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Keeley Dwyer and Meredith Equi are nutcracker kids. That is a short hand way of saying that these Cohasset kids are two of the more than 200 young dancers who have roles in Boston Ballet's 1989 production of "The Nutcracker".

Nutcracker kids get one dollar for each performance they dance in. It's no get rich quick proposition, but then it's not the money that motivates them. They're living out the fantasy that countless little girls-- and boys-- have only been able to dream of.

Although Keeley is only 11 1/2 and Meredith is just 12, they are hardly neophytes at the dance game. Keeley has been taking dance lessons "since I was two." Meredith is a late bloomer. She's only been enrolled in dance classes for the past eight years.

Neither girl can keep entirely still. Unconsciously, they slip into bits and pieces of a dancer's routine of stretches and gestures of the hand. Catching their reflection in a living room mirror pulls them out of their chairs and into a turn or an arabesque. As Snoopy once said, to dance is to live. Or perhaps it is the reverse.

Both girls are students with Nan Keating at the Children's Ballet Workshop in Hingham. The girls describe her as "really pretty and she's nice and really witty" They also admit that she's no pushover when it comes to teaching them how to dance. That may explain why so many of her students get roles in "The Nutcracker", including this year's Clara.

Practice must have made near perfect a long time ago for these two: this is the third year they have danced in the Boston Ballet production.

Keeley dances the role of a party child. She worries that her career may be coming to an end because, she says, "I'm the tallest party girl."

Meredith, who has a part in the war between the toy soldiers and the mice, isn't too concerned about outgrowing a future with "The Nutcracker". She says there are roles for taller kids like the reindeer and the Chinese dancers.

Auditions were held in September. Although Meredith and Keeley had been in two previous productions, they had to compete on the same footing as new comers.

Try-outs were a two-day ordeal. The first day they judged you on your dancing ability. If you made the first cut, you were called back for the second day.

Keeley said that the second day you sit there while they "just look at your size." Keeley's mother, Loretta Dwyer, says that the first year Keeley auditioned, she had to sit around for four hours. Because parents are excluded and pretty much ignored during the audition period, it is probably as hard or harder on them not knowing what their children are experiencing.

Cohasset's prima ballerinas Keeley Dwyer and Meredith Equi, are now gracing the Boston Ballet stage in the holiday production of "The Nutcracker."

Dancers who make it past the second day almost certainly have a role.

"Then you have your costume fitting," said Meredith. Rumor has it that you can still lose your part if you don't fit into an existing costume. Keeley discounts the rumor, by relating the tale of a girl from her cast whose costume needed a whole new set of buttons.

About 100 dancers have roles in each company. The professionals dance several roles, although the children generally have just one role. Occasionally--although this is rare-- a child will dance more than one role.

Rehearsals began a long time ago, according to Keeley, "way before Halloween. I think in late September"

She spends "one and a half to two hours once or twice a week, sometimes three times" in rehearsal. That's in addition to school and regular ballet lessons.

Some kids get into rehearsal and just don't like it. According to Meredith, if you don't like it in rehearsal, you can quit. Not many do.

What's the best part of being in the Nutcracker?

"I think making friends and having fun," said Keeley.

For Meredith, the best part is "back stage. We play cards and we laugh and we run around."

Keeley chimed in, "And going shopping!" Going to Wendy's also rated highly.

"It's fun getting into your costume and makeup. There are these makeup artists . . .," Keeley said.

As much as putting it all on is a highlight, Keeley ranks "taking off your makeup" as the worst part of being in "The Nutcracker".

Keeley started performing on the eighth. Her last performance will be the 19th. She's already dreading the last night, but she has plenty of "best experiences" left.

Meredith's cast hasn't started performing yet, but she already knows what the worst part will be. She answered the question in one word: "leaving". She doesn't mean when her role ends, she means at the end of each performance.

Meredith recently did a small version of the "The Nutcracker" with her ballet school in Maine. Meredith doesn't remember the name of the town. Just that it began with a W and took four hours to get to.

She felt sorry for people in Maine because, she said, they have no ballet company or ballet theater and only get to see performances once a year.

Meredith hasn't decided what she wants to be when she grows up.

"Maybe a professional dancer," she says, then

Residents study assessment process

lates one portion of the acreage at a "house lot" rate and any non-buildable land at a lesser rate. The most likely explanation she can come up with for the glitch is that although the computer calculated and printed out the total sum owed, it only printed out the number of acres held at one of the two rates.

Another computer-related problem is a number of incorrect addresses that resulted in a delay in receipt of the bill by the taxpayer. Lagrotteria said the computer company's keypunch operator did not enter the change of address information. He expects that the assessor's staff will correct the addresses long before the bills for the second payment go out.

No bills were sent out for what is known as the Plan 85 properties.

This handful of properties did not get into the computer system. Lagrotteria explained that the 20 to 25 properties at issue were "deeded from the Indians to whomever way back."

The original transfers of the Plan 85 lots predate the establishment of the registry of deeds. The properties have no clear cut engineering descriptions of lot lines and do not appear on town plans because of that fact.

Graham and the assessors assure residents that they know precisely where these "not very valuable" properties are located and who owns them.

Old time story hour gets a new twist

By David Johnson
Mariner staff

With the advent of the electronic age, some people predicted the decline of reading. But instead, technology has actually increased the role of books.

Just ask Marion Waddell of 289 Country Way, who records books onto cassettes at her house.

A registered nurse for many years, Waddell said that ten years ago she wanted a change. "I wanted to get out of the field and still do what was a helping thing.

"I saw paraplegics at the New England Medical Center who couldn't move a finger. I worked for people had strokes and read aloud," she said. "I thought this was for me."

An avid reader, she had volunteered earlier at the Talking Information Center in Marshfield, reading the newspaper for those with trouble seeing.

When she started her business, Books for Listening, in 1979, there was only one other firm in the country that recorded entire books, now there are seven, she said.

The increase illustrates the booming market for books on cassette. Waddell says that the blind are a small percentage of her mail order customers. Instead most customers are commuters or travelers.

"Suppose you're down in North Carolina and all you can hear (on the car radio) is country and western music. People going to Florida take three or four boxes with cassettes in them."

Other Waddell cassettes have gone to Australia and throughout the United States. She said people listen to them on the plane. Commuters also find the cassettes popular. Drivers do not need a cassette player in their car, a tape recorder on the seat works just as well, Waddell stated.

Waddell can produce about nine books in three months. "To read a whole book from beginning to end takes a great deal of time."

She has a group of parttime readers who record in one of the two sound proof rooms in her studio.

They can usually only sit and record from two and-a-half to three hours at a time. "I can hear the person getting tired in their throats," said Waddell, who usually monitors on headphones outside. When the reader makes a mistake or mispronounces a word, she gets him to correct it then. Mistakes are later edited out.

Her regular readers include Bonnie Haley, James Logar, of the conservation commission; Ann Bertone, who also works as a monitor, and David Barrett of Cohasset. For a British accent, she choses Ian Gilmour, owner of the Allen House bed and breakfast. He recently recorded "The Key to Rebecca" and "The Man From St. Petersburg."

Some of her readers use different voices for various characters and some can even do foreign accents.

To have several people do different characters in the same book would require a larger room.

One accent Waddell does not like her readers to have, however, is New England. "I don't hire New England people," she said, unless they have a neutral accent.

The speed of the readers is adjusted with when the final recording is made. Deep or high pitched voices are also adjusted.

❑ So happy with the success of the Village Fair (held a couple of weeks ago). Chairperson Cindy Dedes wants to share her joy by extending thanks to all who worked to make it so, especially to the many local merchants who contributed a long list of items for the raffle and to the young people who were so prominent in it; youth groups from the churches working on set-up, Secret Room, children's activities, harlequin and costumed crier, and members of the High School bass ensemble who entertained. Those associated with the Fair in turn are raving about Cindy's own leadership and the extra effort put in by her associates in the Greek Church.

❑ Exciting news on the television front. Ashley Leahy is going to be on the Good Day show (that is on channel 5) on this Friday. Ashley will be a model wearing Bloomingdales finest as she takes place in the Bloomingdale's Holiday Fashion Show. Be sure to tune in! By the way, we don't know the exact time, but the show airs from 9-10 a.m.

❑ For those of you looking for Fleuri, there is good news! They have the big store in Hingham, in the Pride Building and they have just opened a new store on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The number is 814 and is located in with Country House Antiques and Peridot! Lots of Fleuri's finest will be available there and it sure is a convenient location! Plus you can really shop; there is a nifty store Bound Brook Artisans and a few clothing stores all right there. Have fun, and happy shopping!

❑ Hope everyone read about Brian Wilkin's nifty idea in running a day care center on site! Brian is the president of Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and had the foresight last year to establish this! What incentive to want to work for a company! Here's to others following his lead, and a blue ribbon goes to Brian!

❑ Dan Pompeo made the Globe this week. He scored for Babson. It will probably appear on a weekly basis, he is good! And, everyone is so pleased and proud of you Dan!

❑ If you are looking for a neat gift for that special someone, why not adopt a kitten? Marie Anderson has lots of them, all ages and all types. She takes them in, has them spayed or neutered, vaccinated and leukemia tested, then takes care of them until they are adopted. One word though, she does do a screening on prospective families, to be sure the cats will receive good care. Call Marie at 878-0172, then be prepared to fall in love with a kitten!

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M.Tranberg
Chiropractor

CAR AND DRIVER

Many people take better care of their cars than they do their own bodies. If their auto's tires are wearing badly, they might have it checked for an alignment problem. These same people, however, will not submit to an analysis of their body's own mechanics when symptoms and warning signs appear. The analogy between car and body is not too far off. The chiropractor's reading of his patient's head rotation and tilt, hip height, and leg length can provide clues for causes of longstanding ailments. A leg-length discrepency, for instance, can lead to mechanical imbalances that can have far-reaching effects throughout the body. As with a car, a structural imbalance or misalignment can be the root of a host of problems.

For the "body alignment" that will make a world of difference in the way you feel and in what you do, we invite you to call SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC. Let us discuss your situation and how chiropractic can serve to your benefit. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Workers Comp cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.

HINT: The chiropractor measures a patient's range of motion for clues of any degeneration in the spine.

This year's bottom line is next year's too

The advisory committee is warning all town departments that their "bottom line" projections for next year cannot exceed this year's total.

They also warned that all departments need to assess their costs to the town, versus their worth.

In their discussions Tuesday night, advisors agreed that some departments may have to face the possibility of elimination.

"We have to consider all possibilities," chairman Jane Goedecke said.

But this prophesy of doom may be unnecessary, according to committee member Ray Kasperowicz. "We haven't reviewed the (FY91) budget yet. There may not be a problem. We may not need to broach the subject of eliminating some departments - we're just spinning our wheels right now.

"There may even be (approval of) an override," he added.

Referring to the recreation commission, which has requested a separate meeting with the advisory committee, Goedecke said, "They are going to have to present statistics so we can figure their costs and functions."

Committee member William Lean agreed. "They should be funded mostly by fees with some "scholarship" money available (for participants who can't afford the classes)."Let them be self-supporting."

"If you exclude the (sale of) stickers, they are not self-supporting," said advisory committee member Chris Bassett. "The fees do not cover fifty percent of the operating costs, and there is a reluctance to increase fees. It would destroy the program."

Goedecke explained that in preliminary discussions with town departments, it was explained that all proposed FY91 budgets should have the same bottom line figure as this year's budget total. That bottom line should include all necessary salary increases, and capital budget items under $10,000.

Committee member Arne Gjesteby explained that five percent is the figure to be used for unknown personnel salary increases, although that is not necessarily the actual percentage increase they will receive when contracts are renegotiated.

For non-union employees, town department heads will level fund their personal services account, figuring in a salary increase and reducing the total by that amount.

Discussing the budget preparation process, chairman Goedecke said it's difficult for department heads to "make up their deficit" through personnel cuts. "They must be encouraged to use that as an alternative. But it's hard for small departments," she said.

One thing that may affect the following year's budget is the number of tax bill abatement requests filed with the assessors this year. There are about 500 abatement requests, and only $235,000 set aside to handle those requests.

Goedecke explained that if a lot of abatements are approved by the assessors, or at the state appellate court, the extra money needed for the abatements will have to be taken "right off the top" from the FY 92 budget."The town will have to make it up," she explained. "That would be a built-in cost that we would have to fund the following year."

The advisory committee also talked about the need to educate the public about their budget review procedure. "We need to encourage more public review of our process and decision-making," Goedecke said. "It's an opportunity to let us know how the town feels, so they won't feel shut out."

The committee decided they would try to post a specific agenda for each meeting, and they would publicize that agenda in the media. Although they encourage the attendance of residents to their meetings, they said any lengthy public discussions of the budgets would interfere with a timely review process.

"We could have one public hearing at the end with all the groups there," the chairman suggested.

"But we only have X amount of dollars to spend and we don't have any more," Gjesteby replied. "I have a feeling this would not be very productive. You can't expect us to start from scratch after it's all over."

The committee decided to post specific agendas so the public is aware of what budgets will be discussed at particular meetings.

Story-telling gets a new twist

Readers can make from about $150 for a book taking four hours to read, to $400 for a long book taking ten hours to complete.

Some of the readers Waddell has are the actual authors themselves. She offers cassettes of Robert Frost and Ernest Hemingway performing their own work.

Waddell also buys condensed book cassettes from major publishers featuring well known actors. These are offered for sale only.

While most customers prefer to rent a cassette for 30 days, the books are available for purchase. Waddell said that at Christmas most of her business is in sales. A vinal holder for the cassettes can also be purchased.

Scituate artist Ralph Webster does the drawings for the cassettes.

Biographies are the most asked for item, followed closely by mysteries. "People just like to get frightened, I guess," Waddell said with a smile.

Hot sellers for Christmas this year include "Up From Slavery," "Anatomy of an Illness," by Norman Cousins, "Great American Essays," and "The Country of the Pointed Firs." Popular with children this year is "Alexander and the Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Day," by Judith Viorst.

Editorial

Too early to tell

In January, town budget reviews will begin in earnest.

Town departments have been asked to level-fund their budgets for the coming fiscal year. That means these departments must approach the advisory committee with a budget total the same as this year.

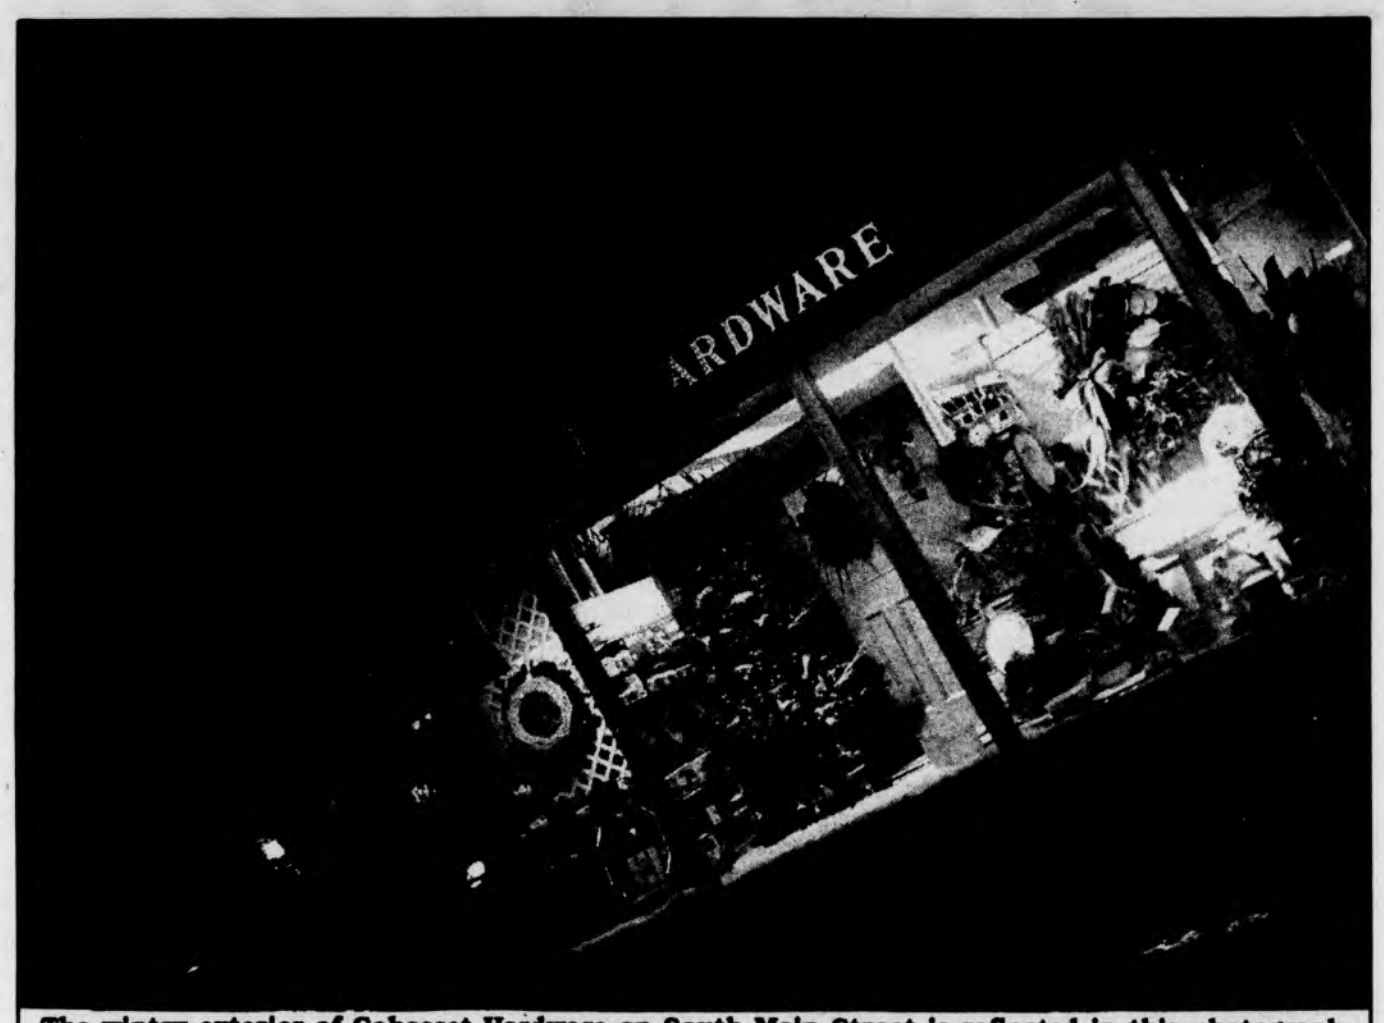
That's an extremely difficult task, considering salary increases that are negotiated throughout contract and town salary schedules.

Thus, to accommodate the advisory committee's request, some departments will have to think about personnel layoffs. There will be no alternative if the level-funded budget actually means great reductions for the next year.

Departments can cut supplies, services and maintenance from its operating budgets, but the removal of bodies from that office will result in the biggest cash savings for this cost-conscious town.

It will ultimately be up to the voters to decide whether they want to fund higher budgets into the future and save jobs, or whether they want to tow the line now and wave goodbye to some valued town employees.

We aren't about to comment on that decision right now. Just like every resident in this town, the Mariner will be observing the budget review process, trying to decide how best those tough cuts can be made.



And in the end, perhaps we will be argue that no cuts are justified, and that an override is the only sensible solution to this current ficsal crisis. Or, we may determine that more departments can be streamlined, positions can be eliminated, and costs can be saved from this town budget.

It's not a particularly optimistic time for Cohasset or any other town in this state. We are all feeling the blow of a declining economy and an inept state leadership that can't decide whether to increase our taxes, or cut services.

There are no heroes in this sad plight. But we advise all residents to remain aware of what is happening to their state and local governments.

Only through a true understanding of this lengthy budget process can we make a final educated decision at the ballot box and on the floor of town meeting.

It is too early to stand in defiance against an override - and it is too early to say with certainty how much of an override is necessary. Within the next few months, the fiscal picture will become more clear to us all. It may not be a rosy picture, but that is something we will have to deal with in the approaching weeks.

A season for giving heart-felt thanks

To the Editor:

The season for mulled cider, egg nog, turkey & cranberries is before us again. But it offers us an opportunity to give a heart-felt "thank you" to the townspeople who serve us with happy but serious generous share of their time.

We are once again appreciative and indebted to our van drivers, the "church" drivers; the "cooks" and "servers" of our Tuesday luncheons; visits from those nice young people from the Osgood School; their teacher, Mrs. Alcock and her "helpers" and the principal of the school.

We had an opportunity to hear and see that these boys and girls are great readers. Barbara Bush would have "beamed" her enjoyment. They presented us a whole program; music, recitations; read to us. And topped it all by helping us make an old fashioned paper turkey to take home.

A lot of love and patience went into that endearing session. It made a good day a perfect one. Mrs. Irene Porter and I were "friends" of Morgan and Colton and still another youngsters. We were immediate "friends"—bonded forever. I Hope.

My own sisters taught the first grade in Medford for 50 years. I am firm in my belief that some teachers have been "called.". And they demonstrate thier "given" talents.

We can remember the people who serve us at lunch and the cooks who prepare this "new look" on Tuesday, grateful, too, for our clergy who are our old friends. Our professionals serve us well.

But let us now consider what for some of us completes the scene of contentment—our family pets who often become everyone's friend(s). Remember always that winter, especially, is hard on them. Their paws can get cut on the ice and snow. Always supervise and care for them when it storms—rain or snow.

Dogs scent and mark their territories. In severe weather these are washed. Did you ever see a lost and frightened animal seeking his master or mistress. Please don't let this happen to your pet.

We, with the Animal Control group are all animal lovers. If you own a dog who is a menace—leash it firmly. Be responsible. Do not bring grief to a family by permitting your animal to roam and kill another's family pet. Do not set traps. We have a big supermarket and one sad pelt does not a coat make. An animal needs shelter and food. If you can't give it—don't "get" it. Remember all animals—while not human—feel pain, hunger, lonesomeness; the cold and they anxiously wait for your homecoming and a loving, accepting pat.

Christmas is a busy, hurrying time and not the best to give an animal as a gift—if a small animal it gets tired—like a baby—it needs the comfort of a quiet spot. It really needs care.

And don't forget some of best pets around are at the various pounds; The Standish, The Humane Societies, Animal Rescue League—and even a lost animal—after you've tried to find the owner. If you feel the need of a companion and you have time to care—try an animal. They appreciate you!

So our list of gratitude goes on and on. Cohasset, for its size, must have more volunteers than any other town. I believe one-fifth of the town is over 65 years of age. They are being kept "on the move" and for us all, "that's the way to go."

Merry Christmas and a big hug to that wooly bear of a dog Cybelle, my "thickest" friend.

Many reasons to reject Clean Harbors

To the Editor:

(This letter was written to John DeVillars, secretary of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. Ed.)

I am writing this letter to go on record to express my strong opposition to the citing of an incinerator at East Braintree.

Over the past several months, I have been watching this issue very closely in the press and through public meetings and have watched the legitimate opposition to this proposal spread like wild fire from Braintree, Quincy and Weymouth to Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, South Boston and other South Shore towns. In addition, I attended a three hour public hearing at the Hingham Town Hall, with over 200 people in attendance, on Monday, Nov. 27, 1989 co-hosted by Suzanne Anderson and Gini Kurtzman, where an excellent well thought out case was presented as to why this project should be rejected by your office now.

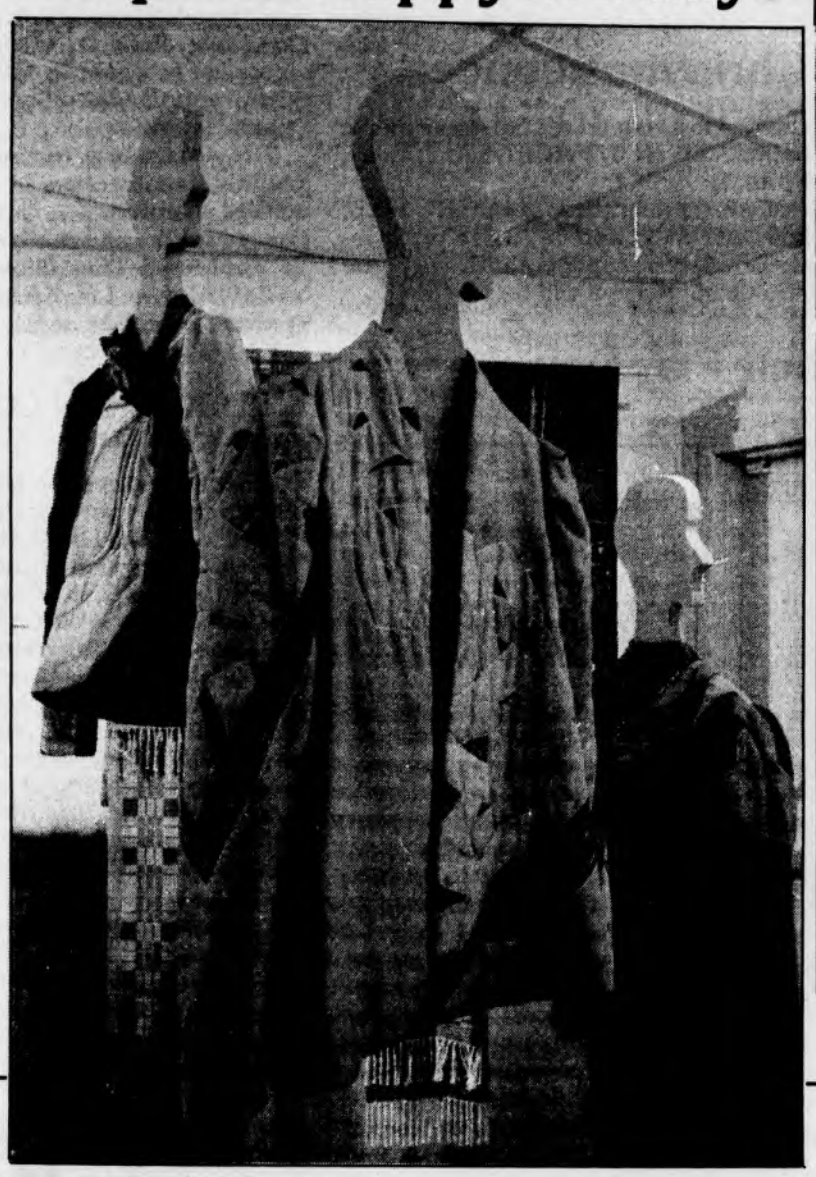
Among the reasons given were:

1) This proposed site is in an already highly populated neighborhood with many young children;

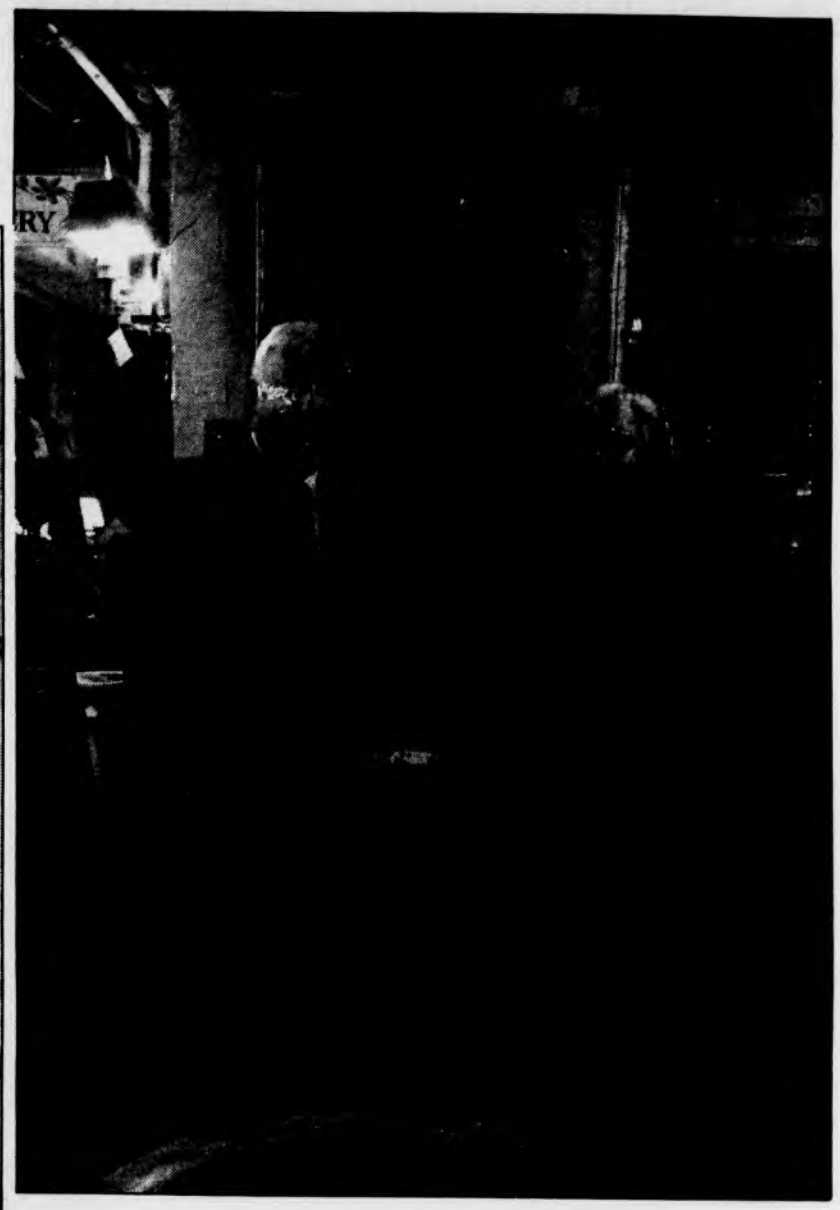
2) This area is already over saturated with traffic and cannot accomodate any additional traffic;

3) This project is a disaster from an environmental standpoint because it poses a real life threatening health hazard for the many families living in the immediate area and extending for a radius of 30 to 50 miles around.

For these three reasons and many more, any fair minded person would now conclude that this is not a good site for this incinerator and that "we the people" will not allow it to be located in Braintree regardless of the amount of time and money it takes for you to get the message.



In conclusion, I would strongly suggest that you reject this location for an incinerator and save the taxpayers of this state and many good residents all over the South Shore millions of dollars in convincing you on what is obvious to all fair minded people now:



East Braintree is not nor will it ever be in the future, a proper site for an incinerator.

Thank you for your time and attention to this matter.

Very truly yours,
William J. Flynn Jr.,

Article on local landfill upsets resident

To the Editor:

It isn't often that I become upset enough with your reporting in the Mariner to write a letter. However, the recent story titled "Officials say CHL not threat to water" left me both angry and frustrated, and more than a little disappointed.

The issues involving Cohasset Heights Limited are complex and technical and I will not address them here. But I would like to correct what I feel are factual errors and misrepresentation of my position.

First, the original fears by the Board of Health were steeped in scientific fact. Maybe a review of the BOH decision of May 1986 would be helpful for Mr. Baird and yourself. There are countless references to contaminated ground and surface water leaving the site. Both the town's CHL's engineers agree to this fact. The town's study of the surface water flow direction done recently indicates that the runoff does indeed run toward Lily Pond during times of heavy rain, a fact that both CHL and town engineers did not previously agree on. Reading your story one gets the impression that things have changed at CHL or that I have conceded that CHL is not a problem. What I conceded is that based on the results of CHL's testing of their monitoring wells by their engineers it appears that CHL is not at the present affecting the water quality at Lily Pond. Why does the BOH require citizens with leaking underground heating oil tanks to have them fixed? When they may not be a direct threat to Lily Pond. Why does the BOH require citizens with failing septic systems to repair them? When they may not be a direct threat to Lily Pond.

My role is not to monitor CHL but when I read that Mr. Baird intends to reopen a public hearing only to close it I wonder what he thinks the role of a public hearing is. He was not involved in the original hearing.

Letters

That public hearing was postponed when the owners of CHL walked out because a citizen asked their engineer how much Draino would be acceptable in their child's orange juice. While admittedly that was a dramatic question it does bring up a valid point. Hardly justification for CHL to sue the BOH.

The Mariner has consistently sided with CHL in editorials and stories which is your right. Please in the future don't call me, I'll call you.

Thank You,
Ron Goodwin
Pond Street

(As we told Mr. Goodwin, he was correctly quoted in last week's article, and we stand by that assertion. That is something he does not deny. We never stated that Mr. Goodwin does not believe CHL is not a problem. What he said is that the landfill is not a current threat to the town's water supply. In a conversation with Mr. Goodwin last week, we tried to emphasize that distinction, however he apparently still does not understand.

The Mariner takes great exception to Mr. Goodwin's statement that our articles regarding CHL are one-sided. If that is a fact, then why do we consistently call Mr. Goodwin, a long-time opponent of CHL, for his remarks?

Finally, to answer a question Mr. Goodwin asked Editor Jane Lane—she is not, nor has she ever been paid by CHL to write stories or editorials. We advise Mr. Goodwin to keep such slanderous assumptions to himself. Ed.)

Town must look toward revenues

To the Editor:

I don't agree with either point made in your editorial, "The Bell has Been Rung".

First, there was no reason to invite the assessors to a meeting held for the sole purpose of informing taxpayers that the methodology behind this year's assessment was suspect based upon a small sampling. The persons who brought the meeting together were clear that it was much too early to draw overall conclusions and that the study, with volunteer help, would continue. With such inconclusive evidence, why would they want to have a confrontation with the assessors, the natural result of the assessors' attendance. The idea was to alert taxpayers that, if they didn't file the application by December 7, they would forever be foreclosed from pursuing a remedy if later, and much more conclusive, evidence found the suspicion well-founded. If the suspicion was unfounded, then no one is required to pursue the abatement process.

Second, you suggest that the organizers were somehow interfering in the completion of the assessors' "task in an equitable, efficient manner". That the assessors only communicate to citizens through the tax bill is the reason the alert had to be sounded. There are no open meetings of assessors to my knowledge. And even the opportunity to address Valuation Consultants before the assessments became final, as was done here in prior years and is done in other communities, was not afforded.

If due process seems flawed, I think you have misplaced the blame. Perhaps the time has come for this Town to take as much interest in the revenue process as they have in the expense side of our budget.

Polly Logan

(Meetings of the assessors are duly posted at town hall and are open to the public. Ed. note.)

No response on resident's request

To the Editor:

This letter was addressed to the District Attorney's office:

On November 16 I made written request to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen for copies of minutes of meetings held on Oct. 17 and Nov. 7. It is my understanding that the group meetings were attended by elected and appointed committee members to discuss town finances. The meetings were not posted and Cohasset Town Counsel duly advised the self-styled "Financial Advisory Group" that in the future these meetings must be posted.

As of December 6, 1989 I had had no response from the Cohasset Board of Selectmen with regard to releasing minutes from these two sessions. It is my understanding that minutes must be released within 10 days of a written request.

Furthermore, it is my understanding that at the Cohasset Board of Selectmen's regularly scheduled meeting of Nov. 20 my request for minutes was handled in executive session. However, I have no knowledge if any action was taken. Apparently, my request for minutes was ignored, as it continues to be ignored, 20 days after my initial request.

I am asking for your intervention in this matter.

Sincerely,
Tanna Kasperowicz

First Parish goes carolling

First Parish in Cohasset is once, again, preparing to go carolling to the Ripley Road Nursing Home, to neighbors around the common, to senior housing and Elm Street families (if the cold doesn't get to us first).

Afterwards,there will be cookies and hot cider to finish off the festivities.

Everyone is welcome adults and children of all ages. Bring your friends and neighbors.

We plan to meet at the Parish House on Saturday, Dec. 16 at 4:30 pm. Take along a flashlight, small instruments (ie. finger cymbals, bells, triangles) and, of course, your enthusiasm. So, dress warmly, and join us for some old fashioned fun.

For additional information, or if you would like to bake some cookies, please call Sine Pounder at 383-6869 or Madeline Olney at 383-1492.

The show begins rehearsals January 22, and will open February 22. The production is being directed by Donald S. Capen and Michele Pecoraro, with musical direction by Margo Euler.

The Miracle Play Dec. 16, 17

Expect the unexpected when the Cohasset Drama Workshop presents "The Miracle Play" at the Cohasset High School auditorium Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 16 and 17.

After previous productions in Memphis, Atlanta, Nashville, Providence, and New Haven, this brilliant new comedy by Michael Fields will be given its first Massachusetts production on those two evenings.

Set in Nashville, "The Miracle Play" traces the strange events occurring over a three-month period in the back yard of the house of Carl and Alice Wells. An exploding bridegroom, an atomic bomb, a balloon chair, and a statue made of garbage are among the sights awaiting the audience of this play, which was the winner of the Dalton Little Theatre New Play Project and was awarded second prize in the prestigious John Gassner Memorial Playwriting Contest.

Ron Emmons, director of the Drama Workshop, discovered the play at Yale University's Cabaret Theatre two summers ago and sought out playwright Fields, finally tracking him down in New York City. "The play was one of the funniest shows I've ever seen, and I knew I wanted to do it. I consider our audience, the Drama Workshop, and myself lucky to have this show in Cohasset. We are all lucky that Michael has trusted us with his work," said Emmons. "Originally we had no room in our schedule for the production this year, but when I read the finished script this fall, I knew we had to make room. This is our third production of the season, and I really appreciate the commitment that the cast and crew has made to stage this many shows so well in such a short period of time."

Featured in the Drama Workshop cast are Joe Gagliano, Pamela Haase, Zach Hochkeppel, Erin McAllister, Doug Moe, Katie O'Sullivan, and Jen Plante. Offstage voices are provided by Mike Cisneros, J. Gaston, Matt Silvia, andAli Welz. Serving as assistant director is Deana Genovese.

The demanding technical aspects of the play, including construction of props that can only be described as unusual, have been overseen by art director Kasey Smith and art advisor Colleen Lucas.

"The Miracle Play" takes the Cohasset stage at 8 p.m. on Saturday and at 7 p.m. on Sunday. Tickets are $3 in advance and $4 at the door. All seats are reserved.

Fifth grade reporters

This week, the Deer Hill School had a book fair. The school library was cleared and three cases of books were put in. There were also posters, pencils, bookmarks, markers, and coloring and sticker books set out on the tables. The children of the school bought these items for assorted prices. The children knew how much things would cost because they were given a list of things and prices a few days before the fair.

A capital letter

About one week ago I (Chad Whitman) received a letter from Congressman Gerry Studds. The letter said he would love to help our school get a new flag, but we need to raise money for it, so room 5 has decided to collect returnable bottles. We hope to get enough money so we can fly a capital flag over our School once again.

Christmas concert

On December 19th at 7:30 the chorus and concert choir of Deer Hill School will be putting on their annual Christmas Concert in the high school auditorium. The concert will be conducted by Mr. MacInnis and accompanist, Mrs. Crafts, a mother of a Deer Hill student. The concert will feature some traditional songs and some you might not find as familiar. It should be a good time for everyone.

A trip to Apogee Acoustics

Tuesday, Dec. 5 our class went to Apogee Acoustics. The company makes Hi-Fidelity speakers. These speakers are of such high quality that when the owners played music for you it sounded so very realistic. So realistic that when you closed your eyes it sounded like the person on the CD was singing on a stage in front of you.

Mrs. Bloom, an owner and our guide, took us through the factory. We learned what pieces were in one speaker. We also learned how they test speakers to see if everything was just perfect. The main thing we learned was that aluminum foil made the vibrating sound.

After our tour of the factory, we had a snack and listened to more music.

And that's our trip to Apogee Acoustics.

Stranded in Santa land

By Greg Schultz
Grade 6

'Twas the night before Christmas and I was stranded on the North Pole. It was only me and my 747 jet. Who would ever have thought there would be a flock of about one thousand sea gulls in the North Pole? Yet there was the evidence. My camouflaged jet was now the color of the clouds and the snow, and I was stranded in Santa land.

I shuddered arid hugged myself trying to decide what to do next. Out of the white snow came a dozen little people, laughing in squeeky chipmunk voices; and enjoying themselves. They all came rushing over to me to see what message I had brought from the outside world. I told them my story, and they generously brought me back to their toy shop.

We trudged through the snowbanks to a cheerful looking gingerbread house where a little round elf who seemed to be the leader took me through the workshops giving me a quick tour of all the rooms. The one room where most of the elves were working was the happiest. Everybody was singing and dancing in anticipation of the exciting hours soon to come. Before I could ask any questions, I heard a kindly low voice giving orders to all the elves.

I turned around and saw a chubby fellow dressed in long red flannel underwear. He had a white fluffy beard and a red cherry nose. It was Saint Nick himself. He turned bright red, "Elmer" he demanded "you didn't tell me we had company!" "Mrs. Claus!" he bellowed "get some hot chocolate for this young man! We sat at a little carved round table sipping our hot cocoa, while Santa took a break from his busy schedule.

"I really must be getting old. I've never been so far behind schedule in my whole career." With that the door flew open. In a flurry of snowflakes, Elmer came rushing in. "Santa" he cried "what are we going to do? You're already two hours behind schedule and we havn't even begun to load the sleigh!" "Never fear," Santa said with a hearty chuckle. "My friend is here to save the day. This year Santa is going to fly first class. Let's go, little guys. Let's polish up that 747, load the gifts on it, and put it on our magic runway. Tell the reindeer to hop aboard for a cruise around the world in style."

And that's how Santa and I went around the world together.

The trip to Apogee Acoustics

Tuesday December 5 we went to Apogee Acoustics. I liked this trip the best. Right when we got there they brought us to a room and we got to hear a different kind of sterio called a Hi-Fi- system. This system uses Aluminum Foil to make sound. Next we got to walk through the factory. Mrs. Bloom, our guide, showed us how everyone has a different job to make the Hi-Fi system. Then we went back to the room and got to hear more of the Hi-Fi system. I had a great time.

Cohasset gymnasts could be top contenders

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

This could be the year that the Cohasset High School gymnastics team finally puts it together.

After suffering many rebuilding campaigns, head coach Ruthann Sargent feels that this year's squad has the nucleus to be one of the top contenders in the South Shore League. However, she did admit that nobody will catch Scituate for the league title.

"After Scituate, I think we can compete with the Norwell, the Duxburys, the Randolphs and the Hanovers and give them a fight for second place," said Sargent.

What makes Sargent so optimistic is that the scoring burden will not be focused directly on the shoulders of senior Michelle Hartley anymore. Sargent can count on freshman Tara Gallagher and seniors Carrie Ripley and Liz Buckley to help out Hartley in the scoring.

"I expect these four girls will score a lot of points for us this season," said Sargent. "In the past, we would have trouble scoring because we had no one who was equal to Hartley. We lost a lot of close matches due to the fact that we couldn't place in the top four (in a gymnastic meet, the top four finishers in an event collect points). I feel now that I can put them out there and they will be consistent every time."

Hartley earned the league's best all-around trophy last year. Incredibly, she recorded a 9.0 on the floor exercise which, according to Sargent, is the highest score ever in a South Shore all-league meet.

In addition to her all-league accomplishments, she finished as the seventh-best all-around gymnast at the state meet. She also placed third in the uneven bars, which was remarkable considering she did not have enough time to warm up because the school bus broke down on the way to the meet. Sargent considers Hartley the best gymnast to ever come out of CHS.

"Michelle will definitely make the state's again this year. She has looked good in practice. She is also staying healthy which is a good sign. She hurt her ankle during the summer that slowed her down a bit, but she is gaining her confidence back as she puts more weight on it each day. We just hope that Tara makes the state's as well."

Gallagher's best event is the vault where she scored an 8.0, her highest total last year. She also secured an 8.0 on the floor exercise.

"Anytime you can hit the 8's in high school gymnastics, you're in a different league altogether," said Sargent.

"Michelle and Tara trained outside of school three to four times a day at various private gymnastics' classes.

Hartley and Gallagher will share the all-around duties, while Ripley and Buckley will have the inevitable task of competing in three events.

Other key players to watch out for are senior Justin Muir, the first male athlete ever to compete on a gymnastics team at CHS, juniors Melissa Rousseau and Corey DeSantis, eighth-grader Marnie DeMichele ("a promising gymnast for the future" according to Sargent) and senior Hilary Proodian.

"Justin has a great personality. He is going to help us out with his leadership. It's good to see Melissa, Corey and Hilary returned back to the team after taking a year off from gymnastics. With these people, we should not have a depth problem. In fact, we have 15 kids on the squad.

"I just tell the kids to go out and do their best, so that there should be no letdown during a meet. We are working out five days a week and becoming thus a more mature club. We just have a few weaknesses this year unlike other seasons," said Sargent.

Prediction: Cohasset should finish in the top echelon of the league. A second-place finish is in the realm of possibility. They will definitely surpass their five-victory total from last year.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Having graduated eight seniors, which included two South Shore League all-star forwards, Sara Bishop and Kristen Ellinger, the Cohasset High School girls' varsity basketball clubs look to rebuild.

First-year coach Debbie Bostwick, who replaces the most winningest coach in school history, Bill Fallon, who has taken his roadshow to the University of Massachusetts (Boston); hopes to finish at least .500 this season. Everything will be geared toward fast-break layups, give and gos and pick and rolls.

"This is definitely a rebuilding season in which we will be trying to pull the parts together. If we don't win, at least the girls are going to have fun and learn," said Bostwick.

The key players for the Lady Skippers, who missed the playoffs by one game to finish 11-7 (8-4 in the SSL Small Schools Division) last year, heading into this winter campaign are Barbara Lagrotteria (guard), Allison Ludlow (guard-forward), Tonya Petersen (forward), Terri Murphy (guard) and Heather Bass (center).

"We get all these players back for next season," said Bostwick. "We hope to capitalize on our lack of size by getting fouled on rebounds. A lot of teams will try to reach over us. We work a great deal on foul shooting. It's possible to get 20 points a night from the line.

The SSL appears to be very competitive this year. Look for Hanover and Hull to battle for first place in the Small Schools Division, while Cohasset will try to avoid the cellar.

Prediction: Cohasset should finish .500 despite their lack of size and depth. Opponents will try to exploit their small front court. Norwell, coming off a successful 1988-89 campaign where they fell one victory shy of capturing the Div. 3 state title at Boston Garden, graduated 10 seniors. Carver is beginning their second season as a varsity sport. They accumulated a 2-18 record last year. Abington has only one senior starter. Sandwich was decimated by graduation as well. What this means is that Cohasset has a chance to squeeze out some victories this season.

HOCKEY

Losing last year's top scorer Brian Pompeo to Belmont Hill this fall and two solid South Shore League all-stars, Ned Chase and Jimmy Gallagher, to graduation, Cohasset High hockey coach Dennis Walsh, refers to his squad as a team in transition. But while rebuilding, he would like to see Cohasset improve upon last year's mark of 7-10-1.

"I'm really looking to have the team improve over the season. They're young and really enthusiastic. We will be a close-checking squad and look for our opponents as they come," said Walsh.

One stabilizing factor is second-year netminder Joel Reidy. Reidy, who just concluded a brilliant four-year soccer career where he recorded more than 30 shutouts (a school record), and guided the Skippers to three EMass Division three titles in four years, will be counted upon to make the big saves. Trying to relieve the heavy pressure in front of the net will be four experienced defensemen. They are John MacDonald, Kevin Mulcahy, Dave Farrag and Tim Conroy. Walsh hopes that Reidy can bring his soccer skills to the five-foot high hockey net.

Offensively, Walsh will have to juggle seven players to form at least three lines. Expecting to light up the net on a regular basis are Joel Whitman (left wing) and Rich McLaughlin (center). However, there are other players who should contribute as well. They are Charlie Smith (right wing), Mike Reynolds (center), Chuck Enders (LW/RW), John Murphy (LW/RW) and Brian Donovan (forward).

Once again, the SSL appears to be very competitive. The early front-runners are Hanover and Hull with defending league champion Duxbury coming up the rear. The league is so well-balanced that Randolph, Whitman-Hanson and Rockland could sneak in as sleepers.

Prediction: Look for Cohasset to finish in the bottom echelon of the league, which means third-to-last. However, the Skippers have to be careful because Abington and Scituate, the two perennial doormats of the league, have improved slightly, therefore, they could vault past Cohasset in the standings. Don't expect the Skippers to match last year's record.

up on the court.

"This team is going to create a fun atmosphere at Cohasset High. This is the start of a new era and we're going to take advantage of that to begin a new tradition at Cohasset High with a great bunch of enthusiastic kids," Coach Reppucci stated.

In fact, the crowd will be asked to take their seats early in time for each pre-game show.

The excitement will begin Dec. 15 when Cohasset meets Sandwich. But the home show will debut Dec. 19 against Rockland High.

Just about everything will be new on the court for Cohasset High in 1989. Coach Reppucci will be starting his first full year as varsity coach, assisted, at least for half the season, by CHS veteran David Shultz.

This year's captains include seniors Linc Marsac, Mike Ellinger and McCarthy.

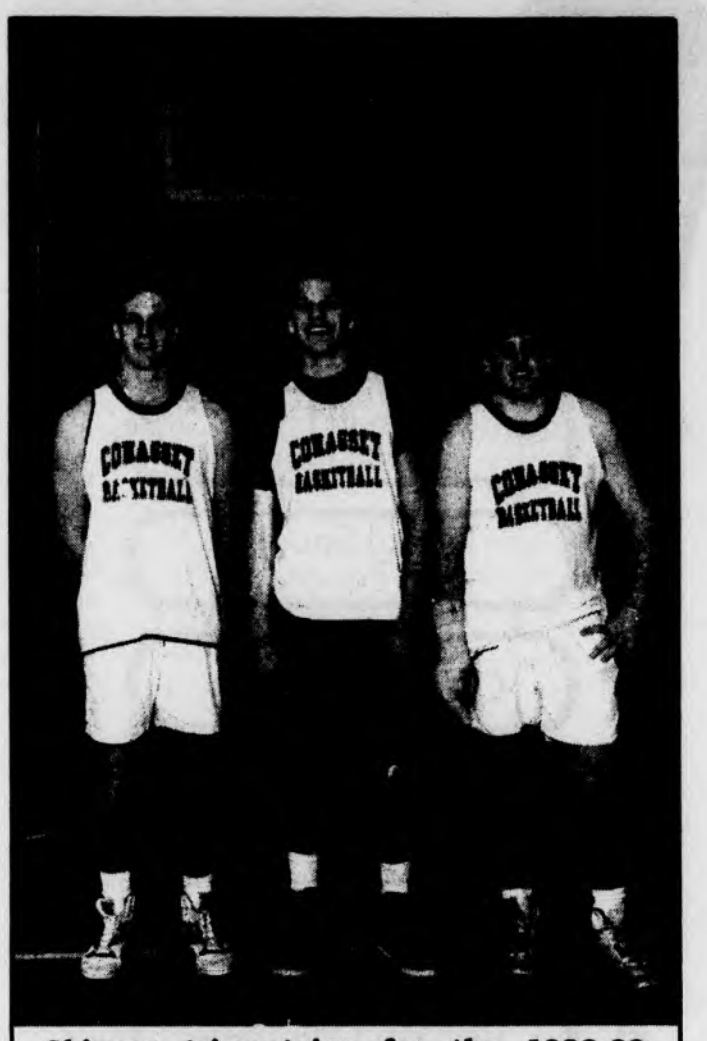
On the minus side this season - and it looks to be a sizeable negative factor - is the loss of senior Jim Reidy. The All-American soccer player broke his foot at the end of Cohasset's climb to the division finals, and will probably not see any court action in his final year at the high school.

"Maybe the kids were a little disappointed at the beginning of this season," according to the coach. "Jimmy was such a great point guard. He probably would have been a captain - he's a real leader. But we can't dwell on that, and the kids' attitudes are good now. We're getting better with every practice and our attitude is really looking up."

Their goal, Reppucci said, is to better their record from last season's disappointing 5-15. And the coach believes that is possible with some new faces on the squad.

Four players from the junior varsity team will make it to the top squad this season, including Travis Coley, Tad Kasperowicz, Caleb Slotnick, and Matt Marks. Greg Thomas, a senior and a member of the Skippers' football team, will make his debut as a center on the basketball court this season. The coach says "the big kid" has been "tremendous" in practice.

In addition, eighth grader Kywon Edwards, brother of that former CHS superstar and BC starting guard, Bryan Edwards, will probably see some varsity action by the end of the season.



"We're going to have a lot of new sets, a lot of new offenses - definitely a lot of presses - it's going to be an exciting team to watch. And hopefully, we're going to win a game or two," said Coach Reppucci. "I did a lot of coaching for the junior Olympics, and I'm going to be using a lot of that and incorporating the personnel I have now with some of the stuff we did last year."

Captain Ellinger said the team is relaxed, and that, he believes, is an important factor even before the game whistle blows. "I want to have fun this season. We can be competitive while we have fun."

Marsac agreed. "We can't realistically set our expectations too high. But we have a great coach and everyone is pumped for a fun season. We're all good friends."

dogs, losing the services of three former starters in addition to Reidy's injury.

"A number of teams in the league have quite a few of their kids coming back this season. It's going to be tough with losing Jimmy, and three others who moved away. But our attitude is outstanding. We have a core of young, enthusiastic players. It's a young team, no doubt about it. But we're going to be tough and competitive.

"My goal is to win more than we lose. That's realistic for us this year," according to the coach.

Capt. Marsac believes this team "will keep Cohasset as a good name in basketball." Following last year's cellar finish, the 1989 Skippers will likely finish "somewhere in the middle," he predicted.

"We'll always do the best we can. That's all anyone can expect. But we'll try as hard as we can, and I think things will work out for us," Ellinger agreed.

Whatever misfortunate or fame this season brings, there remains one certainty, according to Coach Reppucci.

"We're going to entertain. People won't want to miss this team."

Buy a card, give a meal

Senator William B. Golden (D-Weymouth) invites area legislators to join with him in purchasing and distributing holiday greeting cards from South Shore Elder Services.

Each card which sells for $3.50 purchases a hot meal for one homebound senior citizen.

"During times of tight budgets like the present, those who are hit the hardest are those who can least afford it. We must each individually do all we can to help the needy — especially senior citizens. There is no better way to celebrate the holiday spirit than by sending someone a "Meals on Wheels" holiday greeting card which provides a hot meal for a senior."

"Meals on Wheels," organized by the South Shore Elder Services is a federal and state-funded program that delivers hot meals to elderly and handicapped people. The South Shore program was begun in 1978 and serves 5500 meals to 11 South Shore towns, seven days a week.

For the past two years Senator Golden has sent cards to each of the Silver Haired Legislators in his Senatorial District.

adds, "I don't know." At twelve she has world enough and time to dream up the perfect future.

Keeley has already decided.

"I want to be a dancer half the time and an architect half the time."

She also knows what kind of buildings she will build.

"Big huge buildings that will be down in 'Guinness's Book of World Records," is her ready answer. She imagines skyscrapers of 150,000 stories and mansions as possible contenders.

"I just want to be paid big money," she says. "It would be nice to be famous, too."

Meredith and Keeley aren't the only stars in Cohasset's ballet world. Two other Cohasset girls are nutcracker kids this year.

Eighth grader Karla Kennedy dances the role of a reindeer this year. In the three previous years she's been a part of the Boston Ballet production she's been a soldier and a Chinese dancer.

If you ask her what her favorite role has been, she'll answer the Chinese dance.

"I guess I had the most dancing in that role," she said. "It was the funnest part."

Being a reindeer also has strong points in its favor.

"The funnest part of all," she says of this year's performance, "is being in the snow scene."

But Karla has new goals to attain now that her 1989 performances are over. Next year she hopes to win the role of an angel.

For other kids who would like to win a role in "The Nutcracker", Karla suggests that they "smile and try your best."

Being in the production is demanding, but Karla says her teachers at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School have been really supportive.

"My teachers are flexible," she said. Then she adds, "But they make me make up all the homework!"

Karla, who dreams of a future in dance. has also been a student at Nan Keating's ballet school. She has taken lessons for nine years.

Sometimes you don't have to pay your dues for quite so long. Alyssa Cross has only been taking lessons for about four years-- two half-years with Nan Keating when she was younger and three years at Boston Ballet's school-- but she just finished her third year performing in the Nutcracker.

Catching up with the seventh grader is nearly impossible, between school and dance lessons she has little free time.

Alyssa's mother says it wouldn't seem like Christmas if Alyssa wasn't dancing in "The Nutcracker". This year, Alyssa is a party child. She's having so much fun that she would like to be a party child again next year. In the two previous years, Alyssa has been a polychinelle.

Superstition has always had currency in the world of the performing arts. Meredith has already developed her very own superstition.

"I always put a penny backstage" says Meredith. Every year she finds an out of the way nook or cranny to stash the penny in. Then she tells the stage manager not to lose her good luck penny.

"It's never there when I go back the next year," she says. Sometimes you just can't figure out how those good luck charms work, even when they're busy keeping your dreams alive while you're working hard at your lessons.

11th Annual Christmas Concert — To date, we have 39 patrons for this year's Christmas Concert. If you are planning to support the concert as a patron, please return your response card as soon as possible. On Dec. 17 at 4 p.m. in the Meeting House, the Unicorn Singers will present "Three Kings and a Star," a program centered around Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors." Director Margo Euler tells us that school-aged children will enjoy the presentation, but it is not suitable for pre-school children. Tickets at $5 each are available at the church office, and may also be purchased after church from members of the Outreach Committee.

If you would like to provide a poinsettia for the altar on Dec. 24, please call Nina at the church office. The cost per plant is $10, and it is yours to take home after the service.

Mentors deadline approaching...

The Music and Worship Committee would like to remind you to take a moment to recall a person in your life who has guided or influenced you, for their publication of this year's Lenten Manual, "Mentors." They would like to receive contributions by the first week of January, at the latest.

Outreach News:

Our new Homeshare family has arrived. There are two young girls in the family who might enjoy skating on the Meeting House pond. If anyone has skates, sizes 2 and 3 1/2, that the girls could use, please drop them off at the Parish House.

Here We Go A-Carolling!

Meet at the Parish House on Sat., Dec. 16 at 4:30 p.m. to go out carolling again to Ripley Road Nursing Home, to neighbors around the common, to elderly housing and Elm Street households.

When we get too cold, we will return to the warmth of the Parish House for Christmas cookies and cider, hot and cold. If you can offer cookies or have ideas for other places to carol, please call Madeline Olney (383-1492) or Sine Pounder (383-6869), so we can make appropriate arrangements.

Bring friends and neighbors, children of all ages! We are looking forward to high spirits and friendship. Last year we had a large group of enthusiastic people who made a joyful noise which seemed to be appreciated by so many people who came to the door to share the time with us. This year, the children asked to do the carolling — this is wonderful!

Bring flashlights and small instruments such as finger cymbals, bells, harmonicas, triangles.

Dress to be warm: boots, hats, mittens, etc.

Candidates' corner...

Hedlund endorses petition

Republican State Senate candidate Robert Hedlund last week accompanied Barbara Anderson, Director of Citizen's for Limited Taxation (CLT) to the Secretary of States office to turn in the 105,283 certified signatures gathered by the CLT volunteers.

The CLT petition drive is an attempt to place a referendum question on next year's ballot to roll back the increase in the state's income tax, fees and fines increases.

Hedlund praised those who braved the cold weather to gather signatures and stated "It is unfortunate that we had to use the petition process due to the fact the state legislature has failed to represent the wishes of the voters throughout the state, the voters have spoken and their cry is no new taxes."

Hedlund talks in Duxbury

State Senate candidate Robert Hedlund of Weymouth last Monday addressed the Duxbury Republican Town Committee. The following day, Hedlund spoke to the Weymouth Republican Town Committee.

Throughout both speeches Hedlund stressed his long standing involvement with Republican party causes and candidates, and the recent Citizens for Limited Taxation initiative petition drive of which Hedlund served as area co-ordinator.

Hussey speaks to seniors

State Senate candidate Donald Hussey last week attended the Republican candidates night at the South Shore Country Club. According to Hussey all of the state-wide Republican candidates presented serious commentary on the issues which effect Massachusetts.

Candidate Hussey also visited the Senior Center at the "Lincoln Apartments" on Central Street in Hingham last week.

Hussey said, "If elected to this Senate seat I would propose a bill that would set real estate taxes, for those retirees age 65 who own their own homes, to a percentage of income. This would alleviate some of the need and expense for public housing for the elderly and, more importantly, would allow our senior citizens, who have worked all their lives to own the home they live in, to keep that home - and not lose it to the "tax man".

For information on "citizens for Hussey" call 749-5117.

Ambler sponsors lottery bill

Rep. Robert B. Ambler (D-Weymouth), a candidate for State Senate in the Norfolk and Plymouth district, co-sponsored a bill which would increase about $50 million in lottery receipts to the cities and towns.

Ambler noted that the continued threats to local aid prompted sponsorship of this bill. "Local aid has always been and will continue to be one of my chief concerns. It is so crucial to the local communities and when it is threatened it is the responsibility of the Legislature to protect these vitally needed funds" Ambler said.

Ambler stated that in light of recent events he is optimistic that his colleagues will agree as to the necessity of maintaining local aid so communities may continue to provide quality basic services such as schools, police and fire departments.

If successful, Ambler said the bill would send an estimated $50 million back to the cities and towns.

McDonald endorses proposal

Weymouth Democratic State Senate candidate Brian J. McDonald endorses the recent proposal for an independent commission to examine the state's fiscal crisis. But he is calling for the group to be expanded to include a broader spectrum of interests and the development of long-term goals.

"I support bringing government, business, labor and public opinion leaders together to examine the problem and propose solutions. However, I feel it is absolutely critical that there be more citizen interests represented on the commission," McDonald said.

He said the commission, which is proposed to include representatives of government, business and labor, should also have officials of the Tax Equity Alliance of Massachusetts, local officials, the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, Citizens for Limited Taxation and representatives of the print and broadcast media.

"There are many diverse views regarding the fiscal crisis and I believe that by focusing this wealth of talent and expertise in pursuit of a common goal, a short-term resolution to the problem can be achieved and a long-term plan can be formulated to guarantee responsible government and an energetic economy to the year 2000 and beyond," McDonald concluded.

Ambler pushes exemption

Rep. Robert Ambler (D-Weymouth) has submitted legislation which would create tax exempt savings accounts to be used for the purchase of a person's first home.

"In the current economy it is becoming more and more difficult for young people to be able to finance their first home," Representative Ambler said. "This bill will encourage first-time buyers to invest in their family's future as well as the future of this state."

The bill would authorize any Massachusetts resident looking for their first home to open a tax-free account for amounts up to $20,000, in any savings bank, co-operative bank, credit union or trust company doing business in the Commonwealth.

"The Commonwealth has a great deal to offer its residents," Representative Ambler said. "The opportunity to open a tax-free savings account will be a benefit for those wishing to make Massachusetts their home."

Stickers are legal

the new sticker at $52 by Jan. 1, 1990 in order to continue using the transfer facility.

But many residents told selectmen they felt the new permit was unfair, since they had purchased $7 facilities stickers last summer. That permit allowed residents to use the landfill, along with the parking facilities at Sandy Beach, Government Island, and the Edwin Young lots. Those stickers, they complained, do not expire until June 30, 1990, and therefore the new $52 sticker was overlapping the current permit.

The health board said they never received any complaints about the new sticker, although they received a few questions from residents.

Garden Club house tour gets rave reviews

By Rosie Dole
Cohasset Community Garden Club
Special to the Mariner

Spectacular! Wonderful! Great! These are the words one hears describing the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's house tour which was held last Thursday. Pat Dennett, President of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, called it the best in the state. One visitor summed it all up when she said, "I have lived in many states and have seen a lot of house tours, this was the best I have ever seen."

Even though much of the credit for this success goes to tour chairman Noel Manion and her co-chairman Arlene Ferreira who pulled it all together, tea chairmen Mary Hickey and Dorothy Leptich, Janet Lamp, boutique, Mary Cowan, hostesses, Terese D'Urso, publicity, Cynthia Wessling, home-owners gifts and write-up, Skiol Johnsen, shuttle and especially to the decorators of the houses, the tour would not have been possible without the help of each of the club's 270 dedicated members.

It's a tremendous undertaking, and each of our members, including our junior gardeners, worked on the tour in one capacity or another, many in several. And let's not forget those very generous home owners, who were willing to open their homes. Without them, there would be no tour.

All the boutique items were hand-crafted by members, the bread and cookies for over a thousand visitors for the tea had to be baked and assembled by the members also.

The club always manages to get houses together and have offers of four houses already for the 1991 tour.

The decorations in the individual homes were all designed and made by the decorators and their committees, all very talented members of the Garden Club.

Head decorator for the Robert Morgan home on Jerusalem Road was Kathy Fox. The decorations brought out the coziness of the 110 year old former caretaker's cottage of the Howe Estate.

Jeanne Replogle, who was in charge of the George Peters' lovely home on Deep Run, selected a clever nautical theme with various decorations made of shells.

Barbara Henderson in her design brought out the outgoing personality of the Hobart Land home owner's, the Curtis Smalzel's.

Pam Henry's original decorating of the William Zadel's home on Howard Gleason Road again complimented their up-beat, contemporary style.

Fran O'Toole, in the Donald Woolfe home on North Main Street, elected to go with a few choice pieces and let the antique gem of a house speak for itself.

The sophisticated house of the Robert Healy's on Jerusalem Road was decorated in the same manner by Suzanne Moyer who also designed the cover for the Community Garden Club's popular new cook book.

Mary Larson's elegant gold and whte motif brought out the beauty of the Robert Farwell house on Beechwood Street.

Club member Marilyn Connors was the harpist there. Lee Andraski and Sally Avery, in charge of the Junior Gardeners, hosted there as well as decorated a tree at Bates Hall.

The Horticulture Committee, under the chairmanship of Phyllis Peck decorated an outside tree at the Farwell's with the theme, "How to attract wild birds to your yard." A similar tree was featured at the Peter's house.

The house tour was also chosen to introduce the club's beautiful new cook book, Cohasset Entertains, Encore. Jeanne Schneider was cook book chairman, Barbara Johnson and Cynthia Wessling are in charge of marketing. The cook books can be purchased by calling 383-9571 or 749-2598.

At last, but not least, the Cohasset Community Garden Club thanks all of you who bought tickets and took the tour. With the proceeds we can now continue for the next two years our beautification projects in town such as the landscaping of Constitution Park, the high school courtyard, the community center, the Lothrop House and various other community projects."

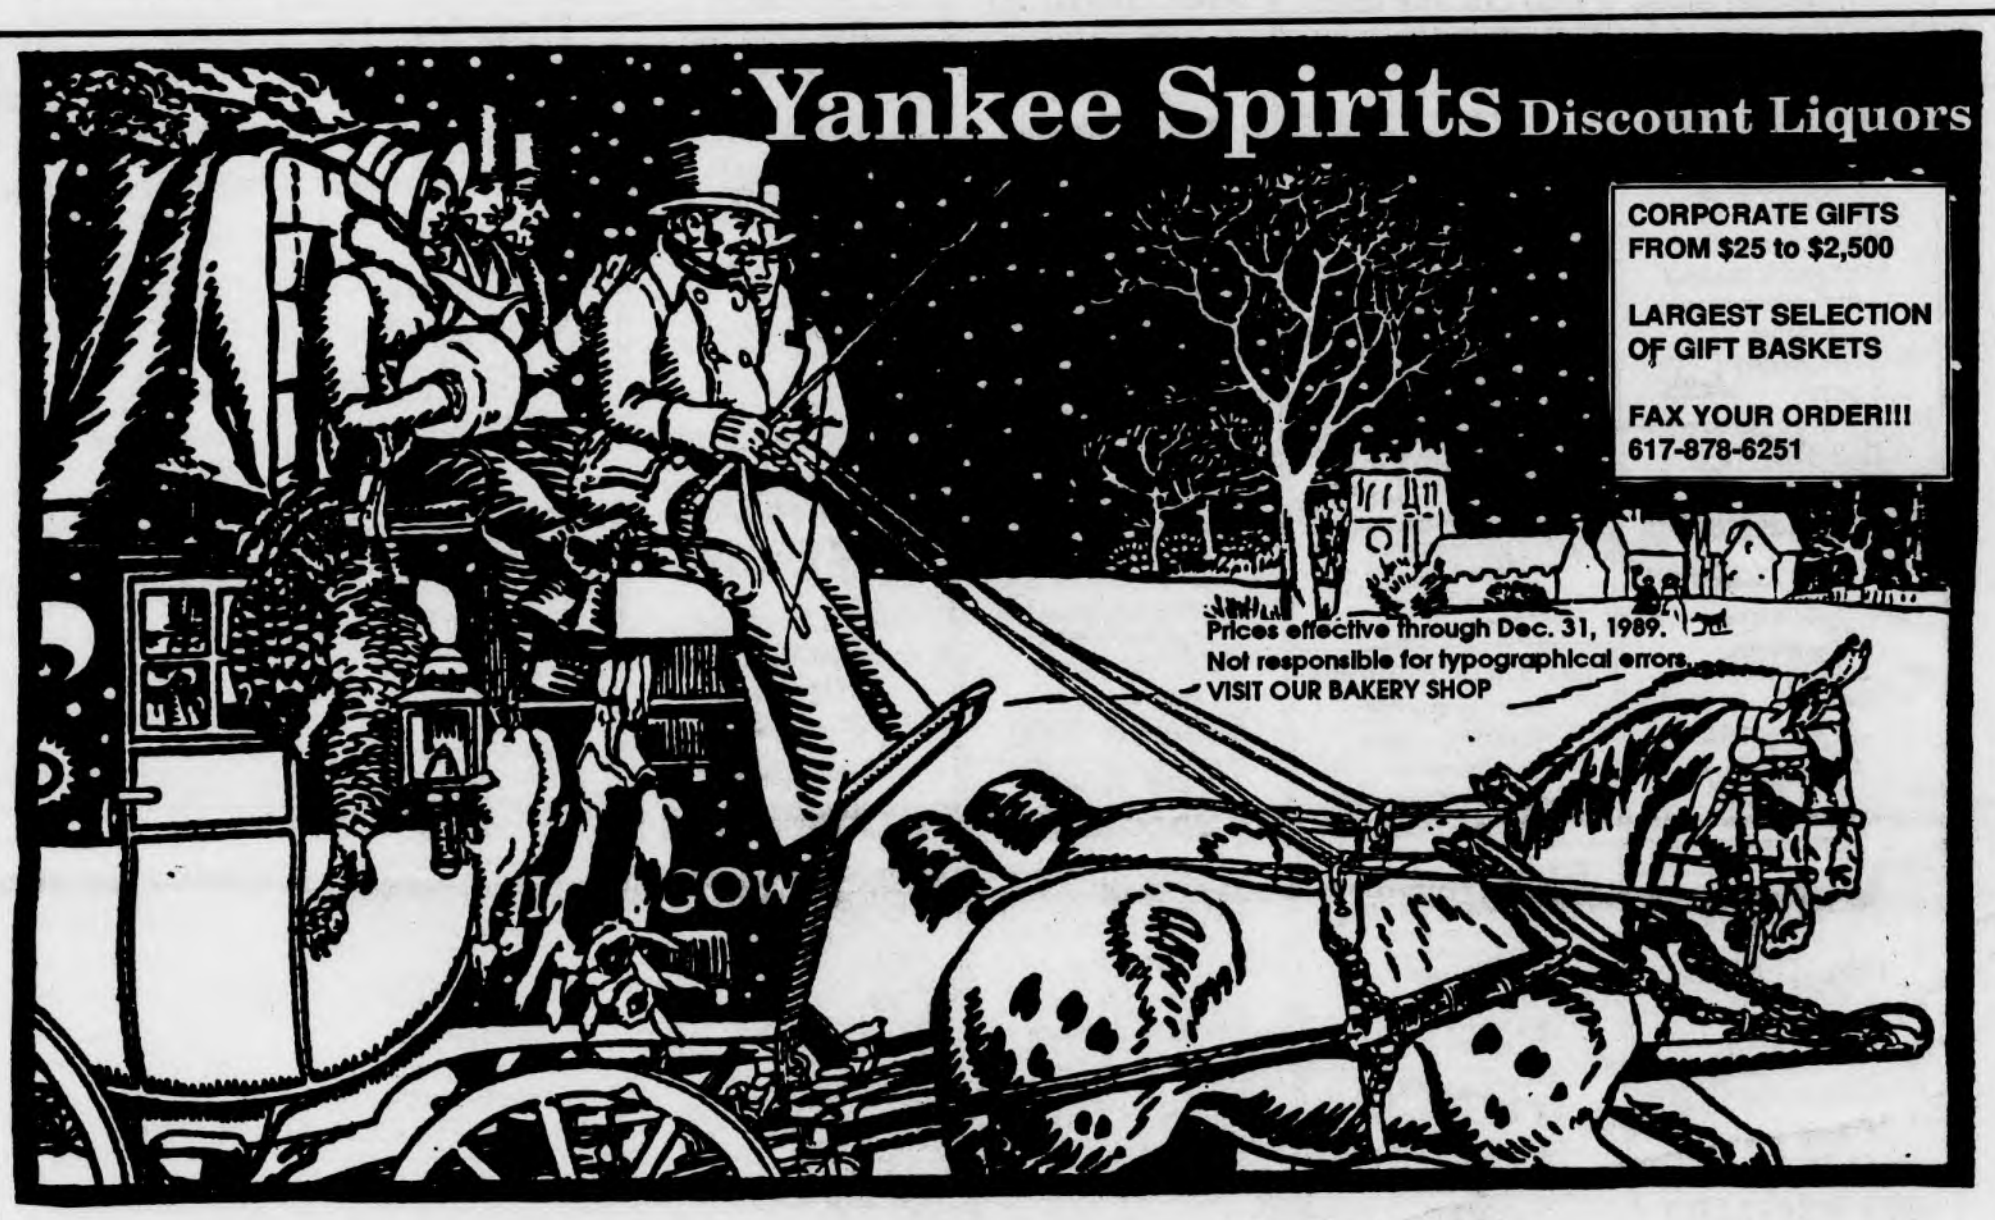
Recycling news...

(This week's Recycling News was written by Alix White)

Congratulations to the students, teachers, and staff currently recycling cardboard, office and computer paper, glass and aluminum throughout the school system. A special thanks to the custodians for the extra care taken to recycle. The Recycling Committee feels that the schools are ready for the challenge of the 30-second plastics recycling in the cafeterias.

Students are the key to saving polystyrene from being burned in the SEMASS incinerator, with resultant toxic fumes and ash. What is polystyrene? Currently, the plates, cups, trays and cutlery used in the cafeterias are made from polystyrene. These will be recycled by PLASTICS AGAIN, where the polystyrene is thoroughly washed, made into pellets, dried and used for foam cushions, insulation, cassette casings and an array of other products.



Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

Deer Hill students began polystyrene plastic recycling this past Monday. Once the custodian noticed how much less trash there was since a teacher had been saving the plastic trays for an art project, the Recycling Committee felt it timely to begin recycling now.Thanks to Bob Barrow for his key support. Recycling will begin at the High School shortly after the beginning of next semester. Special containers for polystyrene will be placed next to trash containers at key locations, and an ongoing educational process will begin.

TROUBLESHOOTING AT THE RECYCLING-TRANSFER FACILITY:

CARDBOARD: Corrugated cardboard only (brown boxes). No post-consumer cardboard, please, such as cereal boxes, gift or printed boxes, as these items contaminate the supply used by recycling mills.

NEWSPRINT: Place newspapers in brown paper bags (7 newspapers fit into one grocery bag), wrap with twine, or place in cardboard box. Absolutely no plastic, please.

Cohasset's week

A grim budget

The administration and school committee are not counting on having a happy new year.

In an omen of things to come, superintendent Stephen Hart told school committee members that a recent fuel oil delivery was 25 percent higher than a year ago. That is just another fixed cost that will make school budget discussions a grim task.

Referring to community efforts to offset cuts in the athletic programs, Hart asked, "Can we really count on another $20,000 fund raising?"

Budget hearings are scheduled to begin Jan. 8.

Roofs to be rebid

It's the second time around for Osgood Schools roof contract bids.

The architect for the project and town counsel Richard Henderson recommended rebidding when several of the contractors did not respond to an addendum to the contract. Questions have been raised whether some packets were missing critical information.

Rebidding will cause a month's delay, but no increase in cost is anticipated. In fact, committee member Christopher Ford suggested that the schools might save money given the increased competition for work among contractors.

Troubled waters at Osgood

The continuing drama of human waste at Osgood School was reopened twice: once out in the field on Nov. 16 and again at the regular meeting of the school committee meeting on Dec. 18.

With the help of the highway department, the failing leaching field was uncovered and investigatory percolation tests were conducted under the direction of a consulting engineer to determine the cause of the problem.

The consulting engineer is recommending that the school install a new leaching trench to improve drainage and absorption.

"I don't think [the problem] is going to go away," warned Superintendent Stephen Hart.

The recommended work could cost as much as $30,000, according to ball-park figures given to Hart. Putting off the work is no bargain either-- the school has had to have the septic system pumped twice since the beginning of the school year at a total cost of $1600.

The school committee will explore other alternatives with the board of health and local contractors in hopes of finding a cheaper solution.

The septic system at Osgood is one of several items on the school committee's capital budget wish list.

Inservice training okayed

Marilee Cantelmo, the new curriculum enrichment coordinator for grades K - 6 was given permission to go ahead with an inservice training for elementary teachers.

The training, known as Talents Unlimited, will help teachers recognize, identify, and nurture the talents and learning styles of all children in order to foster success both in and out of school.

According to a program summary, Talents Unlimited is based on the assumption that "there are several ways of being smart . . . These 'talents' include academic talent as the base, but reach out to include: productive thinking, communication, forecasting, decision-making and planning."

The strategies taught are meant to be incorporated into the existing curriculum.

The training, tentatively scheduled in March, will include a parent workshop to teach parents how to encourage the skills at home.

Committee members were enthusiastic about the program.

"This is such a breath of fresh air," said Ralph Kidder. He thanked Cantelmo for bringing "this kind of excitement and the opportunity for staff to develop their talents."

Doctor Christopher Ford expressed a hope that the techniques could be implemented at all grade levels, not just the elementary grades.

Border St. work approved

Selectmen decided to allow a Border Street resident to excavate some land in order to construct a driveway next to her home.

Before construction begins, however, Lynn Parmenter of 97 Border Street, must also receive permission from Norfolk County. The section of roadway that will be excavated to accommodate the additional parking area has been owned by the county since it widened Border Street in 1928.

Parmenter's engineer, Neil Murphy, explained that the resident is unable to park two cars in the existing driveway, and she must therefore park one of the vehicles along the street in front of her home. The proposed excavation will include 19 feet from a retaining wall to a tree. That maple tree will be cut down and 30 yards of ledge will be blasted.

Murphy noted that sometime in the future, Parmenter intends to go before the appeals board for permission to build a garage on her property.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey told selectmen he supports the measure which would help alleviate traffic and parking on Border Street.

Although Executive Secretary Greg Doyon suggested that selectmen delay a vote until other town boards could comment on the proposal, the board voted to approve the request. The decision was contingent on a subsequent approval by the county, and comments solicited by other town boards.

Selectmen think new permit a 'bad policy'

The transfer station sticker situation has selectmen upset.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle thinks the new $52 stickers now required by the health board is, "a bad, bad policy."

He is encouraging people to bring their complaints directly to the board of health. Many people, he said, have complained to selectmen, although they have no jurisdiction in the matter.

Residents who use the town's new transfer station at the Cedar Street landfill are required to purchase a $52 permit. Town counsel decided last week that it was within the health board's jurisdiction to require the new permits for the transfer facility, even though the 1989 town facilities permit is still in effect.

That is an entirely different permit, the attorney ruled, and is issued to residents for parking privileges at publicly-owned parking lots and use of the town landfill.

According to Richard Henderson, the health board can establish a fee for the residents who use the new transfer station. "Not everyone has to use the facility," Henderson said. "I'm not commenting on whether it's a good or bad idea. I'm just telling them (the health board) that it's permissible."

Henderson said the new permit is not in conflict with any town bylaw, since it is a user fee established for one facility. The user fee is allowed under the provisions of the 1987 state Solid Waste Act.

"Why was the (facilities) sticker good for so many years?" Laugelle questioned. Henderson explained that the current $7 facilities sticker was valid for certain specific uses - the $52 transfer station sticker is for a separate use.

Many people have argued, Laugelle said, that the $7 facilities sticker is good until June 30, 1990, and the $52 permit should have been delayed until after it expires. "That's not an issue," Laugelle asked.

Henderson said it would have been "common sense" for the health board to delay implementation of the more expensive sticker, but they did not breach any contract by initiating the sale of the new permit.

"As town counsel I was asked if they can charge for use (of the transfer station) and I ruled on the legality," Henderson replied. "And I said yes. The board of health has the right to set a user fee. If people don't feel it's right, then go to the health board."

"We should encourage people to go to the board of health," Laugelle insisted.

"Many people have approached me - they want to know what grounds the board of health has to increase fees. Why do they have to pay more now?

"It's a bad, bad policy," he added.

But Selectman Burt Pratt noted that by creating a $52 user fee for the transfer station, the town will be taking in more than $50,000 in this fiscal year.

"Well," Laugelle insisted, "I'm going to encourage people to write to the board of health."

"And anyone who calls (selectmen), say it's not my jurisdiction," Pratt added.

The students of the Carriage House Nursery School and their mothers were treated to special holiday festivities last week, including a seranade by First Parish minister Ed Atkinson. The attentive audience included: (l to r) Marita Carpenter and Robbie, 3 1/2, Colleen Roth and Danny, 4, Pat Baird, a teacher aide with Timmy Pilczak, 3, and (far right) Danny Allen.

Finally, some good news for local schools

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset school committee got at least one set of numbers they could feel good about this year.

After the doom and gloom in the budget, the 1989 Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores were like a ray of sunshine.

John Leary, director of pupil services, cautioned the committee against reading too much into the test results.

"They are greatly misunderstood and misused," said Leary. "It doesn't measure curriculum effectiveness and shouldn't be used to compare school systems."

"It's really unfortunate when schools are compared [using SATs]," said superintendent Stephen Hart.

In spite of that caveat, Leary presented a report that compared Cohasset to both national and state averages.

One of the flaws in using them in a comparative way is that results can be skewed by an individual school system by discouraging participation by less able students or by reporting the scores of only the academically talented group.

The tests are taken in the junior and senior years. Nationally, approximately 60 percent of students in a given school take the tests. In contrast, at least 97 to 98 percent of Cohasset students will take the SATs at some point.

"We encourage all students to take the SATs," said Leary.

The SATs are broken into tests verbal, reading comprehension, vocabulary, standard written English, and mathematical aptitude. The math and verbal tests are scored on a scale of 200 to 800, the other three are marked on a scale of 20 to 60.

Over the past five years, Cohasset has demonstrated a fairly consistent result. This year, Cohasset students scored:

- 468 in verbal aptitude. The national average was 427 and the state average was 432.
- 507 in mathematics. Nationally, the average was 476 and the state was 473.
- 46.2 for reading comprehension against 42.9 nationally and 43.0 in the state.
- 47.7 in vocabulary. The national average was 42.8 and the state average was 43.7.
- 46.6 in the test of standard written English. National scores were 42.9, while Mass. came in at 42.8.

Cohasset also has a high rate of participation in the optional achievement tests and the advanced placement examinations.

Generally, only the best and the brightest opt to take the achievement tests. Nationally, only about 20 percent of SAT takers will take an achievement test. In Mass. the number was 41 percent. In Cohasset, the rate jumps to 66 percent.

These tests are more reliable than SATs in predicting the likelihood of success in college, according to Leary. He also told the committee that many colleges are putting a lot more emphasis on achievement test results than SAT scores.

Cohasset students consistently score around 500 in English composition and in the mid-500s for Mathematics - Level 1. Scores in other subjects tend to be much higher, reflecting the self-selecting nature of the exams.

Leary cited the Math Level 2 test as an example. Only a handful of students took the test and most of them were taking calculus. The average score for these students was 624.

The most rigorous exams are the advanced placement exams, made famous in the movie "Stand and Deliver".

Cohasset students were signed up for 39 exams in eight different subjects. 90 percent received a passing grade, enabling them to receive college credits in that subject area.

While pleased with the performance of the students, the committee asked what things the school could do to increase individual scores.

"We have to be realistic about the competitive market out there," said chairman Barbara Bliss.

"I just want to make sure all our students get a fair shake," she continued. "There is a strategy [for scoring well on the tests] and it's known."

The high school does offer an elective course to prepare students and private courses are available. The possibility of offering workshops for the SATs and the PSATs were discussed.

Leary cautioned the group into rushing into establishing any SAT-centered curriculum.

"Colleges don't want it," he said. "They don't even want to see it on the transcript."

Committee member Ralph Kidder put the issue to bed by saying that although strategies could be taught that would boost scores, "These sores are certainly not troubling!"

New cemetery regulations to take effect

Selectmen voted unanimously to adopt a new set of town cemetery regulations.

The new regulations, which apply to the town's four cemeteries, take effect immediately.

Although there was some discussion about charging an additional fee for winter burials that require extra equipment to break through frozen ground, selectmen decided against it.

"We're nickel and diming our residents to death," Selectman Rocco Laugell grumbled, saying he would not approve the proposed $100 charge for winter burials.

According to the revised regulations, a resident or former resident is allowed to purchase two grave sites from the town. A resident will be charged $500 per grave site, and a former resident will be charged $700. In both instances, $125 of that charge will be put aside for perpetual care of the property by the town.

Cremation sites will cost $125 and must be paid in full at the time of purchase.

The cost for the town to open a grave site during normal business hours is $200; and $250 for non-business hours.

An individual selling a lot (two grave sites) or one grave site must first offer it to the board of selectmen for an amount equal to the price being charged by selectmen for a similar lot or grave site, minus the perpetual care costs.

If selectmen do not purchase the lot or grave site, the owner may then offer it to another resident or former resident under the same conditions. The buyer must then pay the current perpetual care costs to the board of selectmen, and the sale is subject to approval by selectmen.

Installation of monuments must first be approved by selectmen or the superintendent. And only one monument will be allowed on each lot. Included in the regulations is a restriction on the size of the monument.

Installation of fences or shrubs on the grave site must first be approved by selectmen or the cemetery superintendent, Peter Laugelle. In the spring, the cemetery dept. will remove any winter decorations from the grave site that interefere with the maintenance of the cemetery.

The superintendent or employees of the cemetery dept. will not be held responsible for any damage to plants, shrubs or monuments on the grave site.

Apple computers presented to Cohasset classrooms

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Apples may be a traditional gift for the teacher, but in Cohasset, the students are reaping this harvest.

For several months, the students of Cohasset have participated in the Stop and Shop "Apples for the students" program. Since September, they have collected more pink register tapes than any other South Shore community.

In celebration of its 75th anniversary, Stop and Shop is awarding Apple computers to schools in return for the store's register tapes.

Cohasset students, with a lot of help from people throughout the town, have collected almost $1 million in register tapes since the beginning of school. And their efforts were rewarded this week when the students received their computers during a ceremony at the Deer Hill School.

Six Apple computers have been delivered, and three more are on their way according to Cohasset's program coordinator Janice Crowley. In addition, the school will also receive several disk drives and additional software.

The computers will be evenly divided among the three schools, Crowley explained, noting that when the schools decided to enter the contest, they also declared that all three schools would share the profits and the entire community would be invited to participate.

Since that time, collection boxes have been located at the town hall, the senior center, and the community center, as well as the three schools.

"The reason we have collected so many tapes is because it is a community-wide program. It's not an individual effort," Crowley explained.

During a ceremony held Monday at the Deer Hill School, Crowley praised the efforts of students and residents. She singled out first grade teacher Robin Balch and several of her students who worked long hours to calculate the total amount of tapes.

Crowley called the Osgood teacher and her students, "unbelievable" and gave them a perfect score on their addition, since Stop and Shop never found one mistake in their addition.

Balch and her students were assisted by PTO volunteers Pat Baird, Diana Kinch and Monica McKenney. Elaine Coyne and Donna O'Donnell publicized the program so the community would be constantly reminded of the need to save the register tapes.

Cohasset students gathered this week at the Deer Hill School for the presentation of nine Apple computers to the Cohasset schools. Participating in the award ceremonies were: (l to r, bottom row) Aryanna Afshar, 7, Justin Culli van,8, and David Crowley, 5, Todd Bestick, 8, Danny Mulligan, 7, Katie Anderson, 11, Jennifer Cullivan, 11, Janice Crowley, Joan Dauphinee of the Stop and Shop "Apples for the Students" program, and Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg.

"It was a phenonmenal turnout because of the people around town. Everyone gave their time and their slips," Crowley said.

Before the "Apple Lady," performed by Cohasset Stop and Shop bakery manager Joan Dauphinee, presented the computers, members of the Deer Hill Band performed a ceremonious fanfare.

Sixth grader Jennifer Cullivan, 11, recited a poem she created for the occasion, retelling a fictious disaster when Deer Hill's register tapes flew out an opened classroom window.

Similar to the seasonal favorite, "T'was the night before Christmas," Jennifer's poem stated:

"And when you're out around the town,
Look for the slips, they're pink, not brown,
Then return them please to Open Space,
And perhaps we can still win the race.
But know that when all is said and done,
Through it all we have had some fun!
So happy computers to all,
And to all a floppy disk."

Crowley noted that in a time when school budgets are tight and the purchase of classroom computers is not a certainty, this program has been enthusiastically received by the entire community.

The nine computers and software presented by the Stop and Shop this week represents thousands of dollars worth of instructional equipment. The tapes traded in for the computers were collected from September through last week.

The program will continue through March, and residents are encouraged to continue saving the pink register tapes.

around town

❑ All of you baseball card fans are in for a real treat. Paul Fiori is opening a baseball card store in downtown Cohasset! It will be located where the bicycle shop used to be. In the same block with Pat's Barber Shop and the Log and Line. Knowing the Fiori's and their enthusiasm for anything they get involved with, it should be super! It will open early in January. We will fill you in on days and times later on, so watch for it.

❑ Happy birthday greetings go to Holly Pompeo! If you are thinking that there seems to be a lot of Pompeo greetings in December, you are right! Holly is the third this month, but she would be the first to tell you that you always save the best for last!!! Happy birthday to a great gal, and many more!

❑ A couple of newsworthy events to file away . . . everyone is talking about the outstanding brunch that is being served at Hugo's Lighthouse these days. Hugo's has only been serving brunch for the last couple of weeks and all that have gone have come out raving about it! Give it a try over the next few weeks when you need a treat, you will be glad that you did!

❑ Larry Souza and his most capable crew are very proud of their efforts to raise funds for Ken Silvia, the fellow who lost his fishing boat a few weeks ago. As you may remember, a roast beef dinner was held at the American Legion and a raffle was held that night as well. The gang raised over four thousand dollars for Ken, which will certainly help a lot in his purchase of a new boat! Don't forget there is also a fund set up at the Cohasset Savings Bank. If you are able to donate please call the bank or Larry at 383-9657.

❑ Jim, Lizzie, Laura and Krista Kuhn are really missing Paulo, especially at this time of year! Paulo is back in Peru after spending last school year with the Kuhns, and we'll bet that the Kuhns are really missed by him! A warm loving family, they would make anyone wish that they didn't have to go home!! We'll bet that Lizzie had to send packages in August to be sure that they reached Paulo in time, and you can bet that she did!

There were good things to eat and fun things to do at the annual Breakfast with Santa held last weekend at the community center. Karen and Leah McMorris made some holiday wreaths just in time for this week's events. (Staff photo/ Chris Bernstein)

❑ Another local business certainly worthy of mention is Smith Appliance. What an outfit they are!! You call they come . . . same day!! They are helpful and friendly and more than willing to please! Give them a try the next time you need a purchase or a repair.

❑ Congratulations to Jennifer Salerno, who graduated from the Cosmetology course at Blaine the Hair and Beauty School located in Hyannis.

❑ Congratulations to Michelle M. Buckley and Geoffrey D. Chamberlain, who made the Headmasters List at Derby Academy. Also, Taylor M. Fairman, Theodore Noon, Elizabeth G. O'Brien, and Andrew Pozatek who made second honors. Keep up the good work!

❑ We know that the Grimm Family will have a wonderful Christmas this year! William and Deborah had a baby son, born on December 1st, at South Shore Hospital. Merry Christmas!!

❑ And Scott Randall Riddle and Lisa Riddle are the happiest of parents too! They became the proud parents of a baby girl born on December 2 at South Shore Hospital! They will be classmates someday, what fun!

❑ Chad Whitman received a letter from Congressman Gerry Studds, saying that the money would have to be raised to purchase a new flag. His room (room 5, Mr. Deakin) has decided to collect returnable bottles to raise the money, so you all know where your bottles should go!! Help them to fly a capitol flag over Deer Hill School again!

❑ Everyone please say a prayer for our wonderful friend, Bob Pape! Bob is at South Shore Hospital, and we surely hope that everything goes well for him. We love him!

❑ All of the people who went are still talking about the House Tour that was held by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset! We'll bet the committee felt it all worthwhile when Pat Dennett, the President of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts called it the best in the state!! Great job. Our hats are off to all of the gals who worked so hard!!

❑ Finally, may you all have a joyous and wonderful Christmas and we hope that Santa is good to all of you little ones (big ones too!!).

Make a resolution now to call me with your news during the new year!

Drug and alcohol group issue preliminary report

Selectmen commended a preliminary report issued this week by the town's drug and alcohol abuse committee which concluded that alcohol is the most widely-used and abused drug in this community.

The committee, appointed in September by selectmen, has completed an intensive study of drug usage in Cohasset. During the past several weeks, the committee has interviewed scores of medical and professional experts in an effort to identify any current or potential drug problem in Cohasset, and to target possible solutions.

Their final report to selectmen will be prepared by February.

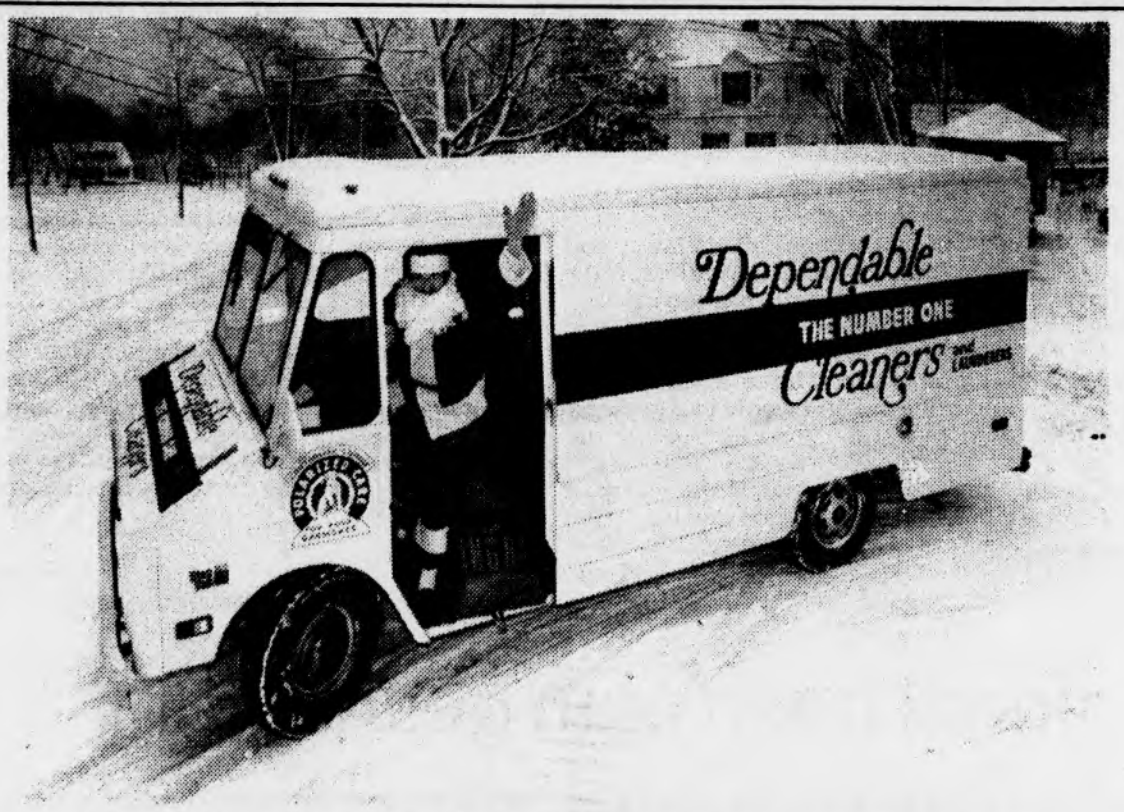
"While cocaine is very much present in Cohasset, its use appears to be centered among adults. Young people and adults, both, abuse marijuana; again, in significantly smaller numbers. It has been indicated to the committee that virtually any drug is available to any resident, if he or she knows whom to contact. Alcohol, however, predominates as the community's drug of choice," the preliminary report stated.

Seletman Martha Gjesteby, who proposed the blue ribbon commission last fall, commended the report. "They've done a very good job in 10 to 11 weeks," she said. The board voted unanimously to accept the report.

According to the initial findings, alcohol and other drugs are being used by many sectors of the community, with reported incidents of abuse by youngsters in the sixth grade to senior citizens.

Preliminary findings also indicate that Cohasset may surpass the national average of alcohol consumption and abuse.

The committee was unable to gather valid statistics regarding use of illegal drugs within the community, including marijuana and cocaine.



Calling drug abuse and addiction, a disease, "not a moral affliction," the committee noted there are educational programs available in other communities. There are treatment programs locally and regionally, and there are many support groups.

"It is the committee's intention to draw from all of these resources in recommending a plan of action to the selectmen and to the town," they stated. Those recommendations, including methods to finance the programs, will be included in the committee's final report to selectmen.

Michael Kasameyer, Jessi Flynn and Breezy Crossman performed in this week's sixth grade performance of "A Cause for Mrs. Claus." The students/performers are from Mrs. Cisneros' class.

John McDonald, 13, is credited with alerting firefighters to a December 15 house fire on Oak Street. According to the fire department, John and some friends were skating that evening on Cushing Pond when they saw smoke in a nearby home. John pulled the fire alarm which brought firefighters to the scene within minutes. A cause of the fire which seriously damaged the single-family home, has not been determined. Village Fair was a huge success

Letters

To the Editor:

The 49th Annual Cohasset Village Fair is history and once again it was a huge success. As always the parishioners of the participating churches gave generously of their time and talents. However, the Fair would not have been as successful as it was without the help of area merchants. Cohasset merchants donated supplies, equipment and raffle prizes. I would like to thank them and wish them continued good fortune for the 1990's.

Another group that deserves praise is the youth of our community. The youth performed many functions including acting as Town Crier and guides, assisting with the very young in the Secret Room and the Activities Center, and serving the Celebration Dinner that concluded the Fair. Cohasset High School students and teachers added to the festive atmosphere by providing us with beautiful artwork and beautiful music. The students also manned a booth to collect for the less fortunate. Finally, we would like to thank the staff of the Mariner for the timely articles and post fair pictures.

Sincerely,
Cynthia A. Dedes
Chairman 49th Cohasset Village Fair

Regional trash plan gets a grant

The endangered regional trash plan is back on the drawing board this week after a thaw in the state budget.

Last month members of the South Shore Coalition were told the $150,000 state grant for the project had been frozen due to the state's financial crisis.

Last week the coalition heard from David Soule, executive director of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, that about $65,000, enough to pay for the first phase, would be released.

The regional trash study is the main focus of the coalition.

The contract for the study had been signed before the state announced it had no money to fund the grant.

Norwell Selectman Rebecca Freed was elected chairman of the coalition last week, replacing Marshfield Selectman Richard Levin who moved to the secretary's position. Levin served as acting chairman for the past few months. Scituate Planning Board Member Marisa Lago was elected as vice chairman.

Last week Levin suggested it is time for the coalition to find out whether townspeople will support regional programs.

Levin said he sees the possibility of central purchasing as a way to test the coalition towns. A study has already been done that indicated the towns could save on buying some items in bulk. Items like sand, road salt, oil and gasoline make up large portions of many budgets.

Even with a small saving delivered to the towns, people would begin to see some results from the coalition, Levin said. Next year the towns will be asked to pay $3,000 for their membership in the organization. Ultimately the cost to member towns will reach $5,000.

"The coalition has become more of a planning group," Levin said. He wants to see more lobbying done by the coalition.

Levin said he thinks central purchasing is the logical first step.

Another regional projects where the 10-town group might save money is the regionalization of public safety services, Levin said.

He said there would be possible savings from working on a regional ambulance delivery system but town that still use fire department paramedics (unlike Marshfield where a private company is employed) might not accept the concept.

Levin said the possible savings from a regional fire service plan would huge. But he added there would be political problems and he wasn't sure whether the town meeting would accept regionalization.

He suggested the matter be put before town meeting for a vote.

Levin said he would like to see a representative of the coalition attend meetings of the South Shore Legislative Caucus.

The coalition is planning to vote on a list of priorities for the coming year during its meeting next month.

Artist's trip to Poland

The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset is sponsoring an artists' trip to Portugal in March, 1990.

Artist Virginia Avery will lead a group of students on a ten-day, nine-night artistic tour of Portugal from March 21 to 30. Students will be painting, sketching and taking photographs throughout their trip.

The group will stay in "Ponsadas" (resting places), which are government-operated inns, some dating back to the 17th century. A daily bus will take the group from the ponsada to various painting sites.

All levels of painters and non-painters are welcome to join.

For more information on this trip, call Avery at 617- 834-9874.

Latkes are traditional during Chanukah

By Marilyn Jackson and Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Chanukah begins Friday evening, Dec. 22.

The eight-day observance commemorates an important victory in Jewish history when the Maccabees defeated the Greek Assyrians more than 2100 years ago and drove them from Jerusalem.

Afterwards, as the Jews were ceremonially cleaning the temple, they came upon a flask of oil that belonged to the high priest.

Although it contained just enough sacramental oil to burn for one night, the oil lasted eight full days, allowing the people to prepare other oil.

To signify those eight days, the menorah, an eight-branched candelabrum, is lit each night of Chanukah at sundown, first with a single candle, the second night, two candles, until all eight are lit.

Traditionally, a dairy supper is served on the first night of Chanukah, with latkes and cheese dishes.

Eating cheese delicacies is an old one, for according to historical accounts, Judith, a daughter of the Hasmoneans, fed cheese to the leader of the enemy, making him very thirsty.

The wine to quench his thirst made him so drunk that Judith was able to have him taken prisoner and subsequently beheaded.

The Chanukah festival emphasizes the victory of a great moral cause rather than the victory of the battlefield, the rededication of the temple.

According to a guide to Jewish festivals, traditions and holidays, "A Treasure For My Daughter," Chanukah "exemplifies the rebellion in defense of the inalienable rights of man.

"It is a protest against the denial of the freedom of worship.

"The victory of the Maccabees is that of godliness over paganism, Judaism over Hellenism, right over might, democracy over dictatorship."

There are as many recipes for latkes as there are Jewish cooks. The most important thing to remember when making latkes is that there is no such thing as too many latkes.

The recipes that follow range from traditional to the more fanciful.

Out of respect for those who have had too many zuccinis foisted on them during the harvest season, the recipe for zucchini latkes has been omitted.

Aaron Kleinerman concentrates on his part in a human menorah at Sha'Aray Shalom.

SHELLEY'S POTATO LATKES

4 large potatoes, grated and well-drained
1 large onion, grated
1 egg
1 heaping Tbsp. flour
salt and pepper to taste
unsaturated oil for frying

Mix potato, onion, egg, flour, salt and pepper. Heat enough oil in frying pan to cover latkes. Drop mixture by tablespoon-tablespoonfuls into hot oil. Brown on one side.

Flip over and brown on other side. Drain on brown paper or paper towels. Serve while still hot with apple sauce or sour cream.

Hint: Be sure to grate onion first to keep potatoes white while preparing pancakes.

CINNAMON APPLE LATKES

2 eggs
2 Tbsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt
2 tsp. cinnamon
1/3 C. water
3 C. chopped cooking apples
3/4 C. unsifted flour
1 tsp. grated lemon peel
1/2 C. sugar
vegetable oil

Beat eggs until light and foamy. Mix in the 2 tablespoons of sugar, salt, 1 teaspoon of cinnamon and water until blended.

Stir in chopped apple, flour and grated lemon peel, mix well.

Heat about 1/8 to 1/4 inch depth of vegetable oil in heavy skillet.

For each latke, drop about 1/4 cup apple mixture into hot oil. Flatten slightly.

Fry on each side until golden brown. Add vegetable oil as needed to keep proper depth for frying.

Drain the latkes well on paper towels.

Combine 1/2 cup sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon to make the topping. Springle cinnamon-sugar mixture over hot latkes and serve immediately.

SOUR CREAM AND CHEESE PANCAKES

1/2 pound (8-ounce package) cottage cheese
1/2 C. sour cream
3 eggs, beaten
1/2 tsp. salt
1 Tbsp. sugar, or to taste
3/4 C. sifted all-purpose flour
1/8 tsp. baking powder
2 Tbsp. butter

Beat cottage cheese and cream until well blended; add beaten eggs, salt and sugar, then the flour blended with the baking powder.

Beat until smooth; if batter seems too stiff, add a tablespoon or two of milk.

Melt butter in skillet or griddle (if using an electric skillet or griddle, set at 375 F), drop in batter by tablespoons, cooking until golden on each side.

Serve immediately with additional sour cream and jelly. Serves 4.

From the same book, edited by Bessie Batist, is an entire Chanukah dinner including meat halishkes, pea soup with hominy, roast capon with corn flakes stuffing, peas and carrots, cranberry aspic and tea.

However, this meal would not be served during the first night, for dietary law dictates that meat and dairy foods are not served together.

This is one of many laws based on an ethical concern about what is just. For as the Torah says in three different places, "Thou shalt not seete the kid in its mother's milk."

MEAT HALISHKES

To make meat halishkes or stuffed cabbage, use one large cabbage.

Remove core from head of cabbage and place cabbage in pot. Cover with boiling water, cover tightly, allow to cool. This makes cabbage leaves easy to separate. Drain well. Lay out leaves to be filled.

FILLING

1 pound ground meat
1 medium onion, grated

To make the filling, combine all ingredients, blending well, then place 1 tablespoon of the mixture on each cabbage leaf.

Tuck over ends and roll up like a cigar, but loosely, allowing room for rice to swell with cooking.

SAUCE

1 large onion, chopped
2 tbsp. fat
1/2 tsp. salt
1 pound can peeled whole tomates
1/2 C. sugar

To make the sauce, fry onion in fat until soft, add tomatoes and salt, boil 5 minutes, then lower heat.

Carefully place halishkes in the sauce, overlapped side down. Cook covered over very low heat for 1 1/4 hours. Add sugar, continue cooking 1/2 hour longer. Makes 36.

School news

The following poems were written by the sixth grade students in Mrs. Magoun's English class:

'Twas the week before Christmas,
And throughout open space,
Mr. Shultz was determined we'd stay in first place.
Pink receipts were hung around his desk with care,
In hopes that computers soon would be there.
The students were quietly struggling at their desks,
Trying to pass another Social Studies test.
The room was so quiet you could hear yourself think.
Even Mr. Eckberg passed by with a wink.
I looked up from my paper and was wondering why,
Mr. Shultz was beside me loosening his tie.
When all of a sudden, he yelled out so loud,
"You're doing so great! I am so proud!
The 10,000 more you brought in today
Will bring us a printer . . . We're on our way."
So continue to bring those pink slips in,
Hip hip hooray! We'll win! win! win!
When all of a sudden, a small voice could be heard.
It was Abby Pease, who said only one word.
She spoke so softly that no one could hear,
Then finally she screamed, "I need some cool air!
Mr. Shultz I'm tired, I'm tired and hot,
Could I get some cold water, or would you rather me not?"
"Instead, open a window for no one does care,"
Said Mr. Shultz as he sat back down in his chair.
She tore open the window in such a big hurry,
In blew the wind like a big flurry.
When all of a sudden the pink slips blew by,
Around the classroom and into the sky.
Out one slip out two slips out three slips and four,
Out ten slips out twenty slips and a whole lot more.
Mr. Shultz was in shock, his mouth opened wide.
He couldn't believe what had happened inside.
"Quick, quick catch them in the air,
I don't even care if you step on my chair."
Everyone screamed and jumped out of their seat,
All you could hear was the patter of feet.
When around the room there arose such a clatter,
Mrs. Magoun even came to see what was the matter.
When what to her wondering eyes should appear,
But looks of shock and looks of fear!
Mr. Shultz saw her face and cried and wailed,
So disappointed that we'd tried and failed.
So won't you help oh please, please, please,
And save the life of Abby Pease?
And when you're out around the town,
Look for the slips, they're pink, now brown.
Then return them please to Open Space,
And perhaps we still can win the race.
But know that when all is said and done,
Through it all we have had some fun!!
So happy computers to all,
And to all a floppy disk.

'Twas the Night Before the Super Bowl

'Twas the night before the Super Bowl and all through the city,
Not a creature was stirring, not even my kitty.
The helmets were hung in the locker room with care
In hopes that Super Bowl rings soon would be there.
The players were nestled all snug in their beds
While visions of victory danced in their heads.

When out on the lawn, Marc Wilson heard such a clatter
He ran to the window to see what was the matter.
He saw Super Bowl Santa Claus in the cold midnight air
On a superfast sleigh with eight immense football players.
On Okoye, on Kelly, on Jackson, on Boz,
And good ol' Flutie next to Super Santa Claus
To the top of the porch, to the top of the wall,
Now dash away, dash away, dash away all.
Up to the housetop the sleigh it did roar
With a sack full of tickets for Super Bowl XXIV.
Down the chimney Super Bowl Santa came with a bound,
And left all the tickets without making a sound.
I heard him say when he drove out in high gear,
"Happy Super Bowl to all, and to the Patriots Good Cheer."

by Brett MacQuarrie and Brian Sasso

'Twas the Night Before Christmas

T'was the day before Christmas, when all through the school
No homework was given, nor any rules.
The class papers were hung from the chalkboards to the walls,
And all of us children were jumping with joy through the halls.
Mr. Shultz found the children and it was a great feat,
'Cause then all the children were snug in their seats.
Mrs. Magoun in her glasses, and Mr. Shultz in his hat,
Had just sat down to read a book about a cat –
When out on the lawn arose such a clatter,
We threw down our books to see what was the matter.
Away to the doors we ran like a zoo,
Threw open the gate and Mr. Ekberg did too.
But out on the lawn what should appear,
A miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer.
With a jolly old man so joyful and fast,
I knew in a moment he must be from the past.
More rapid then eagles his coursers they came,
While he screamed and shouted and called them by name.
"Now, Candy! now, Dandy! now, Sandy! and Andy!
on Fluffy! on Muffy! on Buffy! and Puffy!
To the top of the porch, to the top of the wall,
Now, dash away, dash away, dash away all."
As the glistening white snow rose with the wind,
So did the sleigh just like a pin.
So up to the housetop the deer how they flew,
With a sleigh full of toys – and Santa Claus too.
And then with a thump, I heard on the roof,
The dancing and sawing of each little hoof.
As we ran to the chimney what did we see,
Santa Claus coming down with a bee on his knee.
He was dressed in red from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all covered with cash and loot.
The bag on his back was all torn and ripped,
And he staggered backwards as he toppled and tipped.
His eyes looked as blue as the sea,
And his dimples looked so much like his knees.
His cheeks were like roses,
His nose like a cherry.
His mouth was as small as a jelly bean,
And his beard was so very lean.
He had a wide face,
And a big round belly, that swayed when he moved like a pot full of jelly.
He was fat and round like his little helper elves,
And I giggled when I saw him in spite of myself.
A sign of his hand and a wiggle of his leg,
Led me to believe I didn't have to beg.
He didn't say a word but ran to us all,
Squeezed our hands, and left us some gold bands.
Pointing his finger near his ear, and he suddenly disappeared.
But I heard him exclaim as he drove out of sight,
"Happy Christmas to all and to all a good night."

'Twas the day before Christmas

'Twas the day before Christmas and all through the Mall
Not a toy was in sight not even a ball
The lights were hung in the windows with a glare
In hopes that people would buy their share
Everyone was stopping at McDonald's for lunch
"Birdie" in her sweatsuit
And I in my cap
Had just sat down for an ice cream frappe
When down near the fountain
We saw such a sight
Santa and his elves
Were having a fight!
The children were running and shouting with fear
Their moms were slapping them all in the rear
We heard some mothers shouting by name
all of their kids that were now insane
Now Brian, Now Robin, Now Eric and Sky
Come Katie, Come Abby
Now don't you dare cry!
To the front of the hall
To the rear of the Mall
Go away, go away, go away all!
So out to the parking lot
we flew like a flash
To escape from all that noisy clash
The snow was glistening ever so bright
While the music filled the empty night
As we drew in our heads and were spinning around
We looked to the sky and spied
"Old Nick" fall to the ground
He filled our hands with treasures galore
And wishes us a "Merry Christmas" and many, many more!

'Twas the morning of Christmas

Twas the morning of Christmas
and all through the house,
The sound of joy and laughter was all around.
There was ohhing and ahhing
over Sister's toy mouse,
While Brother was thrilled with his G.I. Joe House.
The stockings were still filled with goodies galore,
While it was snowing outdoors!
But, wait, Santa h- d still brought more!
A lot more!
There were dollies and trains,
and trolleys and planes!
Candy canes and a doll named Molly!
There were Teddy Bears and a Book of Scares!
There was lots of excitement in the air!
But what to my wondering eyes should appear,
but the Easter Bunny in all her gear!
"What are you doing here?" yelled Sister in fear.
With a hippity-hop she came into sight,
Wearing an outfit that was rather bright!
She wore orange tights, and a shirt that was pink.
To top it off, a skirt that was red.
"Whoops, I'm a little mixed up!" she said.
Following behind her the eggs, they came,
She whistled and shouted,
And called them by name:
Now Dippy, now Kippy, now Tippy and Zippy!
On Curley, on Burley, on Early, and Turly!
To the top of the roof...
But they were very small!
Hop away, hop away, hop away all!

'Twas the day after Christmas

'Twas the day after Christmas and all through the house;
Everyone was bored including the mouse.
Wrapping paper was stashed here and everywhere;
In hopes that the cleaning lady soon would be there.
The kids were covered from head to foot;
With toys and goodies and ashes and soot.
Tree ornaments were scattered all over the floor;
The tree was a hazard, Oh where was the door?
With I in my bathrobe, and Pa still asleep;
Joy at her job, and Bob with his toy jeep,
Only I was left to clean up the mess.
When what to my wondering eyes should appear;
But my fairy godmother, and all her cleaning gear!
Away to her work she flew like a flash,
She burned all the paper, and cleaned all the floors,
Stacked every toy, and found all the doors.
She laughed and shouted and called out my name,
Then she yelled, "Oh what a great game!"
She jumped sprayed windex, and looked like a mess,
For what had happened I could only guess.
It was a dream, I wasn't insane,
For when I'd opened my eyes, t'was Christmas morning again!

T'was the Night Before Christmas

Twas the night before Christmas it was like no other;
not a creature was stirring, not even my brother.
The underwear was hung from the washer with care,
with hopes that mother would soon be there.
We were all in our own king size beds,
while visions of Ferrari's roared through our heads.
With Nate in his PJ's and I in the sack,
I had just gone to bed for a long restful nap.
All of a sudden I heard such a roar,
I saw St. Nick pull up at the door.
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter, away to the window I flew like a flash.
I forgot to stop and shattered the glass.
When I fell out the window I saw the new fallen snow.
I gave a holler when I saw the objects below.
When what to my wondering eyes should appear,
I landed on Santa's sleigh and his eight tiny reindeer.
With the little old driver called St. Nick,
he jumped out of his sleigh ever so quick.
Faster than an eagle he whistled and shouted and called them by name,
"Now on Dasher, on Dancer, on Prancer, on Comet, on Stupid, on Donner and Blitzen."
Now throw that fool to the top of the porch, to the top of the wall, now throw him hard against the wall.
With a long hard voice he said,
"No presents for you, only coal!"
So up to the house top in courses they flew, with our sleigh full of toys with St. Nick too.
"Merry Christmas," he said, then we said,
"and a Bah Hum Bug to you!"

by Brian Riley and Nate Caldwell

'Twas the day before Christmas

Twas the day before Christmas and all through the beach
The children were eating a plum and a peach.
The babies were dancing.
The mothers were prancing to a really neat beat in the Florida heat.
My mom had invited the people in our class.
They all brought $200 for the plane's boarding pass.
My friend said to me we must put on some lotion.
I thought to myself what a wonderful notion.
Something was flying by in the sky with eight tiny shells
That were jingling their bells.
It landed in the water which made a big splatter,
And I looked at the guy and said what was the matter.
I asked him to give me his name — he said, "Beach Bum Santa,"
Which I thought was insane. I said mine was Kate.
He asked, "Do you like this state?"
He had sweat pouring down his beet red face,
And toys tumbled out of his big red case.
He filled all the stockings hung across the Boardwalk
With his pocket watch ticking and tocking.
He looked kind of gay as he ran to his sleigh,
And with a flick of his wrist he was in the air
Before you could do the twist.
Now Dasher now Dancer now Prancer and Vixen,
On Comet, on Cupid, on Donder, and Blitzen.
He went off in a flash,
And we all had a Christmas bash.
So we had a great vacation at the South Seas Plantation.

Third Grade newspaper

Osgood School is in the process of publishing a newspaper. The reporters and editors for this edition are the third graders in Mrs. Alcott's class. They are working under the direction of Miss Bach, who is supervising the use of the computers. The computers are being utilized to edit and publish the newspaper. The students expect to have this first edition of Osgood news published by the end of December. The other third grade classes will be publishing their edition in the future.

Third Graders visit seniors

Mrs. Atkinson's third grade class joined the Senior Citizens for lunch on Tuesday December 12. The children brought thier own bag lunches but sat among the Seniors for conversation and companionship. The children had made beautiful red and green "Christmas Crackers" which when opened by each Senior contained a hand-made card, a bisque clay tree ornament and a miniature candy cane. After lunch they entertained with a short Christmas program. It was a wonderful event for the youngsters and the young-at-heart!

Artist of the month

This program was off to a great start as very special moms introduced the children to America's most famous artist, Mary Cassatt, our young artists blended pastels as they created an impressionistic picture of them with a special person since Mary Cassatt's favorite subject was Mother & Child. Many thanks to all of the parents that participated in the program and to the curriculum enrichment of the PSO that funds our program.

If you miss the Thursday show, it will repeat the following Monday from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Fifth Grade news

December 6, the fifth grade team visited Apogee Acoustics. This is a company that designs and manufactures state of the art speaker systems. While the fifth graders toured the company's facilities they saw how Apogee manufactured their products. The students were amazed that this company made all their products by hand.

After the tour of the factory the students were shown into a sound room that Apogee uses for demonstrations. While they were in the room the company's president demonstrated the sound of the speakers. It was amazing how real the sound from the speakers was.

After the tour was finished the students left the factory in a state of amazement.

CHS students, seniors get that holiday feeling

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The senior study hall at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School was chaotic one day last week. Clothes were piled on tables and chairs, toys were strewn everywhere, music was blasting, and no one was studying.

A handful of Cohasset's senior citizens were aiding and abetting the goings on. Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher walked in, surveyed the scene and commented, "It's a beautiful thing to see!"

If you think this means that today's high school students are mindless hooligans, guess again. The students in this study hall were busy sorting and wrapping donated toys and clothing for distribution to children who might not have a merry Christmas otherwise.

This was the most recent project of Community Volunteer Service-- or CVS-- and senior citizens from Seniors to Seniors. CVS encouraged students, faculty and staff, community people and local businesses to contribute toys, clothing, wrappings and ribbons to be given to Toys for Tots and Wellspring.

CVS had a serendipitous beginning.

Special needs teacher Gale Civale had been thinking that she would like to get her students involved in community projects. When she came back to school this fall, she was determined to put her idea into action.

Meanwhile, senior Robin Haynes had become involved in volunteerism through her C.C.D. class. Volunteering was such a good experience for her, that she wanted to spread the feeling around.

"I had this idea in mind that kids could have the opportunity to experience volunteering through the school system," said Robin.

Melissa Christoffel came back from a leadership conference also thinking about volunteerism.

"I got motivated," she said. "I thought I could change the world."

In one of those happy happenstances, Robin, Melissa, fellow student Bill Baird, and Mrs. Civale found each other. The rest, as they say, is history.

Students have discovered the group by word of mouth and by support from the administration and faculty at the school.

Melissa credits the teachers in the English department for spreading the word.

"English teachers have taken time to tell their classes about us," she said. The school also put on an assembly so the student body would know about the opportunities and rewards to be found through volunteer work.

"This is something we have wanted to see in our schools for some time," said Gallagher.

News about the work the group is doing is spreading beyond the high school corridors.

"We have the support of the community," said Robin.

Melissa chimed in, "The PSO . . . [has] been very, very supportive."

CVS is much like the Parent School Organization-- just attending Cohasset High makes you a part of it all. Some students attend meetings on a regular basis while others limit their participation to donating to projects such as the canned food drive or the Toys for Tots project.

The coordinators of CVS don't think small.

"I want to have 100 percent of the students participating," Robin said. But CVS doesn't want to do it the "easy" way by making volunteerism a requirement for graduation from the high school as other schools have done.

"You can't make it mandatory," says Melissa, "because then it's not voluntary. We want people to come in because they believe it's the right thing to do."

Kristin Jackson, the publicity coordinator for the group, thinks awareness is key to full participation.

"If the community knows, then they can get involved," she said. Kristin's goal is spread the news about the group's existence and activities.

The group tries to sponsor a different activity every month. So far, project have included the walk-a-thon for Meals on Wheels, a canned food drive that was co-sponsored by the Peace and Social Justice club, and this month's Christmas efforts.

The Seniors to Seniors project that matches high school seniors with senior citizens is coordinated with the local Council on Aging. Students who volunteer can limit themselves to doing chores and errands for an older person, while others have found real friendship through the program. The whole purpose of the program is to bridge the gap between the generations by building personal relationships.

Other student volunteers are working as tutors with special needs students at the high school or in the elementary schools.

Students get together weekly to discuss future projects. They encourage other kids to drop in and share their ideas.

"We run out of ideas after a while," said Melissa. CVS now has a suggestion box to gather ideas from students who may not have time to attend a meeting.

Some ideas on tap include an intergenerational Valentine's Day party and preparing a meal for the homeless people who rely on Boston's Pine Street Inn for their daily bread.

"A lot of people give during Christmas and the holidays," said Robin, "but people need help all year."

The group plans to maintain a close relationship with Wellspring, a food bank and community resource center in Hull, and hopes to do more with Carolina Hill, the long-term family shelter in Marshfield.

The Christmas project was truly a community-wide effort.

Woolworth's donated 72 boxes of crayons and the woodworking students made wooden crayon holders in animal shapes to hold them. Seniors devoted their study hall time to assembling jigsaw puzzles to make sure that no pieces were missing and then put them back in their boxes.

As Civale put it, "We have fun!"

Robin began to say, "We tell volunteers, if you're not having a good time doing this, then we're not . . ." when she was interrupted by a student volunteer with a handful of tiny trucks with Disney characters in the driver's seats.

"These things are a riot!" said Andreya Cann.

Dr. Alwin A. Merrill, coordinator of the seniors program from the Council on Aging end of the partnership, was busy wrapping and tying gifts with self-described old-timers Laurence Fone and Louis Simeone.

Dr. Merrill was enthusiastic about the program.

"How nice it is,the spirit of it all . . . the kidding and playing," he said. "It's nice to become involved."

Despite all the giggling and foolishness going on, the reality that drove the project was present in the minds and hearts of the volunteers.

"I keep thinking about the children who will be receiving these gifts," said Dr. Merrill at one point.

Robin summed up the spirit that motivates CVS, "We're so lucky to have what we have."

Recycling news...

This week's Recycling News was written by Jennifer Longley.

An estimated one million pounds of plastic are thrown into the world's oceans every day. Most of it is still there. Ocean plastic pollution kills an estimated one million sea birds, 100,000 sea mammals, and countless fish and other animals each year. Beach trash collected in annual nationwide and statewide beach clean-ups is 75 percent plastic. Plastic accounts for roughly 28 percent of the solid waste stream by volume, and 8 percent by weight. Where does all this plastic come from? Basically it comes from you and me, the consumers who support the manufacture of plastic products and packaging. While there are many beneficial uses for plastic (water safety, medical devices, food safety), the majority of plastic products and packaging have a satisfactory, biodegradable alternative with fewer, if any, damaging effects on the environment and public health. The dangers of plastic are not just to wildlife.

What are the other dangers? Both the production and incineration of plastic produce hazardous, and sometimes, carcinogenic chemicals, as is the case with Dioxin, a highly carcinogenic chemical released when plastic is burned. Of the EPA's list of the 20 chemicals whose production generates the most hazardous waste, 5 of the top 6 are chemicals commonly used in the manufacture of plastic. The production of polystryrene (Styrofoam) uses, and releases, Chloroflourocarbons (CFCs) which have been found to damage the earth's protective Ozone layer. Reducing the amount of plastic in the waste stream will, of course, reduce the amount incinerated.

Another potential danger from plastic is the emergence of so-called "plastic dust." Plastic labelled "biodegradable" or "degradable" is now out on the market. Not only are these plastics not biodegradable in landfills, they are not biodegradable period. All of the processes by which plastics are currently being made to degrade' are essentially a matrix of a biodegradable substance, usually corn starch, and regular plastic. The ratio is roughly 4 percent corn starch and 96 percent plastic. Thus, after the product degrades, if it does, most of the plastic is left behind in the form of plastic dust. We don't yet know the environmental fate of plastic dust, how it interacts, or doesn't with the ecosystem. We are creating a whole new pollutant. Biodegradable means that a material can be reintroduced into the ecosystem as a useful and compatible nutrient, usually through microbial action. Breaking plastic down into tiny pieces does not make it biodegradable.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

We are increasing our use of plastic by about 8 percent annually. Source reduction is an important part of reducing plastic's environmental impacts, but, given that plastic, as we know it, is probably here to stay for a while, we need to promote its recycling. Massachusetts currently recycles only about 1-2 percent of our plastic and that is due to the bottle bill. But, we need to look at the question of whether we are encouraging the use of plastics by recycling. For example, the Cohasset schools are now recycling polystyrene lunch trays. Lunch trays can be cardboard or permanent plastic. Are we perpetuating the throw-away attitude and unnecessary use of plastic by encouraging our students to use polystyrene? Plastics Again in Leominster which recycles the polystyrene currently recycles about one million pounds of it each year. Massachusetts currently uses about 27 million pounds of polystyrene each year. Is that a sufficient ratio to justify encouraging the use of polystyrene and thus supporting its increased production? There are some inherent conflicts in promoting both recycling and source reduction that need to be addressed.

CHRISTMAS OUTREACH

This Sunday there will be a Christmas stocking hung in the vestibule to receive cash donations for our current Homeshare family. The Homeshare program requires that one third of the client's allotment be saved to secure the necessary capital for security deposits in their search for more permanent housing. There is a special concern at this time of year that the needs of young children be met also. For this reason we are trying to offer assistance, to reduce some of the pressure of the season.

Your help will be greatly appreciated.

Handmade doll to be raffled this week

She's about three feet high, with bright orange hair and big black eyes, and she's sitting at the Stop and Shop, waiting for someone to take her home.

Raggedy Ann isn't exactly lost, but she hasn't yet found a home. Chances are, she'll be under someone's Christmas tree by this weekend.

The doll is part of a fundraiser for the Cohasset Council on Aging. She was handcrafted by Regina Dunlap of Beechwood Street, and is now on display at the Stop and Shop.

It took Dunlap about three days to make the 36-inch doll that wears a child's size two dress.

Raggedy Ann is dressed in a blue calico dress with a white apron. Her hair is made of tangerine yarn, and each strand is individually sewn into the material. Her eyes are black felt, and her mouth is embroidered. There are no removable parts, so she is a perfect doll for small children, her creator noted.

Raggedy Ann has candy-cane cotton stockings, and black felt shoes. And her heart is embroidered with "I Love You."

The entire doll is stuffed with polyfill, not sawdust like most commercially-manufactured dolls. Therefore, Dunlap said, this doll will not attract dust and will be perfect for children with allergies.

Dunlap, who volunteers at the senior center office twice a week, said the same doll would cost $80 in a store. She has made about 20 dolls and thought it would be a good holiday season fundraiser for the Council on Aging.

"I asked Kathy (Bryanton, the senior center director) if she could use a way to make some money for the center.

"I think it's great here. I take a lot of the arts and crafts," she said. "I was always active, and this is much better than staying at home and doing nothing."

Raffle tickets for the Raggedy Ann doll are selling fast, according to senior center director Kathy Bryanton. The drawing will take place at 3 p.m. Friday, Dec. 22.

Tickets, which are $1 each, or six for $5, will be sold at Stop and Shop on Rte. 3A, and at the senior center, 3 North Main St., until the time of the drawing.

Regina Dunlap holds the Raggedy Ann doll that took her three days to create. The 36-inch doll is being raffled by the Council on Aging. Raffle tickets are available until tomorrow at the Super Stop and Shop or at the senior center, 3 N. Main St.

Cohasset housing put aside

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset side of the Crystal Woods development was put on ice this month when developer Jack Hurley learned that the soil would only support septic systems for 35 of the planned 60 townhouses.

Crystal Woods was to have straddled the Cohasset-Scituate border off Rte. 3A and would have contained 21 affordable housing units following restrictions imposed by the zoning board of appeals. Hurley intends to go forward with the 32 units planned for the Scituate side, of which twelve are reserved as affordable units.

The developer got the bad news back in September when the hydrogeological testing was originally done. Both towns had required the testing as a condition for receipt of a comprehensive building permit. Hurley had the report examined thoroughly by two engineering firms, hoping to find some way to continue with the project.

When the original findings were confirmed, Hurley opted to develop only the Scituate land.

When asked why he didn't spread the development between the two communities, he replied that it would not be cost-effective.

The only remaining hurdle in Scituate is getting a comprehensive permit from the zoning board of appeals. The hearing is slated for January. Hurley does not anticipate any problems.

"We've cleared up all the issues," he said. "There's nothing else out there that can shoot down our project."

Mary O'Connor, chairman of Scituate's fair housing committee, said, "We'll be supporting the changes. It doesn't represent any substantial changes for Scituate."

She did say that the Conservation Commission had some lingering questions about drainage on the property, "but that doesn't concern us, that's their bailiwick."

Hurley said that all the financing for the project was in place, primarily because of the units of affordable housing.

"Banks are always nervous, but they're only looking at affordable housing," said Hurley. "If this were a straight condominium development, the banks wouldn't be too interested."

Construction is slated to begin in the spring of 1990. Hurley anticipates the units will be ready six months or so after the groundbreaking.

"Hopefully around this time next year, we hope to be well on our way," he said.

With the Cohasset portion of Crystal Woods out of action, affordable housing has a bleak future in Cohasset according to the chairman of the housing partnership committee, Chartis Langmaid.

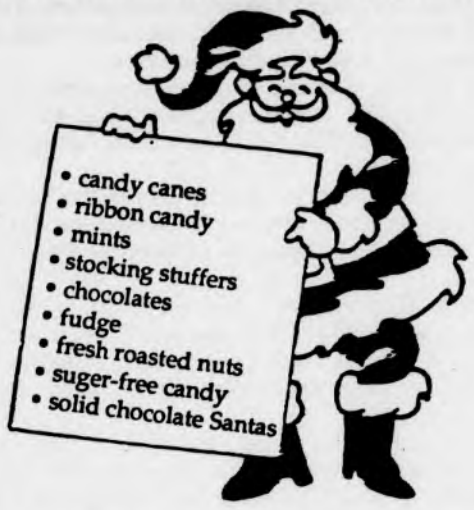
"I'm really sorry that Cohasset has no opportunity on the horizon to do any affordable housing," she said. "The project had a great deal of merit and filled a very real need."

While the asking price for the market rate units may hit $200,000, the affordable units will sell for $75,000 for a 2-bedroom unit and $85,000 for the 3-bedroom.

According to Langmaid, these prices mean that families must have an income in the high $20's to $40,000 to qualify. This is the income range for police officers, librarians, teachers, and a number of town employees, she said. She pointed out that some town employees may not earn enough to qualify for affordable housing unless there is a second wage-earner in the family.

Although Hurley said his main objective right now is to subdivide the Cohasset land and proceed with the Scituate development, he still has plans for developing the Cohasset land.

"Eventually we'll be there," he said recently. "I just don't know when."



Hurley said that he would need to find "an alternative method of sewerage, probably hooking up to town sewers if ever built."

That is an unlikely development according to Alfred S. Moore, Jr., chairman of Cohasset's planning board.

"We'll all probably be very elderly before we see a sewer system [in Cohasset]," said Moore. He believes that Crystal Woods in Cohasset should be permanently mothballed.

"It was a bad site regardless of whether it was for affordable housing or otherwise," said Moore.

Council on Aging honors local volunteers

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

More than 100 local volunteers were honored last week by the Council on Aging for their assistance to Cohasset's 1,440 elderly residents.

At the fourth annual holiday luncheon held at Kimball's By The Sea restaurant, the volunteers were congratulated by the Council on Aging officers and town officials.

Senior center director Kathy Bryanton estimated that volunteers save the town more than $100,000 in their donation of time and effort to the Council on Aging.

As Council president Gerard Keating told the volunteers last Friday, "you are worth your weight in gold." In honor of their work, each volunteer was presented with a commemorative gold address book.

Keating said he and Bryanton previously discussed what they would say to the Council volunteers. It was Bryanton who suggested that a banner should be hung across the room, stating, "Without you, we would not be able to provide the services for our senior citizens."

He noted, "You keep making us look better every day."

Keating said the financial difficulties within the town can be traced back to the federal government which decided a few years ago to stop federal revenue sharing. That halt to federal monies has now affected cities and towns across the state.

The Council president said they would be presenting a level-funded budget to the advisory committee for next year. "We will take our licks, but we're not going to cry about it. We will have to try and get money by some other means," he said. "If we have a tight budget, it's just like at home. Either you curtail some activities or you find the money somewhere else."

The Council does not plan to curtail any activities, Keating said, so they will begin looking for other funding sources.

One of those sources is going on now, he explained, with the townwide raffle for a Christmas Raggedy Ann doll. All proceeds from the raffle will go toward Council on Aging programs. The raffle is just the beginning of a number of fundraisers to be sponsored by the Council in the coming year, he said.

Keating also noted that on June 30, 1990, the Council is scheduled to lose its outreach worker, Sue Connolly. Keating called this program "wonderful" and explained that Connolly has managed to reach many elderly residents who never before used Council on Aging services and programs.

Keating noted that residents must vote their conscious at town meeting time, but he urged all residents "to cut where you have to cut, but use common sense. Protect those who can't speak for themselves."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby told the residents the work they perform for the community "is from the heart. And we all appreciate it."

Several of the Council on Aging program coordinators talked about the continued need for community volunteers. Doris McNulty, coordinator of the FISH program which provides transportation for seniors in need of medical care, said, "It is an easy job, and one that is really appreciated.

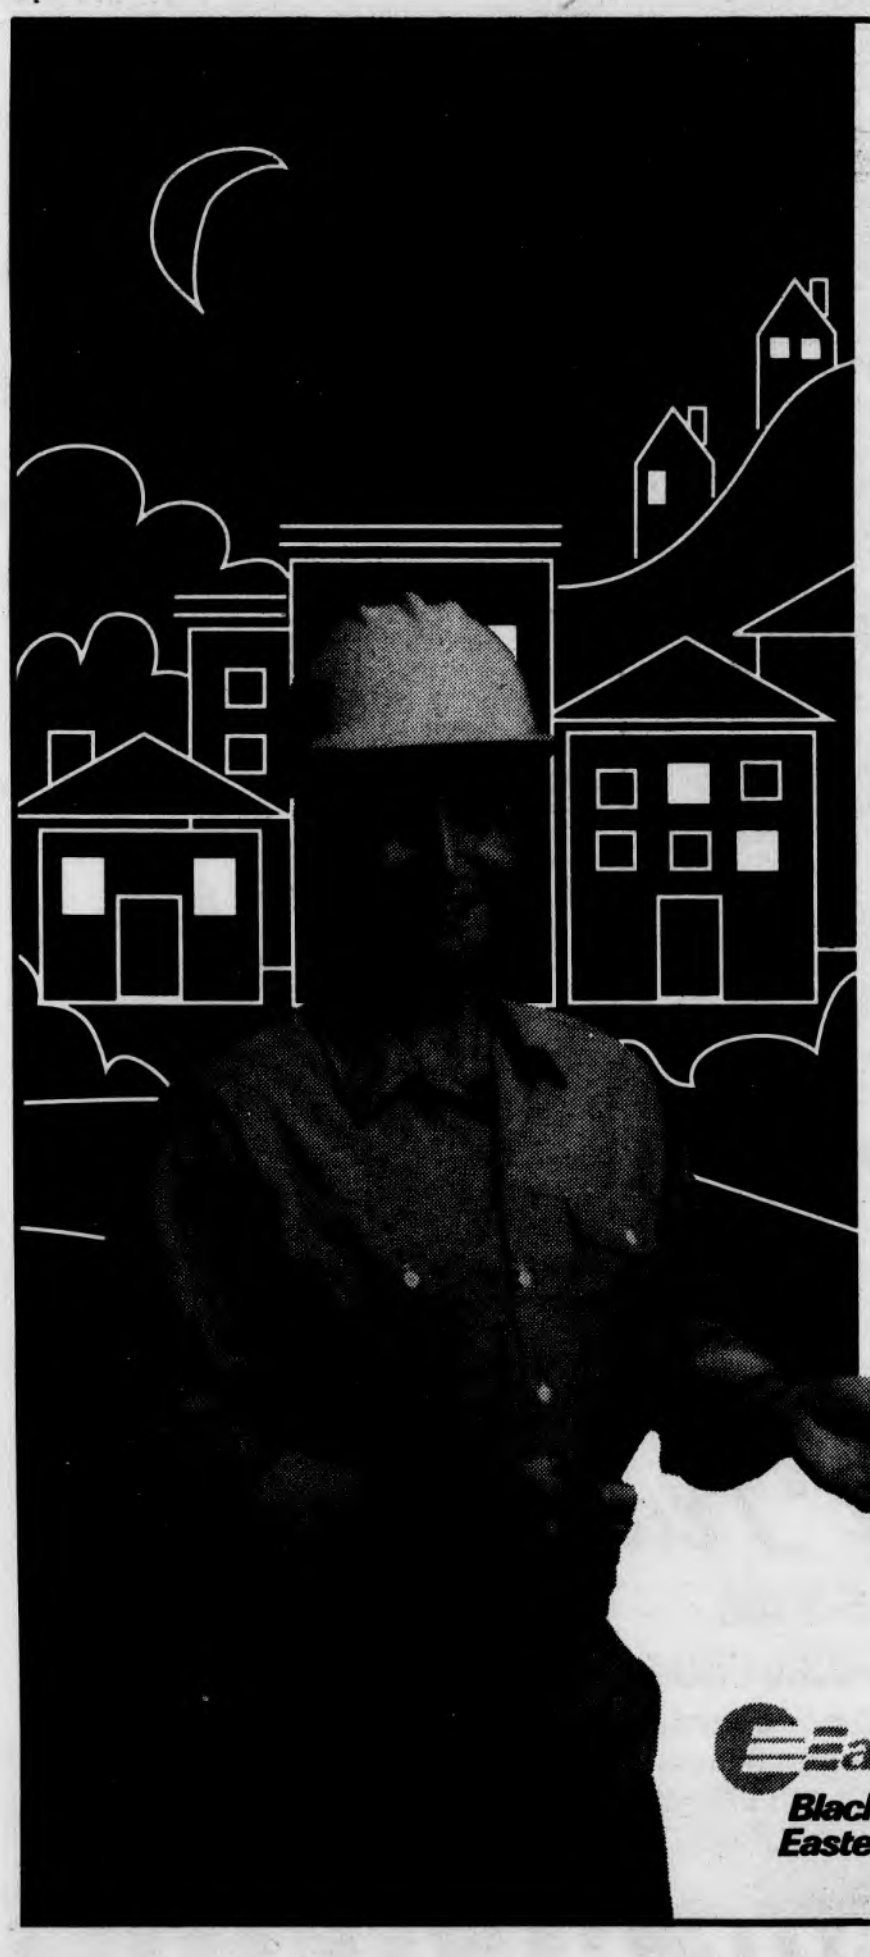
"But spread the word that we can always use drivers. Sometimes, we have too many calls to handle."

Bryanton noted the success of the SHINE program, which provides health insurance information and assistance to senior residents. Patricia Ryan is the coordinator of the program servicing the South Shore, and has several trained counselors in place at many senior centers in the area.

Since the beginning of this year, SHINE has served 300 people in this town, or about two or three residents each week. One resident, Bryanton explained, saved over $2,000 in insurance costs after she was assisted by a SHINE volunteer.

Volunteer counselor Joe Buckley is at the senior center every Thursday to help with any insurance problem or question, she said.

Bryanton called the outreach program, "a bonding program where people see themselves as much more productive." The counselor contacts frail, elderly seniors and provides them with information and assistance.



The Men's Breakfast Club is a new program which began several months ago by resident Win Merrill. Twice a month, several men in the community drive to a designated restaurant for breakfast and conversation. During the summer, they are often guests at Merrill's pool, Keating joked, and during the winter, "we get to go into his house."

A new gourmet cooking program began this fall under the direction of Anna Abbruzzese. They meet twice a month to prepare and enjoy a gourmet meal. Bryanton noted there are more men than women currently participating in the program.

She praised the continued effort of Ray Remick, coordinator of the all-volunteer senior shuttle program.

Bryanton concluded by noting, "We succeed not because we're the Council on Aging, but because of the volunteers and the wonderful people you are."

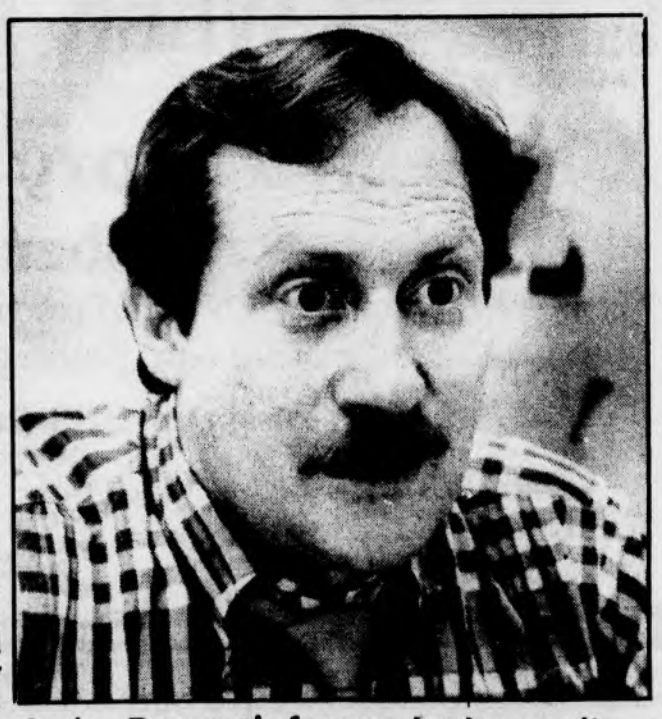
Vol. XII, No. 14 | Thursday, December 28, 1989 | 60 cents



The faces and places of 1989

The 1989 varsity football squad played their last game Thanksgiving weekend against the traditional rivals from Hull. The tradition ended with last month's game. Because of a decreasing number of students in the high school, Cohasset will not field a varsity team next year.

(Above) Willie McCarthy and Christine Daniels were ready and waiting for the completion of the Osgood Playpark last June. Hundreds of anxious children and their parents joined the opening day ceremony which marked the first day of play at the new Osgood School playground.
(Right) Further down Sohier Street, Cohasset High School named a new varsity basketball coach in 1989. Arnie Reppucci, former junior varsity coach, was named to the head position in January.

Cohasset's week

Traffic problems at mall

The planning board will ask for assistance from selectmen in its efforts to reopen a second traffic access to Jonathan Livingston Square.

Board members will write a letter to selectmen asking them to support this proposal. Selectmen, in turn, would then ask the state Department of Public Works for a curb cut to reopen a southern access to the shopping center on Rte. 3A.

That may be a problem because the property owner abandoned the curb cut after the planning board originally requested it, and the state may be reluctant to re-issue it.

The planning board originally asked property owner Thomas Cummings to close the south access after he proposed adding five stores to the shopping center. At that time, the board members were worried that people would use the entrance as an exit, and they decided a single entrance/exit would be less confusing.

Traffic engineer Bill Carlson was hired by Cummings to look at the problem. He suggested to the planning board last week that the south access be reopened for northbound traffic only. He said the entrance could be narrowed so drivers would hesitate using it as an exit.

Cummings told the board that he will paint double yellow lines to separate the lanes at the north access.

Where's the VFW to go?

No one seems to want the old former North Cohasset fire station at West Corner. The building was offered to the Cohasset VFW Post, but because the building is not sewered, Post officials nixed the offer.

"(Lack of) the sewer was the straw that broke the camel's back," Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said last week.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested that a holding tank could be installed at the property and pumped out as necessary by the Post.

Selectmen suggested that the Post could also consider moving the building onto another property. Selectman Pratt was scheduled to meet with VFW officials to discuss the matter.

Town meeting warrant open

The warrant for the April 7 town meeting will be opened for the submission of articles on January 2, 1990.

The warrant will be closed on January 16 for those articles sponsored by town boards and committees.

Selectmen decided to keep the warrant open for articles sponsored by residents until February 17.

The warrant for the special town meeting which will be held the same day as the annual meeting, will be open January 8 and will be closed for all articles by 4:30 p.m. on January 16.

Will there be an override?

Two weeks ago, selectmen refused to state with certainty that an override election must be held this spring. Instead, they informally decided that should an override election become necessary, it will be held the same day as the annual town election, April 14.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon recommended that selectmen confirm the need for an override election, noting that town officials are now "99 percent certain that there will be some form of override proposal" before the town. The advisory committee, he said, has recommended that an override election be held the same day as the annual town election.

Selectmen previously discussed the probability of having town meeting review all non-financial articles on April 7, and postpone any action on the money articles until after the April 14 election.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby questioned whether they should vote on scheduling a date for an override election, when it is not known for certain whether an override will be necessary. "The advisory committee has requested level-funded budgets," she stated.

Selectmen decided to informally endorse a recommendation stating that if an override election is needed, it will be scheduled the same day as the annual election.

Housing authority assured of project financing

The Cohasset Housing Authority has been assured by the state that 12 units of affordable family housing will be constructed on schedule.

The housing authority was informed several months ago by the state Office of Communities and Development that $1.4 million was available for the construction of six duplexes in Cohasset.

The authority recently received word from EOCD that the money is still available, and that architects can now proceed with the final design of the project.

According to chairman John Muncey, if those plans continue on schedule, construction may begin as early as next spring. The housing will be located on nine acres of land situated behind the Super Stop and Shop, with access from Rte. 3A.

That property was once controlled by the school department, but it was declared surplus by the school committee after the housing authority requested the parcel. Last spring, town meeting approved a request to transfer the land to the housing authority for the construction of the affordable housing.

Muncey believes each housing unit will contain three bedrooms, although that has not yet been specified.

The housing authority spent more than a year tracking down suitable town-owned land on which affordable housing could be located. A consultant was hired to identify the best location, and the process began last spring to obtain the property for the housing authority.

Since that time, the artchitectural firm of Rojas/Voight was hired to prepare conceptual plans for the project. Those plans have since been approved by the state. The housing authority expects that the architect will soon get the go-ahead from the state to begin the final drawings.

Muncey is not as confident about the funding possibilities for another housing project sponsored by the housing authority.

The proposed Chapter 689 housing for mentally retarded adults has been approved by the state, although it is not known at this time whether there is sufficient money to construct the project.

According to Muncey, EOCD has approved plans to construct housing for eight mentally retarded adults behind an Elm Street home formerly owned by the Trettis family. The main home, now owned by the housing authority, will be renovated into congregate housing for the frail elderly, Muncey explained.

Plans call for the construction of another building in the rear of the existing home. That structure will be used to house eight mentally retarded adults and round-the-clock caretakers.

The financing for that project is more precarious, Muncey noted, because the money has to come from a different agency. Although the EOCD must approve the plans, it will be funded through the state office of Human Services. "We're not sure at this point whether Human Services actually has the money to build the home," he said.

EOCD bought the Trettis property more than a year ago for $300,000, so the local housing authority now owns the entire property. Although the state has approved the project and expects to have the money available, Muncey is not sure when it will appear.

"We're just waiting to hear from the state on this one," he said this week. "I'm not sure what kind of money they're going to have."

Cristina Sadler, 4, and her friend, Kristen Watts, 3, look through a collection of Christmas stickers during last week's Breakfast with Santa at the community center.

New deadline for stickers

The board of health has extended the deadline for residents to obtain their 1990 transfer station user permits.

Originally, the deadline for purchasing the $52 sticker was set at January 1, 1990. But because there was a lapse of time during which the stickers were not sold this month, the board decided to extend the deadline.

Residents who intend to purchase the permits must do so by January 15. They are available during the week at the board of health office at town hall.

The Barn welcomes shoppers

If the stunning new sign adjacent to the Green Gage Plum on Rte. 3A caught your eye and you were wondering what was going in the old barn on the hillside, you can check it out now.

The Barn at Bound Brook opened its doors recently. Manager Katie Thornton described the gift shop as offering "an eclectic assortment of beautiful and practical things." Items range from crystal and blown glass to toys to Adirondack chairs.

Thornton invites serious shoppers and browsers to stop in and sample the coffee-of-the-month and warm up by the hearth.

CHS students observe African celebration

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

As December dwindles away, Christmas trees and Chanukah menorahs aren't the only symbols casting light into our lives. Many neighbors who can claim an African heritage are celebrating Kwanzaa.

Kwanzaa is a holiday of rather recent origin. Dr. Maulana Karenga developed the rituals and symbols in 1966 as a way for Black people to remember and celebrate the culture, heritage, and history. The holiday begins Dec. 26 and continues until Jan. 1.

Before Cohasset's Osgood School children left for vacation, they were able to learn about and share in a Kwanzaa celebration thanks to METCO coordinator Patricia Brown and librarian Charlene Williams.

Brown, in traditional African garb, emphasized that although the customs and language are African in origin, the holiday can be shared by everyone.

The roots of Kwanzaa are in African harvest festivals. The word, kwanzaa, is Swahili for "first fruits" and one of the central features is a feast, much like Thanksgiving.

The Kwanzaa "table" that Brown and Williams laid out in the basement library contained all the important symbols of the holiday.

The table was covered with a brightly colored cloth from Africa. On the cloth was a straw mat representing the foundation. Sitting on top of the mat was a candle holder with places for seven candles-- one for each principle of the holiday.

Although the candle holder can be made of any material, Brown's is a wooden triangle with a cut out of Africa in the center.

"That is to remind us of where we began and to remind us of our heritage," she told the children.

Three of the candles are red, to represent the blood of the people, one candle is black like the people it celebrates, and the remaining candles are green. Green is the color for the land, for youth and for prosperity.

Youth are also represented by ears of corn. A family decorates their table with an ear of corn representing each child in the family.

"A family with no children would use one ear of corn to represent hope for children," said Brown.

As Brown held up a statue of a man and a woman holding hands, she told the children, "This shows unity-- umoja--, the first principle."

The table also contained straw baskets of fruit and goodies that would be brought to the communal table to share.

"You bring a gift you grew or made or a gift of love," said Brown. "When you make a Kwanzaa gift it shows that you were really thinking about that person."

Equally treasured are the gifts of kindness and concern, Brown told the children. These would include things like running errands for an elderly person or helping out with the babies.

The most important thing is not the food and gifts, but the lessons to be drawn from the seven principles. A candle is lit for each one.

In Swahili, the seven principles are called Nguzo Saba or the Seven Principles of Nation Building.

Individually, they are:

- Umoja-- unity in the family, community, nation, and race;
- Kujichagulia-- self-determination to feed, clothe, house, and defend ourselves;
- Ujima-- collective work and responsibility;
- Ujamaa-- cooperative economics or sharing;
- Nia-- purpose;
- Kuumba-- creativity to leave the community more beautiful and a better place to live for the next generation; and
- Imani-- faith in our selves, our parents, our teachers, our leaders, and the people.

Each class that entered the library was able to enter into the spirit of Kwanzaa with a mini-feast of juice, fruit, and cookies before they left for their own holiday celebrations. For Patricia Brown, it was yet another way of bridging communities and heritages-- and sharing the treasures they hold.

METCO cordinator Patricia Brown leads a special Kwanza celebration at Cohasset High School last week. Joining in the celebration were: (l to r) Kevin Andrews, Marcina Boone, David Trowers, Jessica Hardwick, Mark Selden, Courtney Allen, and Sheree Morgan.

Chiropractic for Health

BREAKING THE CYCLE

Many adults suffer from recurring headaches that limit everyday activity. The sources of this pain are thought to be emotional stress, physical trauma, or even hormonal imbalances. Now, a study done at the State University of New York at Albany pinpoints another possible cause for chronic headaches. The study noted the progress of twenty-one chronic headache sufferers who derived initial relief from their condition through relaxation therapy or biofeedback. Researchers found that the majority of these patients had not experienced headaches up to five years after utilizing these drug-free forms of therapy. The surprising part of the research was that not one patient had kept up with his at-home treatments. This led researchers to speculate that the initial relaxation therapy had broken a "headache cycle" that seemed to feed on itself.

SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC would like to wish all its patients and friends the warmest of Season's Greetings and best wishes for the coming New Year. We thank you for the opportunity to have been of service to you this past year and look forward to offering the same fine service and assistance to your chiropractic needs in the year ahead. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Worker's Comp. cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.

HINT: Researchers note that headaches themselves may be responsible for the stress that brings on another headache.

Water color at the art center

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, is sponsoring watercolor workshops, demonstrations and courses.

Watercolor Workshop taught by Edward Minchin, will meet for three days, Tuesday through Thursday, January 16 to 18 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Through Minchin's planned approach to watercolor, students learn to focus on spontaneous, confident paintings; and learn to break "painter's block" to return to original inspiration.

For the advanced watercolorist, Draw And Paint In Watercolor taught by Mary Lizotte will meet for eight weeks on Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. beginning January 4, 1990. This course is designed to sharpen the eye, engergize your work and tune into your intuition with emphasis on growth, work and enjoyment! The class is spent quick drawing using still life with a longer-timed painting.

For those who prefer to watch rather than participate, Murray Wentworth, an area artist and teacher at the South Shore Art Center, will conduct a Watercolor Landscape Demonstration Sunday, Jan. 14, 1990 at 2:30 p.m. Murray will demonstrate his distinctive style of painting on smooth illustration board, and lead us step-by-step through the creative process to a finished painting. The completed landscape will be raffled off at the end of the demonstration.

Registration is required for all courses, workshops and demonstrations. For more information, or to register or to receive a complete course brochure, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548.

Historical society selling gifts

The Cohasset Historical Society is continuing to offer several unique items at several shops and stores in the town.

Of interest to the serious scholar of local history and to the more casual reader alike are the two volumes of the town's history, both now available from the Historical Society. The Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, by Rev. E.V. Bigelow., first issued in 1898 with volume 1 reprinted recently, and its mid-1950's update volume 2 written by Burtram Pratt, are the definitive histories of the town.

Rev. Bigelow's ground-breaking 1898 Narrative History details the origin and early history of this small New England seacoast village.

Carrying on from there to the time of its publication in the middle years of the present century, Pratt's Narrative History Volume 2 tells the story of Cohasset during the time of its development into a modern 20th century suburban community. Both books together provide a look at the three and one half centuries of Cohasset's own history.

Also still available in the Society's 1990 wall calendar titled "Cohasset's Shores and Harbor, Then and Now." This unusual calendar features illustrations taken from the Society's own archives of old photographs, juxtaposed with modern views of the same historical sites. The calendar provides a glimpse of Cohasset's maritime past with rare views of the town's shoreline and harbor as they appeared a century or more ago.

Also from the Historical Society is a paperback reprint of the book Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains by E. Pomeroy Collier; short biographies of many of the town's 19th century Shipmasters.

A Senior Living Community based on Hospitality

The Duxbury Distinction

Great Hospitality. The Village at Duxbury has a number of distinctive factors like our wonderful location on the South Shore and sponsor/owners with 40 years of experience in senior housing and healthcare. ❑ Brian P. Pompeo, son of Arthur M. and Nancy L. Pompeo, received a letter in varsity soccer from Belmont Hill School.

Penny O'Brien of Hunneman & Company, Realtors/Better Homes and Gardens Cohasset office was recently recognized for the record-setting pace her brokerage activity has been running at this year.

"To rank in the top 5 percent of all the agents at Hunneman is especially noteworthy when you take into consideration that many of the markets served by Hunneman's 32 offices and 450 agents are in much larger communities where there are many more real estate transactions occurring" pointed out Hunneman's Cohasset manager Judy Parsons.

Penny's personal achievement with sales well over $3,000,000 bucks trends which reflect a generally slowing real estate market.

"What is amazing is that not only are Penny and Janice Crowley in our Cohasset office having an outstanding year in the midst of a so called down market, but so too are others in our Cohasset office" Cohen remarked. "At our last company meeting Cohasset had as many awards for production as many of our larger Hunneman offices" he added.

Manager Parsons agreed, "Helen Pratt, Laurajean McDonald, Martha Freeman and Claire Watts along with Penny and Janice were all singled out for special recognition recently," she said.

❑ Cynthia S. James, R.N., a resident of Cohasset, recently was awarded a Certificate of Study from Boston Univeristy School of Public Helath (BUSPH). Cynthia received the certificate upon completing the Executive Nursing Program for Long Term Care. The 10-week comprehensive program was sponsored by BUSPH's Health Services Section to prepare nursing professionals to become directors of nursing in long-term care facilities.

❑ Rob Davenport of Cohasset was named Most Valuable Player from the freshman class) for the Ripon College 1989 football team.

❑ Eight members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club got into the holiday spirit in a wonderful way this year, they attended a Holiday Musical put on by Darling Productions. Molly Hochkeppel and George Stevens are the ones in charge of Darling Productions and they put on three productions a year. The musical was held at the Masonic Temple, and all that attended loved it; they said it was extremely professional and so entertaining! If you would like a further review, next time you see the Meisners, the Kelleys, the Armins, the Donovans, or the Ivens ask them for all of the details! They said it was a swell job and memorable so they will fill you in on everything.

❑ All of Sean McCarthy's hard work sure paid off this year, he made the all-Scholastic Team for the Quincy Patriot Ledger in football! He has what it takes, and he works hard to give even more; we're pleased and proud of him! We're not positive about this stat, but 99 percent sure Sean making the team makes the first father and son to both make the team! Sean's dad, Pat, made the squad in the early sixties, and now Sean this year. That's really something! Congratulations, Sean.

❑ St. Anthony's has a super 9th grade confirmation class, let me tell you the most recent thing that they accomplished. They decided to organize a drive for clothing and toys for needy children and got busy! Their first thing to do was to get up on the altar and tell of their project, and ask for the goods that were needed (Not easy at any age much less in the ninth grade!) and after that they were off ...with the work they did and the things that they received, two hundred kiddos received 800 gifts on Christmas Day this year! Imagine sorting and readying all of that, you folks should be so proud of your efforts! That's the spirit that everyone talks about.

❑ While on the subject of Christmas and how people help others, Liam Stanford should come right into your mind! Liam is usually associated with sports, the fact that he was an outstanding wrestler and an assistant coach in football is known by most. When you read this story Liam will come to your mind often, we guarantee it! The Deer Hill School teachers asked their students to do something new this year; instead of bringing them gifts, they asked the students to bring toys for tots for the Head Start project in Plymouth. The day before they were scheduled to bring the gifts, people were a little nervous there weren't an awful lot. Thursday morning at 8:30, along with members of the JV football team, Liam arrived with two cars full of toys and off they went with Linda Starmer to deliver them to Plymouth. Liam and those boys truly saved the day and made so many youngsters happy in the process! Sure does make one believe in Santa Claus, he was there in the body and spirit of Liam and his boys ...we think you are grand, and we give you a standing ovation for your efforts!

❑ Don't miss the Window Painting at 3 South Main Street in the Village. The winter scene was designed and painted for the Christmas Season by the members of the Art II Class at CHS under the able direction of Ms. Colleen Lucas. The artists were Liana Adams, Juliana Chittick, Dave Cullinane, Richard Coates, Jill Hamilton, Nora McCarthy, Hilary Puroodian, and Michele Rourke. Well done, class!

❑ We hope that Herm Fictner is up and about after his recent illness. A wonderful guy, full of vim and vigor, he will undoubtedly be back to himself in record time!

❑ The season certainly had a sad side to it this year and our town won't be the same again, we are sure. As most of you know, Phil Murray passed away last week. Mere words could never express what a kind, funny, compassionate, loving honorable man he was. To know Phil was to love him, his ready smile and patient nature to be remembered forever. The numerous things he did, both for family and our town, are too numerous to mention ...he was an outstanding friend, father, husband and human being. No one that knew Phil will ever forget him, and our hearts and thoughts are with Mary Jeanette and their children, both at this tme and always.

❑ That is the news from here, please don't forget to let us in on yours! Santa brought an answering machine to our house this year, so there is no excuse for not calling! Just please give me time to figure it out ...

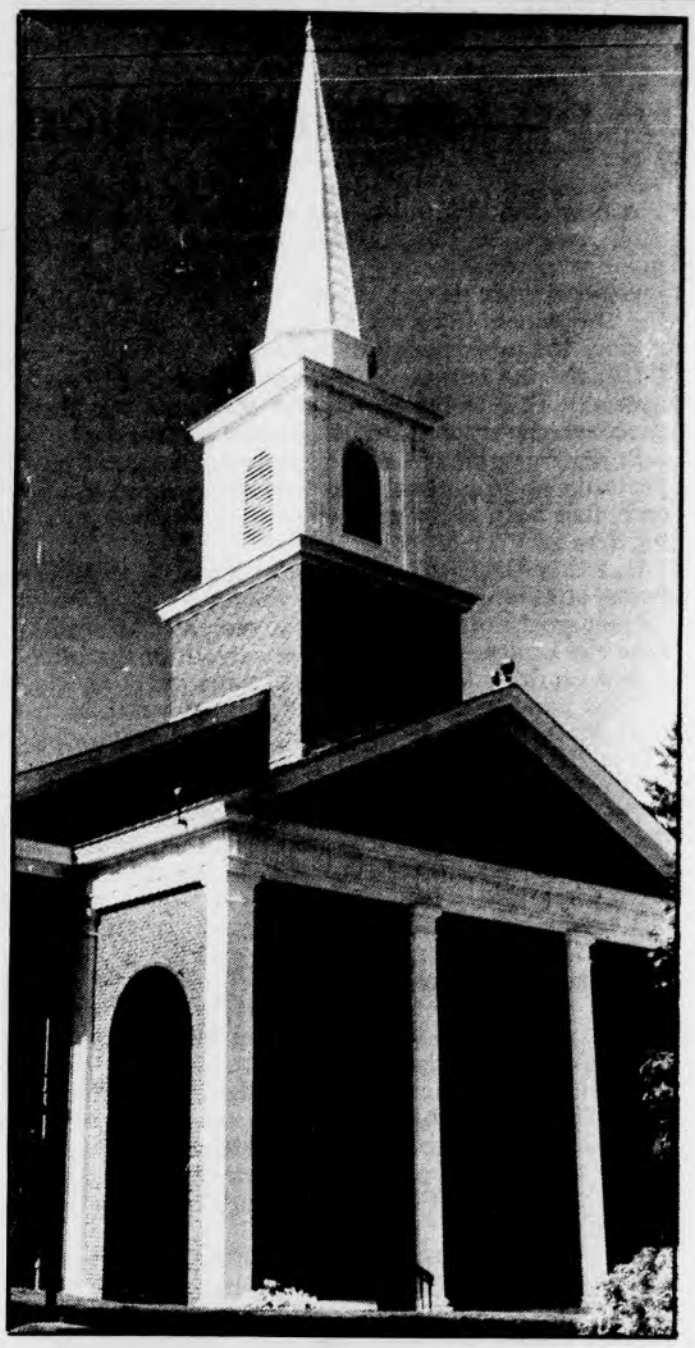
A look at our town in '89

Musicians David Crosby and Graham Nash performed to a standing-room only crowd at the South Shore Music Circus last September. Proceeds from a portion of the ticket sales were set aside for the Cohasset school sports program.

It was on-again, off-again for selectman candidate Richard Barrow. A Cohasset police sergeant, Barrow ran for public office, although he warned by selectmen to take a leave of absence during the campaign. Barrow, who intends to retire this year from the police department, was defeated in the April election.

And this is how St. Anthony's appeared in 1886 after extensive renovations were completed to the building on South Main Street. The original chapel was built in 1875.

The PSO worked hard to convince the voters of Cohasset that an override of Proposition 2 1/2 was vital to the continuing quality of the local schools. The voters agreed, at least in part, and they approved a compromise override of $203,800 in the June special election.



Cohasset selectman Ned Tebbetts, and his wife, Priscilla, show the trinkets they accumulated last June during a tour of China. Their long-awaited journey through the Communist country coincided with the student revolution and ultimately, with the massacre at Tiananmen Square.

A profound resolution

A new year, indeed a new decade, is only three days away. So think quick, because it's time to make your resolutions.

Good decade though it was, it is time now to put the 1980s behind us and chart a course for the '90s and for the new millenium to follow.

Clearly, the annual resolutions to lose weight and quit smoking won't do for this occasion. No, this time the resolutions should be more profound.

Sure, losing weight and quitting smoking are important—so important that you have vowed to accomplish both every year since they stopped making Edsels.

But this time, there are more important issues facing our community and our society.

Have you noticed that every year at Christmas time the charities suddenly appear out of the blue to beg for donations to help the homeless?

Their pleas were more urgent this season than in past years; that is because the problem is growing worse. It is a year-round problem that deserves year-round attention.

The problems of alcohol and drug abuse have become an epidemic in our society; and there is a new drug, aptly named "crack," that is threatening to tear us apart.

It is the younger generation, America's future, that is falling through that crack, and the problem won't end with the regime of Manuel Noriega.

Just as we had to put behind bars the drug pusher in Panama, we have to deal with the criminals right here on the streets of Cohasset. The drug scene has led to more and more thefts and violent crime than ever. This is another year-round problem that deserves year-round attention.

First Lady Barbara Bush has turned the spotlight on yet another problem that plagues our society—illiteracy.

For whatever reason, there are thousands among us who find it difficult to get through the day because they can't translate the symbols you are reading right now into meaning. This is another problem that demands our attention all year long.

It is easy to concentrate on our individual problems and hope someone else will make a difference.

But to paraphrase President Bush, government can't solve all the problems in our society, so we have to depend on those thousand points of light, those members of our community who get involved to make a difference, to make this a kinder, gentler nation.

What will your resolution be for the new year?

Sen. Golden leads fight against PACs

Letters

To the Editor:

Public confidence in government is abysmally low these days, but at least one politician, Senator William Golden, is attempting to keep that confidence from sliding even lower. Senator Golden is attempting to block a bill (H. 2614) that would increase allowable PAC (political action committee) contributions to the two state parties from $1,000 to $5,000. Increasing PAC contribution limits, even to state parties, would speed up the concentration of power by special interest groups in state government.

In other words, it is a step in the wrong direction. The legislature should be moving to restrict the power of PACs rather than loosening controls already in place.

Let's hope Senator Golden's efforts to prevent the legislature from backsliding on this important issue will be successful: the public's confidence, and patience, with the Massachusetts legislature is not limitless.

Resolutions to recycle in 1990

(This article was written by Alix White of the town's recycling committee. Ed)

This year I'm going to keep my personal expectations simple: I've decided to make my New Year's Resolutions environmental. Here's my list: (I'd love to hear yours. Write your comments, questions and ideas to: CARE Alix White, 224 Jerusalem Rd., Cohasset 02025)

I'm going to reduce my waste this year by eliminating ONE disposable item. Plastic bags will probably be my first choice. They are no longer mandatory at the Recycling/Transfer Facility (RTF) because we dump our non-recyclables inside the blue building. The money I save this year alone will pay for my dump sticker and a trash can. I'll be buying a galvinized steel one because they last longer and are recyclable at the end.

Cohasset Agrees

CARE

to Recycle Everything

I'm going to do a better job recycling my glass at the RTF. I'll take all the lids off my jars, which I have cleaned by soaking overnight. I'll take the lead collars off the wine bottles and the plastic pourers out of the liquor bottles. I know that the few extra minutes this takes me at home will save hours of preparation time at the dump because I'm going to tell my friends and neighbors to do it too,...and do you know what? This will put my tax dollars to better use. Instead of putting money into glass cleaning, why we could buy a compactor or a baler so we could start recycling and baling plastic.

I'm going to support my family and friends as they recycle. My children recycle at school; my husband at work. We often talk about what works and what doesn't. My husband taught our toddler how to recycle six months ago. The baby's orange peel is tomorrow's garden fertilizer. He has been a great motivator for the rest of the family by his example.

And lastly, I have a new strategy when I drop off my recyclables at the RTF: I'm going to read the signs and be patient. I understand that Cohasset (and the rest of the country for that matter) is developing a comprehensive waste management policy. This is no small task, because it means we are going to have to take a profound look at what we buy, use, and throw away. Things seem to change weekly. I know for five years, I dumped my trash into the brown bins, and now it says "Aluminum Only." And maybe next week the newspaper bin will be one bay over. I'll read the signs and be patient. Things will get better because I am participating in recycling and you are too.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Troubleshooting at the RTF: Christmas Trees

Please make sure that your trees are clean of all ornaments, tinsel, nails, and plastic webbing. Place them next to the leaf compost pile.

MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR: The members of the Cohasset Council on Aging would like to extend their best wishes for a happy, healthy, safe & prosperous year as we step into a new decade of the 1990's. As George Bernard Shaw once said: Life is not a "brief candle," it is a splendid torch that I want to make burn as brightly as possible handing it on to future generations. We hope that the 1990's will be a Happy & Healthy Year and may all your "torches burn as brightly as possible." may you all continue to enjoy the many fine programs, services, & activities offered to you by the staff, council members and volunteers at the Center. It is the friendship of those we serve that will continue to be the foundation of our future development at the Council on Aging. Happy New Year from: T. Gerard Keating, Chairman of the CoA, Rev. John J. Keohane, Vice Chairman, Rose Kierce, Secretary, Margaret W. Casey, Treasurer, Ann Abbruzzese, Kathy Brennock, Tony Finegan, Lillian Lincoln, Edward Mulvey. Staff: Kathy Bryanton, Director, Marguerite Rittershaus, Senior Aide, Susan Connolly, Outreach Worker, & Pat Ryan, Shine Coordinator.

SENIOR CITIZEN HOMEOWNERS - BENEFIT FROM HOMESHARING: Who couldn't use a few extra dollars each month? Who wouldn't like to have some help with the vacuuming or snow shoveling? Who wouldn't enjoy sharing a meal once in a while or conversation over tea at the kitchen table? Project Homeshare is a service of the Protestant Social Bureau serving Senior's in the South Shore. The program carefully matches Senior Citizen homeowners with appropriate homeseekers who are willing to do chores, provide rent, and companionship. The homeseekers are generally young working people who are looking for a break for themselves from the high rental market that currently exists. Often homeseekers have been through the "roommate scene" and really would prefer the more stable environment of living with a Senior Citizen.

If you would like to discuss homesharing, call Linda Palmer, Project Homeshare Coordinator, at 773-6203.

Encore production of 'Amahl' set for Jan. 6

The Unicorn Singers will present an encore production of "Three Kings and a Star" at Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham on Saturday, Jan. 6, at 4 p.m.

"The main part of the concert is a fully-staged and costumed production of "Amahl and the Night Visitors," director Margo Eulet said," which features—in addition to the Three Kings, of course—Greg Baker of Marshfield and Jeanne Scammell of Norwell, both of whom received most favorable reviews in the press this month, at the three area churches where we've already performed. The exciting thing for me is the chance to restage the piece in the round at the Abbey, where we'll have much more space; we'll be able to include the shepherds' dance this time, performed by the Abbey Dancers. I hope everyone who wanted to join us in December, but found life too hectic, will plan to come to the Abbey on Twelfth Night.

Tickets should be purchased in advance. They are currently available at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square, at the Abbey Bookstore, or by calling 749-0162 or 834-8971. Those without advance tickets will be admitted at 3:50 p.m.

CHURCH SCHOOL: A very special thank you and applause to the children for our wonderful Christmas play. Everyone did an outstanding job. I would like to recognize our church school teachers for their help — Karen Ford, Lindsay Guild, Elizabeth Laas, Judy Ritts, Cheryl Taylor, Gail Whitehouse and Dot Bates. Also, thanks to Jo Lehr for her help with costumes and all the moms and dads who helped to get the children ready. Our next two weeks will be spent celebrating the holidays with our families and friends. I hope all of you have a very happy and blessed Christmas and New Year.

The response for new toys for the needy has been overwhelming. Five bags of toys are being delivered this week to the Salvation Army in Quincy. Thank you everyone!

If anyone has a costume or script from the play, please return them to the church. Also, we would appreciate any pictures taken of the Christmas play to be put into a church album.

Our next Church School Sunday will be on January 7th when we will celebrate Epiphany and January birthdays in Chapel.

Rebecca Bates-McArthur

Science center sponsors nursery program

New Nature Nursery classes for tots through kindergarten-aged children will begin at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, during the week of Jan. 2.

Designed to develop the children's understanding and respect for the natural world, the six-week Nature Nursery classes involve sensory awareness experiences, outdoor excursions, and creative activities such as crafts, drama, games, and stories.

Parents & Tots, which begins either Wednesday, Jan. 3, 10 - 11:15 a.m., or Friday, Jan. 5,10 - 11:15 a.m., is designed so that parents may rediscover the natural world by sharing time in the outdoors with their preschoolers. Cost: $50 for Science Center members and $65 for non-members. The price includes one parent and one tot. Additional children are $15 for SSNSC members and $20 for non-members. Papooses are free. Class dates: Wednesdays, Jan. 3, 10, 17, 24, 31, Feb. 7, or Fridays, Jan. 5, 12, 19, 26, Feb. 2, 9. Additional Parents & Tots sessions begin Feb. 28 and March 2.

Morning Threes, a six-week program for 3-year-olds, begins Tuesday, Jan. 2, 9:30 - 11:30 a.m. A new Afternoon Threes begins on Wednesday, Jan. 17, 12:30 - 2:30 p.m. The children's natural curiosity of their surroundings will be enhanced as they take short hikes through the winter woods and to the pond and take part in sensory awareness activities related to nature. A snack is provided. Chldren must have turned 3 by Jan. 1,1990. Cost: $60 for SSNSC members and $75 for non-members. Class dates: Tuesdays, Jan. 2, 9, 16, 23, 30, Feb. 6; 9:30 - 11:30 a.m., or Wednesdays, Jan. 17, 24, 31, Feb. 7, 14, 28; 12:30 - 2:30 p.m. An additional morning session begins Feb. 27.

Fours & Fives, which begins Thursday, Jan. 1, 9:30 - 11:30 a.m., stimulates the children's learning curiosity and confidence. In addition to walks and activities, naturalist Barbara Devine will tell nature stories. A snack is provided. Children must have turned 4 by August 1,1989. Cost: $60 for SSNSC members; $75 for non-members. Class dates: Thursdays, Jan. 4, 11, 18, 25, Feb. 1, 8. An additional session begins March 1.

Kindergarten, which begins Monday, Jan. 29, 9 - 11 a.m., teaches children about the basic needs of animals and how they adapt to survive their special habitats. They will explore woodlands, fields, swamps, and ponds. Children must be 5 by Jan. 1, 1990 or be in kindergarten. Cost: $60 for SSNSC members; $75 for non-members. Class dates: Mondays, Jan. 29, Feb. 5,12, 26, March 5,12. An additional session begins March 26.
